MEANING OF TERMS USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case. --
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Men'd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

PART I.—APPOINTMENT OUT OF COURT.

Part I.—Appointment out of Court.

1. Receiver of benefice—Leases of Ecclesiastical Benefices Act, 1571 (c. 20).]—To a declaration in covenant by a sequestrator for rent due under a lease, whereby D., the rector of S., demised to deft. the rectory & parsonage, with the tithes, except the parsonage house, etc., for a term of fourteen years, if the rector should so long live, at the yearly rent of £980, deft. pleaded, that, before the sequestration, D. was indebted to V. & M. in large sums of money, & requested them to give time for payment, & also requested V. to lend him a further sum, which they consented to do, & V. lent the money, upon the terms that D. should execute the indenture in the declaration mentioned, & also another indenture for the purpose of authorising deft. to apply the rent as the agent & for the benefit of V. & M.; that D. did execute the indenture in the declaration mentioned, & also another indenture of the same date, between deft. of the one part, & D. of the other part, whereby, after reciting the demise to deft. of the rectory & parsonage, with the tithes, except the parsonage-house, & also reciting, that, by a deed of even date therewith, D. had appointed deft. his receiver, agent, & attorney, to collect the tithes, rents, etc., except as in the lease excepted, with a declaration that deft. might retain a percentage for his trouble; & it was thereby agreed that he should apply the surplus of the tithes, rents, etc., as D. should direct; D. covenanted with deft., & directed that the surplus of the tithes, rents, etc., should be applied, amongst other purposes, in payment of the debts due to V. & M., with interest, after payment of certain taxes, rates, & outgoings, & the premiums on policies of assurance on the life of D., for the benefit of V. & M. The plea then alleged, that the lease was executed as part of the same transaction; that D. well knew that deft. was the attorney & agent of V., & that the indenture was made by D. with deft. as such agent & attorney, & to enable him to apply the rent reserved by the lease, in the manner above mentioned; that there was due from D. to V. & M. moneys exceeding the damages in the declaration mentioned, & the rent due under the lease; & that deft. had applied the moneys alleged to be due for rent according to the provisions of the second indenture. Deft. pleaded also, that, before the execution of the lease, D. was indebted to V. & M. & others, & in consideration thereof, & of a further sum to be lent by V., & of deft. consenting to be V.'s agent, D. agreed with the deft. & V. to charge the rectory S. with that sum & the others, by making the lease in the declaration mentioned & appointing deft. receiver of the tithes, rents, etc., in order that he might apply the rent reserved by the lease in payment of the moneys so to be charged on the benefice; that the money was advanced by V.; & that D., in pursuance of the agreement, & in order to charge the benefice, executed the lease, & also an indenture appointing deft. receiver: that the lease was part of the same transaction, & was a charging of the benefice contrary to the statute. On special demurrers to these pleas:—Held: the former plea did not show any defeasance of the covenant to pay the rent reserved by the lease; but under the second indenture, there was an equitable assignment or valid appropriation of so much of the rent as was necessary to pay V. & M. their debts; & such assignment was a charge upon the benefice & therefore the lease, which was part of the same transaction, was void under 13 Eliz. c. 20.—WATHEW v. CRAFTS (1851), 6 Exch. 1; 20 L. J. Ex. 257; 16 L. T. O. S. 491; 155 E. R. 428.

2. Receiver of rents—By rule of building society—Interference with action for breach of covenant.]—Covenant by trustees of a benefit building society upon a mtge. security given by one of the members upon an advance made to him out of the funds of the society pursuant to the rules thereof, whereby deft. covenanted to pay money, & observe the rules of the society. The breaches alleged were the non-payment of the instalments of the money advanced, & of other sums due from him for subscriptions & fines.

Plea set out a rule of the society authorising the directors, in case of the member failing to pay or observe the rules, to appoint a person to collect the rents of the mtged. premises, & in case of obstruction by the member to sell the same; & then alleged that deft. had always been willing to permit any person appointed by the directors to collect the rents, but that they had neglected to do so:—Held: this plea was bad, as the right to appoint a receiver did not interfere with the right of action for breach of deft.'s express covenant.—REEVES v. WHITE (1852), 17 Q. B. 995; 21 L. J. Q. B. 169; 18 L. T. O. S. 271; 16 J. P. 118; 16 Jur. 637; 117 E. R. 1562.

SECT. 1.—JURISDICTION

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See, now, Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 45.

3. Effect of Judicature Acts.]—In an action for partition where one of the co-owners is in occupation though not in exclusive occupation of the property the ct. has jurisdiction under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), to appoint a receiver until the hearing.—PORTER v. LOPES (1877), as reported in 7 Ch. D. 358.

4. — Whether jurisdiction enlarged.]—Under that sub-sect. [Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8)] the ct. may & does grant receivers when it never could have done so before. Thus, for instance, it has power to grant a receiver under that sect. where a pltf. has himself the power of obtaining possession at law (COTTON, L.J.).—ANGLO-ITALIAN BANK v. DAVIES (1878), 9 Ch. 5. — —.]—Pltf. in an action, which had been followed by a cross-action, obtained an order in both actions that his costs of the cross-action should be paid by deft. in the action, a married woman, entitled for life, for her separate use, to the dividends of a sum of stock, standing in the names of trustees, who were not parties to either action. Pltf. had endeavoured to obtain a sequestration, but failed from not being able to find deft.'s address so as to serve the subpoena for costs. He then moved the ct. for a receiver, under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8). After service of the notice of motion, but before the motion was heard, the deft. made an affidavit, in which her address was set forth:—Held: the principle of Anglo-Italian Bank v. Davies, No. 4, ante, applied, & pltf. was entitled to a receiver; & order made on the hearing of the motion accordingly.—BRYANT v. BULL, BULL v. BRYANT (1878), 10 Ch. D. 153; 48 L. J. 7. — —.]—before the Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), neither the Ct. of Q. B. nor the Ct. of Ch. could have made the order asked for on such an application as this. Then has the Judicature Act given the Court such a power? The question depends on sect. 25, sub-sect. 8. Those words are very wide, & give to all the Divisions a larger power than the Ct. of Ch. possessed before. The power there given is of the largest kind, unless it is circumscribed in point of time by the words "interlocutory order." But it is said that interlocutory must mean something between action begun & final judgment. I cannot agree. In my opinion "interlocutory order" there means an order other than a final judgment or decree in an action (BRETT, L.J.).—SMITH v. COWELL (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 75; 50 L. J. Q. B. 38; 43 L. 8. — —.]—The ct. has a general power under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), to appoint receivers (CHITTY, J.).—Re CONEY, CONEY v. BENNETT (1885), 29 Ch. D. 993; 54 L. J. Ch. 1130; 52 L. T. 961; 33 W. R. 701.

9. — —.]—(1) Before Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), the Ct. of Ch. exercised a jurisdiction in aid of judgments at law, & that jurisdiction was most frequently exercised in the case of a writ of elegit against land by the appointment of a receiver of the rents & profits of the land, which, when he had received them, were paid into ct. by the receiver, & in course of time were paid out to the judgment creditor in satisfaction pro tanto of his judgment. In this way he obtained payment of the money to which he was entitled under his judgment. There were, no doubt, some other cases in which the Ct. of Ch. would assist a creditor who had issued a fi. fa. against goods under a judgment at law. This was the extent of the jurisdiction of the Ct. of Ch. in aid of a judgment at Law before Jud. Act. That Act, by s. 25 (8), enabled the High Ct. to appoint a receiver "in all cases in which it shall appear to the ct. just or convenient that such order should be made," & it is under the jurisdiction thus conferred that the order now in question has been made (FRY, L.J.).

10. — —.]—A judgment having been obtained in an action to recover money due, the judgment debtor died, leaving a will by which she appointed an exor. The judgment debtor at the time of her death was possessed of certain furniture & chattels, & was carrying on a business. The judgment remaining unsatisfied, the judgment creditors obtained an order at chambers appointing a certain person receiver of the furniture & chattels & of the business, & to get in & receive the debts due to such business, & directing him to pay the balance which should appear due on his accounts in or towards satisfaction of the judgment. By a subsequent order the receiver was empowered to sell the furniture & the assets, property & effects of the business including the book debts:—Held: in the absence of any legal impediment to obtaining execution of the judgment in the ordinary course of law by fi. fa., or attachment of debts, & there being no special circumstances showing it to be just or convenient that a receiver should be appointed, the order for appointment of a receiver was wrongly made, & ought to be rescinded.

PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

PART II.—APPOINTMENT BY COURT.

Was there in this case any ground on which the ct. could properly make an order for the appointment of a receiver? It was said that it could be made under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), which provides that an order may be made for the appointment of a receiver in all cases in which it shall appear to the ct. to be just or convenient that such order should be made. It is said that that sect. gives the ct. power to do what neither a ct. of law nor a ct. of equity could have done before the Act; & the case of Smith v. Cowell, No. 7, ante, seems to show that to be so, but the condition is that it shall appear to the ct. to be just or convenient that the order should be made (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—MANCHESTER & LIVERPOOL DISTRICT BANKING CO. v. PARKINSON (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 173; 58 L. J. Q. B. 262; 37 W. R. 264; 5 T. L. R. 135, C. A.

11. —.]—Under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), the ct. has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver wherever it shall appear just or convenient so to do.—FOXWELL v. VAN GRUTTEN, [1897] 1 Ch. 64; 66 L. J. Ch. 53; 75 L. T. 368; 41 Sol. Jo. 80, C. A.

Annotations:—Consd. John v. John, [1898] 2 Ch. 573. Reid. Marshall v. Charteris, [1920] 1 Ch. 520.

12. —.]—An order was made against debts in an action, who were defaulting trustees, for the payment of money into ct. Defts. having failed to comply with such order, an application was made by plffs. that a writ of attachment might issue against them. At debts' instance, however, the ct. made an order allowing payment by weekly instalments. L., one of debts., had made an affidavit on that occasion stating that all the property he possessed was the furniture in his house. It subsequently transpired that L. had executed bills of sale affecting the furniture; but that plffs., in other proceedings, had successfully disputed the validity of such bills of sale. An application was accordingly made on behalf of plffs. for the appointment of a receiver of the furniture by way of equitable execution. For de ft. L. it was contended that the legal & proper remedy of plffs. was by sequestration, & that the ct. had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver:—Held: although under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 42, r. 4, sequestration was the appropriate remedy yet under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), the ct. had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver if it appeared just or convenient so to do; in the present case, it was just & convenient to appoint a receiver, & an order must be made accordingly.

Every one knows that the construction which the cts. have put upon that sect. of the Act of Parliament is that it very much enlarges the practice of the ct., at any rate with regard to the appointment of a receiver (KAY, J.).—Re WHITELEY, WHITELEY v. LEAROYD (1887), 56 L. T. 846.

13. —.]—An action by a married woman "suing in respect of her separate estate" was at the trial dismissed with costs, to be taxed & "payable out of her separate property, but not otherwise." The only separate property of pltf. consisted of a share coming to her under a will. Before the taxation of debts' costs had been completed by certificate, the trustees of the will being about to distribute their estate & pay pltf. her share, debts. applied for the appointment of a receiver to receive the share & hold it as security for the costs when taxed:—Held: independently of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25, there was jurisdiction to protect by injunction or the appointment of a receiver the fund out of which the costs were payable, & a receiver ought to be appointed.

It [Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25] has not revolutionised the law, but it has enabled the ct. to grant injunctions & receivers in cases in which it used not to do so previously. I will not say where it had no jurisdiction to do so, that would be going too far, but where in practice it never did so, as, for example, in trespass & in the case of a first mtgee. who was out of possession (LINDLEY, M.R.).—CUMMINS v. PERKINS, [1899] 1 Ch. 16; 68 L. J. Ch. 57; 79 L. T. 456; 47 W. R. 214; 15 T. L. R. 76; 43 Sol. Jo. 112, C. A.

14. —.]—The only sect. of Jud. Acts expressly applying to receivers is sect. 25 (8) of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), which provides that a receiver may be appointed in all cases in which it shall appear to the ct. just or convenient that such order should be made (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—*EDWARDS & Co. v. 22. Chancery Division.]—Upon the purchase of a steam vessel, it was agreed among the purchasers that two of them should be the ship's husbands, & should not be removed except on certain grounds specified in the agreement. The ship's husbands thus appointed obtained a charterparty for her, & they privately stipulated for a weekly payment, by way of commission for themselves, in addition to the weekly sum payable by the terms of the charterparty. In the month of May following, the captain, who was a part owner, had a conversation with a clerk of the charterers, in which an observation of the latter led him to suspect that there was some underhand bargain: but the subsequent part of the conversation removed the suspicion. In Oct. he acquired correct knowledge of what had been done, & together with the other part owners, except the ship's husbands, gave the ship's husbands notice of dismissal. The ship's husband denied the right to dismiss them, & they possessed themselves of some of the machinery of the ship, which was at an engineer's for repairs. The other part owners thereupon filed a bill & moved for an injunction to restrain the ship's husbands from interfering with her sailing by detention of the machinery, & for a receiver of the machinery:—Held: the application was not too late; & on it appearing that a decree of possession could not be obtained in the Ct. of Admty., by reason of pltf's. being in possession of the hull, or at all events could not be obtained in time to enable the vessel to fulfil her engagement, the Ct. of Ch. had jurisdiction upon motion to appoint a receiver of the machinery, & to direct possession of it to be delivered to him: & an order was made accordingly, the captain being appointed receiver ad interim.

It was incumbent on defts. trusted & employed as they were to show pltf's. or one of them at least, acquainted, or in default for not having become acquainted, earlier certainly than the month of Oct. last, as the condition of being heard to allege effectually acquiescence, laches, or delay on pltf's. part (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—*BRENAN v. On the same day on which the amended bill was filed, a friendly creditor filed a bill for administration of testator's estate in the Lord Mayor's Ct., within whose jurisdiction the greater part of the assets was, & a decree was taken by consent & a receiver appointed:—Held: owing to the collusive nature of the proceedings in the Lord Mayor's Ct., a receiver should be appointed in the Chancery suit.—*NOTHARD v. S. had been by order of Nov. 24, 1916, appointed receiver & manager of the property & assets of defts. In an affidavit of W., described as a "director of public companies," he stated that for five years past he had known S., of No. 1, R. street, A., "accountant," the proposed receiver & manager, that the accountant had carried on business as such for upwards of five years at No. 1, R street & elsewhere in the City of London, & that S. was a person of respectability & a fit & proper person to be appointed receiver & manager of defts.' property & assets. S. was, according to the evidence, secretary to a political league, & had an office at No. 1, R street for two months past, & there was no evidence that he had carried on business as an accountant. On motion to discharge S. from the receivership:—Held: the appointment had been procured by means of a misleading affidavit, & the receiver must be discharged.

134. —No fresh action necessary.]—Held: so long as the final judgment in an action remains unsatisfied, the action is a "cause or matter pending" within Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (7), & consequently, in an action by creditor against debtor in which pltf. has obtained final judgment the ct. has power, under that sub-sect. in order to satisfy the judgment, to grant equitable execution against deft. by appointing a receiver upon motion in that action, although the writ may not have been indorsed with a claim for a receiver; it being unnecessary in such a case to bring another action for the purpose.

143. Person residing at great distance from property.]—WYNNE v. NEWBOROUGH (LORD), No. 223, post.

144. —.]—The ct. has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver & manager of the undertaking & assets of a co. on the application of the holder of a debenture issued by the co., secured by a floating charge, if the principal money thereby secured has become due before the time when the application is made, although at the date of the issue of the writ no default had been made in payment of interest, the money was not payable, & the security was not in jeopardy.

The holder of a debenture secured by a floating charge on the assets of the co. issued a writ in an action claiming an account, execution of the trusts of the debenture trust deed, realisation of the security, & the appointment of a receiver & manager. At the date of the issue of the writ the principal money secured was not due & no default had been made in payment of interest. Pltf. moved for the appointment of a receiver & manager, but the motion was refused on the ground that the money was not due, no default had been made, & the security was not in jeopardy. After the money became due pltf. served another notice of motion for the appointment of a receiver & manager. This was opposed on the ground that pltf. had no cause of action when he issued his writ & that the action could not be maintained:—Held: pltf. as the holder of a floating security had a right to issue his writ before the money became payable, & the ct. had jurisdiction, inasmuch as the money was now payable, to appoint a receiver & manager.

The management of such an estate as this does not require constant attention, & I do not see why a manager should not do the work as well from Birmingham as any one residing in London (WARRINGTON, J.).—*Re CARSHALTON PARK ESTATE LTD., GRAHAM v. 145. Person having given security to Crown—In respect of particular office.]—(1) When the master has approved one of two persons proposed, the ct. will not disturb the master's choice, unless the person he chooses is shown to be unfit, but does not enter into the more or less of fitness in the competitors (PLUMER, V.-C.).

(2) The master received their proposal of P. as receiver, but did very right in afterwards rejecting him upon finding he was Receiver-General for the county of C.; for having given, as such, security to the Crown, if he were to become indebted to the Crown & to the charity, the Crown might, by its prerogative process, sweep away all his property (PLUMER, V.-C.).

(3) I have not found any one contested case in which the receiver was a nominee only of the master, exclusive of the persons interested; though some of the masters, certainly, say they are entitled, if the parties interested neglect to propose, to make such nomination. This, however, is a special case, & one in which it is not necessary to decide upon the rights of the masters (PLUMER, V.-C.).—A.-G. v. DAY (1817). 2 Madd. 246; 56 E. R. 325.

159. Member of firm of plaintiff's solicitors.]—A., who was a member of a firm of solrs., was appointed exor. of a will, probate of which was contested. Immediately after testator's death A. commenced against his widow an action in the Ch. Div. to administer his estate, the writ in which was by leave of the ct. amended by asking for a receiver pending the litigation in the Probate Div. A.'s firm appeared for both pltf. & deft. in the Ch. action, & an order was made appointing A. to be receiver of the personal estate until the decision of the Probate action, & also to receive the rents of the real estate, the only security ordered being the payment of £2,000 into ct., though the rents were about £3,500 per annum. The widow afterwards obtained an order to change her solrs., & moved to discharge A. from being receiver. She denied having given the firm any authority to appear for her, & it was established, at all events, beyond doubt that she had never sanctioned the appointment of A. as receiver:—Held: the appointment of A. as receiver was improper, for that the appointment of a member of the firm of pltf.'s solrs. to be receiver makes it impossible to secure the proper checking of the receiver's accounts, & a party to the action ought not, except in an extreme case, to be appointed a receiver without the assent of the other party; A. was accordingly discharged from being receiver.—Re LLOYD, ALLEN v. 189. Appointment of single receiver detrimental to property.—On July 24, 1893, a petition was presented for the compulsory winding up of a co. On July 26, 1893, a writ was issued in a debenture-holders' action for the realisation of pltf.' security; & on Aug. 2, 1893, an order was made appointing T., who was an accountant nominated by pltf., to be receiver & manager of the property comprised in the debentures. On the same date an order was made to wind up the co. The debentures comprised (inter alia), the uncalled capital of the co. of which there was a considerable amount. There was also capital which had been called up but not got in. The debenture-holders were fully secured. An application by the official receiver & provisional liquidator was made in the debenture-holders' action, asking that the order of Aug. 2, 1893, appointing the receiver & manager in that action might be discharged, appt. undertaking, if so required by the ct., to keep a separate account on behalf of the debenture-holders of the assets received by him as such provisional liquidator; or in the alternative that appt. might be appointed receiver & manager or receiver in the action, in the place of or jointly with the debenture-holders' receiver & manager. The judge decided that the order of Aug. 2, 1893, appointing the receiver must be discharged, & the official receiver be appointed in his place as receiver on the terms of his giving the undertaking above-mentioned as to keeping a separate account. Pltf. appealed. Upon the hearing of the appeal further evidence was adduced showing that many of the securities included in the debentures could only be realised to advantage by a person in touch with the financial world:—Held: unless there were strong reasons to the contrary, it was extremely undesirable to have two or three persons concerned in the winding up of a co.; but the present was a peculiar case, inasmuch as the further evidence showed that a great many of the assets mortgaged to the debenture-holders were of such a nature that it was difficult to suppose they could be realised satisfactorily by an official of the ct., or by anyone who was not in touch with the financial world; therefore the proper course was to appoint T. receiver of the particular securities referred to in the further evidence, leaving the official receiver to receive the remainder of the assets & the uncalled capital.—*BRITISH LINEN CO. v. Div., an order was obtained for the appointment of a receiver, the indorsement on the brief being, “Usual order for appointment of F. S. as receiver until trial or further order, on pltf.’s undertaking to be answerable for his receipts, without prejudice to prior incumbrancers.” The registrar refused to draw up the order without the receiver giving security. A draft order was then prepared in which the receiver was to pay the costs of the action & of the receivership out of the sums received by him. The form of the draft order was said to be used in the Q. B. Div., & has been sanctioned by CHITTY, J., in the Ch. Div. The order was originally obtained for the purpose of getting a charge on the property, with no intention of the receiver entering into possession or receiving anything, therefore he would have nothing out of which to pay the costs. On motion ex p. for directions, the ct. made an order directing such receiver to be appointed without security, pltf. & the receiver undertaking not to act without the leave of the ct. 287. ———.] —By a judgment for dissolution of a partnership between two agricultural implement makers, deft., one of the partners, was appointed receiver & manager, & undertook to act without salary. He carried on the business very successfully for more than eighteen months, & then purchased it with the sanction of the ct. He was a skilled mechanic, & during his receivership worked in the business as a common workman. In his accounts he claimed to be allowed two premiums of £25 each paid to a guarantee society which had become surety for his duly accounting, & the sum of £2 per week for the manual work done by him as a workman. The master allowed both items. The judge held that a receiver & manager appointed without salary or remuneration was entitled to be allowed in his accounts premiums paid by him to a guarantee society as his surety, & that the two premiums ought therefore to be allowed, but that the £2 per week ought not, for that the receiver, being in a fiduciary position, could not employ himself. The decision on the first point was not appealed from:—Held: the £2 per week ought also to be allowed, for that, although the receiver had acted irregularly & run great risk in not asking for wages at the time of his appointment, he was entitled to be paid for services which had proved beneficial to the estate, & which it was no part of his duty as receiver & manager to perform.—HARRIS v. 293. No one available for appointment.]—In order to form a contract by letter, of which the ct. will decree a specific performance, nothing more is necessary than that the amount & nature of the consideration to be paid on one side, & received on the other, should be ascertained, together with a reasonable description of the subject matter of the contract. It is the clearly established doctrine that the ct. will carry into execution an agreement so constituted. It is not necessary to be satisfied that the parties actually meant the same thing, provided a clear assent be given to a certain proposition arising de facto out of the terms of the correspondence.

I cannot grant a receiver of this property; because if this be a binding contract, whom should I appoint to receive it, & if it be not a binding contract, I have no right to appoint a receiver (LORD ELDON, C.).—KENNEDY v. LEE (1817), 3 Mer. 441; 36 E. R. 170, L. C.

296. ————]—An application was made to obtain maintenance for two infants entitled to successive estates tail in remainder after the death of their father under a scheme whereby a certain yearly sum was to be paid until the first of the children attained twenty-one, in consideration of a large sum of money to be paid to the lender, & to be charged, as well as the premium of a policy to be taken out by the lender to cover the contingency of both children dying under twenty-one, upon their interests in remainder:—Held: under Judgment Act, 1864 (c. 112), the ct. could only order a sale & conveyance of the debtor's interest in land after the land had been delivered in execution, but in this case, owing to the reversionary character of the interests, the only mode of execution was the appointment of a receiver; & there being nothing for him to receive, the ct. would not invent some theoretical execution for

Taking into consideration the evidence respecting the incapacity of this testator, the manner in which the will was obtained, the sort of surprise by which the probate was acquired, & the danger of the property; & grounding myself on the jurisdiction in this ct., to protect property pending a liquidation in another ct., I am of opinion that this is a fit case for a receiver & an injunction (LEACH, V.-C.).—RUTHERFORD v. (2) Where no probate or administration has been granted it is of course to appoint a receiver, pending a bonâ fide litigation in the Ecclesiastical Ct., to determine the right to probate or administration, unless a special case can be made for refusing such appointment.

(3) The fact that the litigation in the Ecclesiastical Ct. is on the question of which of two alleged wills shall be admitted to probate, & that deft. in the suit in equity is named exor. in both wills, is not a ground for refusing to appoint a receiver.—*RENDALL v. 324. — Pending appeal to Privy Council—No one in position to protect estate in interim.]—An appeal was pending in the Privy Council from a sentence of the Ecclesiastical Ct. rejecting the testamentary papers of deceased declaring an intestacy; limited administration pendente lite had ceased by the sentence, & an inhibition had issued from the Privy Council which inhibited the Ecclesiastical Ct. proceeding. There being no person in the meantime authorised to protect & collect the estate :—Held : (1) these circumstances, of themselves alone, justified the appointment of a receiver by this ct.; (2) a receiver might in such case be granted on the application of a party applt., who, assuming the decision of the Ecclesiastical Ct. to be correct, had no interest in the estate of deceased; (3) the circumstance of there being no person in whose name an action might be brought to recover the property is not a sufficient objection to the appointment of a receiver.

329. — After appointment of administrator pendente lite.]—Where, after proceedings had been commenced in the Probate Ct. to test the validity of a will, a bill was filed for a receiver of alleged testator's personal estate, & a motion made for a receiver, which motion stood over, & during this pendency the Ct. of Probate appointed an administrator pendente lite, under Court of Probate Act, 1857 (c. 77), s. 70 :—Held : it was the intention of the legislature to extend the powers of an administrator pendente lite appointed by the Ct. of Probate, & such administrator having the same power of protecting the property as a receiver, the ct. refused to appoint a receiver.—*VERET v. Pltf., who claimed to be heir-at-law & one of the next of kin of the intestate, commenced proceedings in ejectment for the recovery of the real estate, & also took proceedings in the Probate Ct. for a recall of the letters of administration, & then filed a bill for the appointment of a receiver pending the litigation. One of the co-heiresses demurred to the whole bill; the other demurred, without answering, to so much of the bill as sought relief in respect of the real estate :—Held : both demurrers were good : the partial demurrer, because the ct. has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver in a simple case of contested heirship; & the demurrer to the whole bill, on the ground that where administration has been granted the ct. will not exercise its jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of personal estate, unless a special case is made, a rule which will be strictly enforced, since Court of Probate Act, 1857 (c. 77), enables the Ct. of Probate to appoint an

It having appeared that B. had, during his acting in the trust, been guilty of improvident expenditure, & among other things, had converted farming lands into a racecourse:—Held: although no corrupt intention appeared to have prompted B. in committing wilful waste, but he had acted solely under a mistaken notion of his duties of a trustee, yet his conduct was quite sufficient to justify the ct. in appointing a receiver.—*WHITEHEAD v. Property bequeathed on implied trusts.—[.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his real & personal estate to his widow, her heirs, exors. & administrators, “having a perfect confidence she will act up to those views which I have communicated to her, in the ultimate disposal of my property after her decease.” Testator's widow died intestate. The bill alleged that testator had bequeathed the residue of his property to his wife, on the faith of a promise that she would dispose of his property in favour of pltf.s., who were natural children of testator. The ct., on motion supported by affidavits verifying the allegation, granted a receiver of the real estates against their heir & second husband of the widow.

361. Grant of administration disputed—No fraud or maladministration charged.—(1) The pendency of a suit in the Ecclesiastical Ct. to have a probate or letters of administration recalled, is not of itself a sufficient ground to induce the ct. to grant an injunction & receiver against the personal representative.

(2) The question is, whether a receiver should be appointed, where pltf. made no claim as widow at the time the administration was granted; nor does it appear that at that time she had any intention to make such a claim. . . . There is no danger of maladministration of the estate. The administration is properly granted, & no case has been made against debts, of any intention to misapply the funds. . . . This is not the same sort of case as where the right to administration is in contest; but it is a person claiming adversely to the present legal title. The administrators are the persons legally authorised to get in the outstanding personal estate of the intestate. . . . Debts, have properly consented at once to bring in the funds, as in the ordinary case of a disputed title. The order must be discharged (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*CONNOR v. Danger of assets being taken outside jurisdiction.—[.]—A person holding by the warrant of her Majesty the office of Judicial Assessor to the native princes, & being also Chief Judge of her Majesty's dominions on the Gold Coast of Africa, took possession of the personal effects of a British subject, who died intestate, domiciled at Cape Coast Town, in Africa, & claimed to be the official administrator of these assets, by usage, in his capacity of Judicial Assessor, & as such, to be entitled to 7½ per cent. commission upon them. He afterwards transmitted part of the assets to this country to be sold, & the proceeds carried to the account of intestate's estate, & came to this country himself on leave of absence for a short time. The father of intestate, being his sole next of kin, obtained letters of administration to him in England, & filed his bill against the Judicial Assessor for administration, & for a receiver. & upon motion for a receiver in the suit:—Held:

Two of the exors. of the will had decided to renounce, & the third had not yet made up his mind whether he would act or not. Pltf. commenced an administration action & applied for a receiver, alleging that there was danger to the assets:—Held: without deciding whether the ct. has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver pending probate, inasmuch as testator's widow, who was the proper person to have administration in case none of the exors. acted, was not represented, & as the assets were not, in the opinion of the ct., in any danger, the application must be refused.—*Re HENDERSON, MACLEOD v. In 1817, 43 Geo. 3, c. 84, was repealed, & the effect of such repeal was to revive 13 Eliz. c. 20. In 1811 an incumbent duly charged his then present benefice with an annuity, & covenanted that, if he should afterwards be preferred to any other benefice, he would fully charge the same with the annuity; & that in the meantime the same should be charged and chargeable with the annuity. In 1814, the incumbent was preferred to another benefice, but no legal charge upon it was executed until the year 1818:—Held: the deed of 1811 constituted a good equitable charge, which attached upon the new benefice as soon as it was acquired. 391. Covenant in deed of arrangement by debtor.—Debtor executed an inspectorship deed for the benefit of his creditors, which was duly assented to & registered under Bkpcy. Act, 1861 (c. 134). The deed contained the usual covenants. The debtor having broken these covenants, & having refused to submit to the control of the inspectors, & having collected & applied to his own use assets which were subject to the provisions of the deed, the inspectors filed a bill praying for the appointment of a receiver to get in the outstanding estate of debtor subject to the deed. The judge appointed a receiver accordingly, on the undertaking of pl'tfs. to submit to any order

393. Money received in ambiguous capacity.]—A. had acted in some measure as the agent of both parties, in negotiating a loan, by way of annuity secured on a rentcharge for the life of the grantor, & afterwards in paying the annuity, & keeping up a policy of insurance. A. received from the grantor a sum of money for the repurchase of the annuity, & persuaded the grantee to execute a re-assignment without signing any receipt for the consideration money, which re-assignment was to be kept by A. until it should be paid, A. falsely representing, that the grantor wished to delay the payment for some time; & without the grantor's knowledge, the annuity was paid regularly to the annuitant by A. until he died insolvent:—Held: the question in what character A. received the money for repurchasing the annuity was sufficiently doubtful to warrant the appointment of a receiver on motion.—VANDELEUR v. BLAGRAVE (1838), 2 Jur. 176.

394. By mortgagee—Against judgment creditor in possession—Fraud & collusion not proved.]—The bill, stating the title of plffs. as equitable mtgees. by deposit of deeds, & that certain persons represented by defts. had got possession of the mtged. estates under elegits sued out by them in concert with the mtgor., upon judgments obtained subsequently to the date of the equitable mtge., in the names of those parties, but at the instance of the mtgor., & for fictitious debts, prayed that plffs. might be declared entitled as equitable mtgees. to priority over the elegits & the judgments so obtained, & that such judgments & elegits might be declared fraudulent & void as against plffs., & that the mtge. security might be realised, & the proceeds paid to plffs. towards satisfaction of their debt, & that a receiver might, in the meantime, be appointed, & defts. restrained from receiving the rents of the mtged. premises, & also from permitting the mtgor. to receive them. An order for a receiver, which had been made by the Vice-Chancellor, was discharged, upon appeal, by the Lord Chancellor, his Lordship being of opinion that the charges of fraud & collusion were not made out against the parties who had obtained possession under the elegits, & that the question whether plffs. were entitled to priority over defts., independently of these charges, was not open to them in the present state of the record, inasmuch as it was clear, from the frame of the bill, that the claim of plffs. did not profess to be founded upon any such ground.—WHITWORTH v. GAUGAIN (1841), Cr. & Ph. 325; 10 L. J. Ch. 317; 5 Jur. 523; 41 E. R. 515, L. C.

397. As against surety—Surety in ignorance of circumstances affecting debt—Duty of creditor to make inquiries.]—(1) It is a matter of discretion for the Ct. of Ch. whether it will or will not interfere by interim order respecting the property of a litigant. If the property is in medio, in the actual enjoyment of no one, the ct. will interfere for the benefit of all concerned. When a married woman, having separate estate, is a party to a suit, the interference will be accorded or refused according to the circumstances of the case.

(2) Where the ct. summarily interferes against the legal possession, it has a right to expect plff. to proceed with the most complete & honest diligence to obtain a decree. Delay in his proceedings constitutes an objection to the proposed interference.

(3) Though a creditor may not, in every case, be bound to inquire into the circumstances under which a third person becomes surety to him, he is so when the dealings between the parties are such as to lead to a suspicion of fraud.

A creditor of a partnership, consisting of two persons, had received from one of them joint & several promissory notes, accepted by himself & a third party, a married woman, having separate estate. The partnership was afterwards dissolved by deeds, by virtue of which the second partner, on giving up certain title deeds, was altogether exonerated from liability to the creditor, who, however, expressly reserved his rights on all notes & other securities which he held in his hands at the time of the execution of these deeds. These transactions were wholly unknown to the third party, who was the surety on the notes. There were various circumstances which might have awakened the suspicion of creditor, & he had not taken any steps to inform the surety as the notes

Testator executed two wills, one in 1815 & the other in 1818. Pltf. claimed as devisee under the former will, & impugned the validity of the latter will on the ground of the mental incapacity of testator; deft. was in possession under the latter will, which he had established against the heir at law in a suit to which pltf. was not a party. The legal estate being outstanding, pltf. filed his bill in this ct. to remove the impediments to his proceeding at law to set aside the will of 1818. of the houses, with reversion to himself in fee. In Jan. 1816, pltf. & his wife filed a bill against A.'s widow, who was in possession of the houses, to have the houses conveyed to pltf.'s wife, conformably to the representation in the letter, & for a receiver, & an injunction to stay proceedings at law. An injunction was granted, & the widow having put in her answer, the injunction was, in Jan. 1818, continued. On the same day pltf. obtained an order to amend, but did not act upon it, or take any further proceedings, till May, 1820. In Apr. 1818, the widow mortgaged the houses for five hundred years to H., & in May, 1819, she sold an annuity to M. & secured it by a conveyance of the houses to trustees in fee; & in May, 1819, she sold & conveyed the houses, subject to the mtge. & annuity, to W. in fee. Neither H., W. nor M. had then any notice of the suit, or of pltf.'s claim. In Jan. 1820, at which time M. had notice, the houses were purchased by M. & conveyed to him by H. & W. In May, 1820, the bill was amended. The widow having gone abroad without answering the amended bill, a decree was taken pro confesso against her in Nov. 1822. In Dec. following, pltf. had notice of the conveyance to M. but did not make him a party to the suit, & opposed his attending the master upon the inquiries directed by the decree. In Mar. 1831, pltf. filed a bill against M. stating the proceedings in the original suit, & praying that M. might be decreed to convey the houses to pltf.'s wife, & for a receiver. M. put in his answer, & relied on the delay in the proceedings of the original suit, the decree having been taken pro confesso, the want of notice in H. & W., & in himself, when he purchased the annuity, & on pltf. not having made him a party to that suit; but the ct., on motion, granted a receiver.—*LONDON v. 423. — —.]—A ship belonging to defts., registered in the port of London, sustained serious damage on her voyage to New Zealand, & on her arrival there was surveyed & pronounced not seaworthy. The master was unable, either by loan or bottomry, to raise money for her repair, & he at length sold the ship to pltf.s, & on receiving payment of the purchase-money by a bill of exchange in London, executed to them a bill of sale of the ship. Pltf.s repaired the ship & sent her to England with a cargo. Defts. refused to ratify the sale or consent to the registry of the ship in pltf.s' names, & on the arrival of the ship in the port of London, defts. put several men on board to take possession of the ship & cargo for them. Pltf.s thereupon applied for an injunction to restrain defts. from interfering with the ship, or removing her out of the jurisdiction, & for a manager & receiver of the ship & cargo:—Held: (1) pltf.s. had no equitable, as distinct from a legal, title to the ship, & inasmuch as their title, if they acquired any, was a purely legal one, & the case of interference, if wrongful, was, therefore, a mere trespass, the ct. would not interfere in favour of pltf.s. by injunction; (2) pltf.s., according to the case made on the motion, if they failed at the hearing to establish their right to the ship, would be entitled to equitable relief in respect of the bill of exchange for the purchase-money; & they were entitled to have the trial of the legal right put in a course for determination, & to have the property protected in the meantime.—*RIDGWAY v. 426. After decree in partition action—To preserve rents & profits—Pending appeal.]—In a suit for determining the right as between pltf. & deft. to certain estates, a decree was made declaring the right of pltf. & one of defts. to two-thirds; owing to a previous partition suit, the decree contained no specific direction that deft. against whom the decree was should deliver up possession. The bill did not pray nor make a case for a receiver, nor did the decree appoint a receiver. After the decree, from which an appeal was pending, deft. did not deliver possession; there were charges & outgoings to be provided for, & owing to disputes between the parties, the tenants refused to pay their rents either to pltf. or to defts.

A receiver was appointed of the lands let to tenants, but not of the mansion house & land in the personal occupation of deft., the ct. expressly refusing to make the appointment of a receiver ancillary to the exclusion of deft. from possession & granting it only to provide for the due receipt of the rents, & providing for the preservation of the property, & the payment of liabilities & outgoings.—WRIGHT v. VERNON (1855), 3 Drew. 112; 61 E. R. 845.

427. Dispute between grantees of rentcharges—Property untenanted.]—In a suit on behalf of a number of grantees of rentcharges on the same property, who had powers of distress & entry, a receiver was appointed to protect the property pending the litigation, it being untenanted, & it being impossible to obtain tenants, for want of protection against the powers of the several grantees of the rentcharges.—*WHITE v. The ct. will, also, under the same circumstances, appoint a receiver pendente lite of the rents of real estate, if neither the devisee nor the heir-at-law is in actual possession.—*PARKIN v. 429. Effect on other incumbrancers on estate.]—

A. having charged his estates by mtges. & other incumbrances to a very large amount, appointed B. to be his steward or receiver of all his estates with verbal directions to pay the interest to the mtgees., & to pay over the surplus of the rents to himself. On the making a fifth mtge. A. by deed appointed B. receiver of the estates comprised in that mtge. in trust to keep down the interest of that mtge., & to pay over the residue of the rents to himself. A. afterwards granted several annuities, which he charged on all the mtged. premises, & demised the same to a trustee for securing the said annuities in manner therein mentioned, & subject thereto to permit A. to receive the surplus for his own benefit. At the time of granting these annuities A. represented the estates to be free from all incumbrances. On a bill filed by the annuitants against A. & B., without making any of the prior incumbrancers parties, the ct. will restrain B. from paying over any part of the rents to A. & will appoint a receiver, without prejudice to the prior mtgees. taking possession.—DALMER v. I entertain no doubt, that the owner of an estate may enter into such an arrangement or contract with a steward or other person to receive the rents of his property, which will be binding not only on the owner but on any person to whom the owner may afterwards convey that property, with notice of the contract (ROMILLY, M.R.).—FORD v. A. was a feme sole at the date of testator's will, & of his death. She was also a feme sole at the date of testatrix's will, but she was married at the death of testatrix. A. joined with her husband in granting annuities to pltf., charged upon the estates bequeathed by testator, & the estates devised by testatrix. On the insolvency of the husband, a bill was filed by pltf. to have the annuities paid out of the estates, & upon motion for an injunction & receiver, the ct. granted the motion as to the estates devised by testator, but not as to those devised by testatrix, on the ground that the rents of the former estates ought to be secured till the question in the cause could be determined, which could not be decided on an interlocutory motion.—TULLETT v. 439. —Estate of sufficient security.]—Testator by his will bequeathed certain leaseholds to deft., upon condition that he paid thereout, or out of the rents thereof, an annuity of £70, by half-yearly payments, to pltf. during his life. The leaseholds were of amply sufficient value to secure payment of the annuity. The annuity had been regularly paid since the death of testator. One half-yearly payment of the annuity being in arrear, the annuitant filed his bill to enforce payment thereof, & for the appointment of a receiver:—Held: the annuity being charged on land of amply sufficient value to secure payment thereof, with a power of distress superadded by Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), pltf. was not entitled to have a receiver appointed, & bill dismissed with costs.

There might be an annuity charged on property the rents of which would not be sufficient to pay the amount due, then I should have thought that a receiver might be necessary. Or where an annuity has been long in arrear, & a distress would not enable the annuitant to raise the amount due, in that case a receiver might be necessary (MALINS, V.-C.).—KELSEY v. 448. Tenant for life of renewable leaseholds—Allowing leases to expire—Receiver to provide fund for renewal.]—Testator devised a freehold estate to A. for life, with remainder to his first & other sons in tail male; & he directed that a church lease which he held for a term of twenty-one years, renewable every seventh year, should be regularly renewed by the persons successively possessing the freehold estate under his will, & be enjoyed together with the same. A. omitted to renew in proper time, & the lease expired in 1798. A.'s eldest son came of age in 1800, & thereupon joined with his father in suffering a recovery of the freehold estate. A. died in 1830, & in 1831 the son filed his bill, praying compensation for the loss of the lease, out of his father's assets:—Held: there was no such laches or acquiescence on the part of pltf., as to debar him of his equitable remedy.

The ct. upon reasonable grounds being shown by the threats or acts of the tenant for life, might have granted a receiver, in order to provide a fund for renewal, or might possibly have compelled him to renew; or, if he had already suffered the lease to expire, the application might have been granted on that default for a receiver; though in such a case it could only have been to provide a fund for compensation (LORD BROUGHAM, C.)—*BENNETT v. She, after her husband's death, fraudulently obtained a transfer of the stock, & sold it out; &, afterwards, she assigned her life interest in the estates in W., & the rentcharge to A., for valuable consideration, but with notice of the fraud:—Held: the rents of the estates in W., & the rentcharge, were liable to be applied to replace the stock, & a receiver of them was granted before answer.—*WOODYATT v. 457. — —.]—By London, Chatham & Dover Railway (Arbitration) Act, 1869 (c. cxvi), s. 17, amongst the matters referred to the arbitrators were, the legal & equitable rights & interests of cos. whose lines were worked by the co., the rights of any persons having or claiming any lien upon any lands in which the co. were interested, & all matters in question in all suits in which the co. were parties; & it was enacted that the powers of the arbitrators should extend to ascertain & determine the matters aforesaid. It was also enacted, sect. 18, that the Crystal Palace Railway should be "worked & maintained" by the co. as an integral part of the co.'s undertaking; that certain half-yearly payments should be made to the Crystal Palace Railway co., & that such payments, & the property of the Crystal Palace Railway co., should be subject, "as respected creditors of that co., to the same rights & remedies as could now be enforced against the tolls & property of that co."

At this date the London, Chatham & Dover Railway co. were working the Crystal Palace Railway line under a resolution of their own directors, without any lease or agreement; & a suit was pending against both cos. by an unpaid vendor of lands of which possession had been taken by the Crystal Palace Railway company in 1864 & 1865, & upon part of which the line had been constructed. In this suit the London, Chatham & Dover Railway co., who were made co-defts. by amendment, had answered, pleading that they were unnecessary parties; but at the hearing, in Mar. 1868, it was declared that, upon default of payment within one month by the Crystal Palace Railway co. of what should be certified to be due, pltf's. would be entitled to a lien on the lands against both cos. Default was made by the Crystal Palace Railway co., & shortly afterwards proceedings in the suit were, by the arbitrator's first award, stayed as against the London, Chatham & Dover Railway co. only. Upon petition by pltf's., praying that the amount due under the above order for principal, interest, & costs might be raised by a sale of the lands, & in the meantime for an injunction & receiver, & other relief:—Held: London, Chatham & Dover Railway (Arbitration) Act, 1869 (c. cxvi), did not interfere with the rights of petitioners; & order made as prayed.—ST. GERMAN'S (EARL) v. CRYSTAL PALACE RY. CO. (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 568; 24 L. T. 288; 19 W. R. 584.

458. — —.]—A. who was the owner of leasehold premises, on which the business of a private hotel was carried on, & furniture, entered into a contract for the sale of such lease, furniture, & the goodwill of the business to B. A portion of the purchase-money remained unpaid, & a draft assignment of the lease & mtge. to secure the unpaid purchase money were prepared, but never executed. In an action for specific performance of the contract, a motion was made for a receiver & manager of the premises, furniture & business:—Held: such a receiver & manager

PART II. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 2.—N. m. As against purchaser.]—Under Land Titles Act, s. 62 (3), the vendor cannot obtain the appointment of a receiver in aid of execution so long as execution cannot issue, but he may obtain the appointment of a receiver to collect the rents & profits of the land.—CANADIAN MORTGAGE INVEST. [1922]

n. — Vendor suing for specific performance.]—A vendor suing for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land, under which the purchaser was in possession & which contained no provision for attornment or distress held not entitled before judgment to a receiver order with respect to a crop which had been cut & was lying on the ground at the time might be appointed with power to take possession & carry on the business, but not to include any chattels other than those which would pass by an assignment of the lease.—POOLE v. DOWNES (1897), 76 L. T. 110.

459. — Pending action to enforce lien—Purchaser admitting liability.—Where the unpaid vendor of land taken by a railway co. has commenced an action against the co. to enforce his lien, the ct. will not grant an injunction or a receiver against the co. before judgment has been obtained in the action, even though the co. admit their liability.—LATIMER v. AYLESBURY & BUCKINGHAM RY. Co. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 385; 39 L. T. 460; 27 W. R. 141, C. A.

460. — Pending action for rescission.—An agreement for the sale of a leasehold interest in land provided that possession should be given to the purchaser on payment of a specified part of the purchase money he undertaking to pay the rent & other outgoings & also on taking possession, paying to the vendor the cost of a new fence. The specified part of the purchase-money having been paid, the purchaser was let into possession, but he failed to pay the cost of the fence & did not pay the rent & taxes, so that the vendor had to pay them in order to prevent the forfeiture of the lease. The vendor commenced an action for rescission of the agreement on the ground that he had been induced to enter into it by misrepresentation, & moved in the action for an order on deft. to deliver up possession of the land in default of his making the payments due under the agreement:—Held: the motion, seeking in effect the specific performance of some of the terms of the agreement was inconsistent with the claim for rescission made by the writ, & must therefore be refused.

But a receiver was appointed for the purpose of securing the payments in question.—COOK v. ANDREWS, [1897] 1 Ch. 266; 66 L. J. Ch. 137; 76 L. T. 16.

465. Second receiver to obtain surplus—After satisfaction of claims in former proceedings.—Where an unpaid vendor to a railway co. has obtained an order in a suit, declaring his lien, but the co. have failed to pay, an order for sale by public auction or private contract, will be made on petition; & where a receiver has already been appointed in another suit against the same co., liberty will be given to apply to appoint another receiver without prejudice to the former appointment, & to obtain any surplus after satisfying all claims in such other suit.—WARE v. AYLESBURY & BUCKINGHAM RY. Co. (1873), 28 L. T. 893; 21 W. R. 819, L. C.

467. —.—A co. issued a series of debentures, each of which contained a condition that, at any time after the principal moneys thereby secured should have become payable, the L. corp., one of the debenture holders, might by writing appoint a receiver of all or any part of the property thereby charged. In exercise of this power the corp., who were also shareholders in the co., appointed a receiver:—Held: the corp. were trustees of this power on behalf of all the debenture holders, & were bound to exercise it in their interest alone, & as it was shown that the appointment had been made in the interest of the shareholders, & not in that of the debenture holders, the ct. had jurisdiction to interfere to carry out the trust & accordingly to appoint its own receiver.—*Re MASKELYNE BRITISH TYPEWRITER, LTD., STUART v. 468. Appointment by court—Application by creditors for substitution of their nominee—Proof of status as creditors.—When a debtor has filed a liquidation petition & a receiver has been appointed by the ct., the persons who are named in debtor's list of creditors cannot have their nominee appointed receiver, in substitution for the receiver appointed by the ct., till they have established their status as creditors by proving their debts & holding a first meeting of creditors.—*Re CHESTERS, Ex p. 469. Priority as between respective receivers—Receiver in Chancery action & in Bankruptcy.—In an action to enforce an agreement by B. an innkeeper to give a bill of sale of his furniture & effects, A. obtained the appointment of a receiver, who entered into possession on Mar. 16, 1876, & served the customers. During the night B. absconded, & next day Mar. 17, filed a liquidation petition, under which a receiver was appointed in bkpcy. The two receivers remained in joint possession:—Held: the case did not fall within Bills of Sale Act, 1854, c. 36, & the possession of A.'s receiver had taken the goods out of the order & disposition of B. at the time of his bkpcy.; & accordingly the title of A. prevailed over that of B.'s trustee in bkpcy.—*TAYLOR v. 474. Pending action in foreign court—Receiver of policy moneys on ships.]—Pltfs. were a co. of ship owners on whose behalf deft., as their broker, had effected policies. Pltfs. had instituted proceedings in a competent ct. in Genoa against deft. for an account, to which suit deft. had appeared. Before final decree in the foreign ct., deft. commenced actions in England against the insurers upon one of the policies which had resulted in a loss:—Held: it was competent for pltfs. to file a bill to restrain the action & to have a receiver of the policy moneys pending the foreign litigation.—*TRANSATLANTIC CO. v. P. & others, a firm carrying on business at Liverpool, in pursuance of an agreement between the Confederate Govt. & defts., whereby defts. were entitled out of the proceeds of the cotton to recoup themselves certain charges & expenses incurred by them under the provisions of the same agreement. The Confederate Govt. having been dissolved, & the Confederate States having submitted to the authority of the United States Govt., the latter govt. filed a bill praying to have the cotton, which had arrived at Liverpool, delivered up to them, & for an injunction & receiver. It appeared by the evidence that defts. had, under the agreement, a lien upon the cotton to the extent of at least £20,000. Deft. P. was appointed receiver, with power to sell the cotton; but he was required to give security for its value ultra the £20,000, the amount of defts.' lien.—*U.S.A. v. 483. Trade union funds—Misapplication of moneys.]—The rules of a trade union provided, (inter alia), that in the event of members being engaged in a strike or lockout officially recognised by the union, the union should pay dispute pay of 12s. a week & 2s. for each child under fourteen. A trade dispute, having arisen, was officially recognised as from Feb. 16, 1918. The union authorised the members on strike to sell to those still at work tickets at 2s. each for the benefit of the strikers. The proceeds of these tickets, amounting to a very large sum, were paid into the general account of the union & applied in payment of the dispute pay prescribed by the rules & partly in extra payments. In an action by three members of the union suing in a representative capacity on behalf of the members of their respective branches, claiming (a) a declaration that the ticket moneys could not be applied in discharge of the liability to pay dispute pay, but were held by the union, subject to certain deductions for commission & expenses, for the sole benefit of members subject to the dispute, & (b) other relief:—Held: (1) the payments were purely voluntary payments made for a particular purpose & not applicable to any other purpose, such as the payment of dispute pay, which was a liability arising under the rules; (2) plffs. were entitled to the declaration claimed as to the application of the proceeds & to an injunction to restrain the further misapplication thereof & if necessary to an account of the expenses properly to be deducted therefrom; (3) with regard to moneys already misapplied the ct. was precluded by Trade Union Act, 1871 (c. 31), s. 4, from granting relief either by the appointment of a receiver or by ordering an account.—*SANSOM v. The trustees were trustees of a will, by which they were directed to set apart & invest the sum in question, & were authorised at their absolute discretion from time to time & at such time or times as they should think proper to pay or apply the whole or any part of the income to or for the benefit of judgment debtor in such a manner in all respects as they should think proper. The trustees applied for a prohibition:—Held: as it depended on the discretion of the trustees whether anything should be paid to judgment debtor the receiver could not be entitled to receive the interest in their hands & an order for payment could not be made against the trustees who were strangers to the action, & therefore the county ct. judge had exceeded his jurisdiction & the proper remedy was by prohibition.—*R. v. Pltfs. brought an action against the firm to enforce their security, which they registered as a lis pendens, & obtained an injunction & a receiver; but no notice of the action was given to debtors. The firm then assigned the same book debts to a banking co., who gave notice of their security to debtors. The banking co. had no notice of the action or of the order for an injunction & a receiver, unless the registration of the lis pendens amounted to constructive notice:—Held: the banking co. were not affected with notice by the registration of the lis pendens, & their security had priority over that of pltf.

505. Profits of canonry.]—A canon of Windsor granted the canonry & the profits, etc., to pltf., to secure a sum of money. So far as it appeared on an interlocutory, application, the estates were vested in the corpn., & the canon was entitled to an aliquot share of the profits. There was no cure of souls, & the only duties were residence within the castle, & attendance in the chapel twenty-one days a year. Upon this state of circumstances:—Held: the security was valid, & a receiver of the profits was appointed.—GRENFELL v. WINDSOR (DEAN & CANONS) (1840), 2 Beav. 544; 48 E. R. 1292.

508. — —.]—A receiver was appointed by the ct. in a suit by judgment creditor of a beneficed clergyman to enforce his judgment as a charge upon the living, the Vice-Chancellor who appointed the receiver, considering that the judgment was a charge. Another judgment creditor then issued a sequestration against the same living, & a motion being made in the cause for his committal for contempt, another Vice-Chancellor refused to make any order, but directed him to pay the costs, & he undertook to deal with the sequestration as the ct. should direct. At the hearing, the same Vice-Chancellor felt bound by the opinion expressed on the occasion of the appointment of the receiver, & decided accordingly:—Held: a receiver ought not to have been appointed; & judgment creditor who had issued a sequestration had a priority of charge, notwithstanding any contempt he might have committed by interfering when a receiver was appointed.—*HAWKINS v. k. Town clerk.]—The pension payable to a retired town clerk, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 79, is not assignable or chargeable with debts, & an order for a receiver over same will be dis-delivering otherwise than to pltf's., & the appointment of a receiver. Def'ts., who claimed the right to the cargoes, after the issue of the writ took possession of them under a consent order by which it was agreed that the receipt of the cargoes by def'ts. should be "without prejudice to any question between the parties, & that they would keep separate accounts of their expenditure & receipts in respect of the cargoes, & abide by any order the ct. should make with respect to the cargoes." An order for the appointment of a receiver was afterwards made, & to the receiver when appointed def'ts. delivered the unsold cargoes & the proceeds of the cargoes they had sold. The action was defended on the ground that the cargoes were not the property of pltf's. At the hearing the judge made a decree declaring that pltf's. were entitled to the cargoes, & that def'ts. were not entitled to reimbursement of any expenses, & directing an inquiry "what damages had been sustained by pltf's. by reason of the detention of the cargoes by def'ts." On appeal this House having regard to the terms of the consent order varied the decree by declaring that def'ts. were entitled to receive out of the proceeds of the cargoes payment of all sums properly disbursed by them on account of freight & landing charges, & otherwise affirmed the decree. Upon the inquiry as to damages the chief clerk found that the detention began on the arrival of the cargoes respectively at their ports of discharge, & computing the damages on the principle that the illegal detention continued until the decree of the judge allowed interest at 5 per cent. upon the proceeds of the cargoes until the decree, less the interest gained in ct., & paid in by the receiver. Upon a summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate:—Held: (1) the consent order did not convert an unlawful into lawful detention, but after the order for the appointment of a receiver the cargoes were in the possession of the ct. & any damages suffered by pltf's. were due to the law's delay & not to any wrongful act of def'ts; (2) interest at 5 per cent. ought therefore to be allowed until the order for the appointment of a receiver but not after.—*PERUVIAN GUANO CO., LTD. v. In Nov. following, but before the bkpcy. petition was disposed of, a receiver was appointed on behalf of another creditor of the debtor's interest in the debenture stock:—Held: an essential change was effected by the appointment of the receiver; thenceforward there were no mutual credits between petitioning creditor & debtor, & though the effect of an adjudication in bkpcy. would be to defeat the title of the receiver & give a title to the trustee that would not suffice to bring Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 38, into force, & petitioning creditor was entitled to a receiving order.—*Re A DEBTOR, Ex p. 585. Position of receiver in bankruptcy—Whether different from that of receiver in Chancery.]

—The status of a receiver appointed by the Ct. of Bkpcy. is not the same as that of a receiver appointed by the Ct. of Ch. Consequently, where a receiver had been appointed under a liquidation by arrangement to carry on the business of a trader, & the landlord distrained for rent, & the receiver obtained an injunction restraining the landlord from proceeding with his distress:—Held: the landlord was entitled to exercise the right reserved to him by Bkpcy. of the ct. for that purpose.—Re MAYHEW, Ex p. TILL (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 97; 42 L. J. Bcy. 84; 37 J. P. 580; 21 W. R. 574.

The mtgor. accordingly moved that the foreclosure might be reopened; & that the first mtgees. might be restrained from parting with the legal estate of the mtged. property:—Held: there was no evidence that the first mtgees. had received any of the rents for which the receiver had not accounted, & there was no reason why the foreclosure should be reopened merely because the receiver who was not the agent of the first mtgees. for all purposes, but was an officer of the ct., had made a mistake which the mtgor. had not discovered before it was too late.—*INGHAM v. a second mtge. to the co. In 1901 I. became bkpt., & deft. was appointed his trustee in bkpcy. In 1902 the co. went into possession as second mtgees. & let the public-house to a tenant who agreed to pay a rent of £150 a year for the premises & an additional yearly sum of £1,250 in lieu of premium for goodwill. On Mar. 8, 1909, the co. obtained judgment against their tenant for £960, & gave him a month's notice to determine his tenancy. On Mar. 9, 1909, before the tenancy expired, pltf. commenced a foreclosure action against deft. & the co., & on Mar. 12 a receiver & manager was appointed, to whom the co. was directed to give up possession. Later on the same day the sheriff levied execution in respect of the co.'s judgment debt:—Held: the receiver was "landlord" of the premises within above sect., & as such was entitled to be paid by the execution creditor one year's arrears of the rent.—COX v. Applt. was receiver of the rent of the house, as agent of the ground landlord, from H., who held a lease of the whole house for twenty-one years; this lessee had underlet a part of the house to K. as yearly tenant. The privy was within the part of the house let to K., & was used exclusively by her, H. having no access to it:—Held: applt. was not the owner of the premises on which the nuisance arose, within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 2.—COOK v. The water co. supplied water to a block of flats which were respectively within the statutory limit as to value. The premises were mortgaged & a receiver was appointed under a receivership deed. The mtgor. appointed another person collector of the rents, who handed over the rents intact, at first to the mtgor., & subsequently to the receiver:—Held: the collector & not the receiver was the person liable under the special Act to pay the water rate.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. SECT. 4.—IN REGARD TO FORFEITURE CLAUSES.

613. Whether appointment operates as forfeiture.]—Upon the marriage of D. in 1881, a certain fund was settled by him upon trusts, under which he took the income for life, or until he should become bkpt., or should assign, charge, or incur the same, or do or suffer something whereby the same, or some part thereof, would, through his act, default, or by operation of law if belonging absolutely to him, become vested in or payable to some other person or persons, & after the determination of the trust in favour of D. the trustees were to pay the income to the wife during her life. On July 19, 1888, a judgment creditor of D. obtained the appointment of a receiver of the income of the trust fund. On Sept. 25, a receiving order was made against D., & he was subsequently adjudicated bkpt.:—Held: a gift over of property of a settlor upon voluntary alienation or involuntary alienation by process of law in favour of a particular creditor is not void; the appointment of a receiver was such an involuntary alienation, & D.'s life interest in the fund had determined, & the income was payable to his wife.—*Re DETMOLD, DETMOLD v. 614. —.]—Testator devised a freehold estate to his son for life, & after his death among all the children of the son born or to be born who should live to attain twenty-one, in equal shares as tenants in common in fee. By a subsequent clause he directed that if the son should attempt to dispose of his life interest, or should become bankrupt or insolvent, or the estate devised to him "should be taken in execution by any process of law for the benefit of any creditor or creditors," then the gift to him should become void & cease as if he were dead, & the estate devised to him should "thenceforth absolutely vest in & belong to the person or persons who under the devises & limitations hereinbefore contained would be next entitled thereto." A judgment for debt having been recovered against the son who was in possession, the judgment creditor obtained the appointment of a receiver of the rents. At this time the son had two children, one of age & one under age, & he afterwards had other children:—Held: the appointment of a receiver was a taking in execution within the meaning of the clause, & the son's life estate determined.—*BLACKMAN v. ... deprived of the personal enjoyment thereof. On Dec. 12, 1916, an order was made in lunacy appointing a receiver of the son's estate under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116, ss. 1 (d), the whole of his income being allowed for his maintenance. On May 15, 1919, the son executed an equitable charge on his income under testator's will:—Held: the order in lunacy appointing a receiver did not operate as a forfeiture because the receiver was the statutory agent of the son to receive the income of the trust fund; & as the document of May 15, 1919, was executed after the appointment of the receiver in lunacy, it was null & void, & could not therefore work a forfeiture.—*Re MARSHALL, MARSHALL v. SUB-SECT. 2.—PARTY CLAIMING POSSESSION.

635. General rule—Necessity for leave.—(1) A second incumbrancer having obtained the appointment of a receiver & a decree for a sale, without making the first incumbrancer a party, a petition by the latter to ascertain priorities, & for the receiver to keep down the interest, refused on the ground that petitioner had commenced a suit for the same purpose, & had delayed it; but leave was given to bring an ejectment.

(2) The possession of a receiver or sequestrator is not to be disturbed without leave of the ct.—BROOKS v. GREATHED (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 176; 37 E. R. 342.

637. ———.]—(1) When this ct. has appointed a receiver, it will not allow the possession of that receiver to be disturbed by anybody, however good his right may be; but the party thinking he has a right paramount to that of the receiver, or rather to that of the person who has got the appointment of the receiver, must before he can presume to take any steps of his own motion, apply to this ct. for leave to assert his right against the receiver (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).

(2) The ct. will not allow the first step in an action of ejectment against the receiver to be taken by any party without an application having been made to this ct. for permission to do it (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—HAWKINS v. GATHERCOLE (1852), 1 Drew. 12; 21 L. J. Ch. 617; 16 Jur. 650; 61 E. R. 355; subsequent proceedings (1855), 6 De G. M. & G. 1, L. JJ.

638. ———.]—In a suit by mtgees. of a dock against the trustees & judgment creditor, the chairman was appointed receiver of the tolls, with direction to pay into ct. the balance, after paying the expenses of carrying on the concern & the interest on the mtges. Judgment creditor having afterwards proceeded to attach the tolls under C. L. P. Act, 1854 (c. 113), was restrained injunction.

The ct. will not permit its receiver to be interfered with or dispossessed of the property, nor will it allow payment to him to be intercepted, although the order appointing him may be perfectly erroneous. An application must first be made to the ct. for leave.—AMES v. BIRKENHEAD DOCKS TRUSTEES (1855), 20 Beav. 332; 24 L. J. Ch. 540; 25 L. T. O. S. 121; 1 Jur. N. S. 529; 3 W. R. 381; 52 E. R. 630.

643. ———.]—A mtgor. let the mortgaged premises subsequently to the mtgc. During the quarter ending at Michaelmas the mtgees. gave a notice to the tenant informing him of the existence of the mtgc., & that the principal sum was still due & owing together with an arrear of interest, & requiring him to pay the rent thereafter to accrue to them. The rent which became due at Michaelmas being still unpaid, an order was made in an action against the mtgor. appointing pltf., who had recovered judgment, receiver of the rents of the premises, "without prejudice to the rights of any prior incumbrancers who may think proper to take possession of the same by virtue of their respective securities." Subsequently the mtgees. threatened the tenant with legal proceedings unless he paid the rent to them, & the tenant thereupon paid them the quarter's rent due at Michaelmas. The receiver claimed payment of such rent from the tenant:—Held: the tenant had not been guilty of any disobedience of the receivership order in paying rent to the mtgees., they being prior incumbrancers whose rights were reserved by the order; the tenant, having paid the rent to the mtgees. under compulsion of law & in consequence of his lessor's default, could set up such payment in answer to the claim for the rent by the receiver, who claimed through his lessor; & consequently the claim of the receiver could not be maintained.—*UNDERHAY v. In an action by the holder of the debentures a receiver & manager was appointed. An order was afterwards made for the winding up of the company. The co. had ceased to be carried on as a going concern:—Held: the official liquidator was entitled to the custody of such of the books & documents of the co. as related to its management & business & were not necessary to support the title of the holder of the debentures.—*ENGEL v. 645. Application of rule—Proceedings in ejectment.—When a mtgee. is not in possession the ct. will, upon application of creditors, appoint a receiver of the mtged. premises, but without prejudice to the right of the mtgee. to obtain possession.

Where a receiver has been appointed of mtged. estate the mtgee. not being before the ct., the mtgee. must apply to the ct. for liberty to bring an ejectment (LORD THURLOW, C.)—BRYAN v. CORMICK (1788), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 422; 29 E. R. 1231, L. C.

Enforcement of judgment for recovery of land.—Where a mtgee. of leaseholds has obtained the appointment by the ct. of a receiver, the lessor who by leave of the ct. brings an action for recovery of the land against the lessee, & recovers judgment, cannot proceed to enforce the judgment as against the receiver in possession by writ of possession without the leave of the ct.—MORRIS v. BAKER (1903), 73 L. J. Ch. 143; 52 W. R. 207; 48 Sol. Jo. 101.

651. Seizure of copyholds quousque.—In suits by creditors & legatees a receiver was appointed of the rents & profits of real estate, part of which was copyhold. The death of the last tenant having been duly presented at the ct. baron of the manor, proclamations were made for the next tenant to come in & be admitted, & no person appearing, the bailiff of the manor was ordered to seize the lands quousque. Declaration in ejectment at the suit of the lord was afterwards served on the terre-tenant; but, on the motion of the receiver, the lord was restrained by injunction from prosecuting the action.—*EVELYN v. The day before the sale the landlord gave him notice of his claim for rent, but took no further steps:—Held: the landlord [not having distrained] had no lien on the proceeds of the sale in priority to the other creditors.

(2) If you have a co. or person whose estate is being dealt with or administered by the ct., & a liquidator or receiver appointed by the ct. has occupied or used premises that are part of the estate, then, as to rent & other outgoings payable to the landlord or other parties in respect of the premises for that occupation or user & for which the co. or person whose estate is being dealt with or administered is liable, the ct. will see that such rent & other outgoings are paid out of the assets got in by the liquidator or receiver (ROMER, L.J.). holders & a receiver was appointed. Rent being in arrear, the landlord took out a summons for leave to distrain or re-enter. After the summons had been returnable, but before it was heard, an order was made for winding up the co. The summons was then amended by intitling it in the winding-up as well as in the action. The judge held that as the landlord was a creditor of the co., leave could not be given him to distrain, & that the claim to re-enter ought to be left to be tried in an action. On appeal:—Held: according to the true construction of the proviso for re-entry, a right to re-enter accrued on the making of a winding-up order, & the title of the landlord to re-enter being clear, the ct. ought to order possession to be given to him, & ought not to put him to the useless expense of bringing an action to which there was no defence.

As to the costs of the receiver, it was irregular to make him a party. He ought not to have been served unless a case of personal misconduct was made against him, & no such case is alleged. . . . Applt. must pay the receiver's costs below & here (JESSEL, M.R.).—GENERAL SHARE & TRUST CO. v. WETLEY BRICK & POTTERY CO. (1882), 20 Ch. D. 260; sub nom. Re WETLEY BRICK & POTTERY CO., 30 W. 659. — Except where appointment of receiver not complete.]—A mining co., now in liquidation, were lessees, from separate lessors, at certain rents & royalties, of two adjoining coal mines A. & B. There was no shaft on mine B., & the co. worked both mines by means of a shaft on mine A. On each of the leases the lessor reserved to himself express power to distrain for rent in arrear, not only upon chattels belonging to the lessees on the demised premises, but also upon chattels belonging to the lessees in or about any adjoining or neighbouring collieries. In Oct. 1896, the lessors of mine B. levied a distress upon chattels belonging to the lessees on mine A.:—Held: the distress, having been levied before the commencement of the winding up of the co., & before a receiver was effectively appointed on behalf of the debenture-holders of the co., was valid against the debenture-holders.

The order of [for a receiver] was never really effective. It was never drawn up, the lessor had no notice of it, & before the receiver could take possession he had to give security. The distress, having been made before the commencement of the winding-up of the co. & before a receiver was effectively appointed, was, in my opinion, valid as against the debenture-holders (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re ROUNDWOOD COLLIERY CO., *LEE v. 660. — Attornment of mortgager to mortgagee.]—A mtge. deed contained an attornment clause whereby A., the mtgor., attorned & became tenant from year to year to B., the mtgee., for & in respect of the mtgd. premises, at the yearly rent of £800, to be paid by equal quarterly payments; & it was thereby agreed that it should be lawful for B. at any time after three months from the date of the mtge., without giving previous notice of his intention so to do, to enter upon & take possession of the premises whereof A. had attorned tenant, & to determine the tenancy created by the aforesaid attornment. A. filed a liquidation petition, & on the same day a receiver was appointed, who entered into possession of A.'s estate & effects.

Notice of the petition & of the appointment of a receiver was sent to B., who two days later, by virtue of the attornment clause, distrained upon the goods & chattels on the mortgaged premises for half-year's rent then due:—Held: a tenancy from year to year & not a tenancy at will was created by the attornment clause, & B. was entitled under Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 34, to distrain for the rent due to him from A. at the time of filing the liquidation petition.—Re THRELFALL, Ex p. QUEEN'S BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1880), 16 Ch. Order for payment of rent by receiver.]—The trustee & exor. of A., the owner of one moiety of a plantation in Jamaica, took a lease of the other moiety from E. & F., the owners of it, at a certain rent, & with covenants to keep in repair, etc., a suit was subsequently instituted in England, by the parties interested under the will of A., for parties in Jamaica were appointed receivers & managers of the estates of A. These parties entered into possession of the entire plantation, & remitted the proceeds to the consignees in England appointed in the suit, who paid the sums received into ct. No rent having, for many years, been received by E. & F., in respect of their moiety of the plantation, a petition was presented by them for payment out of the funds in ct. of the arrears of rent due, & also of a sum which they claimed in respect of dilapidations during the receivers' occupation. E. & F. were not parties to the suit:—Held: notwithstanding that some of the parties interested under the will of A. were under disability, yet they were bound by the occupation of the receivers, & E. & F. were entitled to an order for payment of the arrears of rent, & to a reference in respect of the dilapidations.—*NEATE v. an equitable charge on goods does not protect them from distress for poor rate. Where an order is made appointing a receiver & manager of a co.'s business, but not directing delivery up of possession to him, & thereupon the receiver & manager enters upon the co.'s premises for the purpose of managing & carrying on the business there is no change of occupation within Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), s. 16, & accordingly under Poor Relief Act, 1601 (c. 2), s. 2, & Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 161, the co.'s goods are liable to distress for the whole of the parish rates made for the half year in which the order has been made; & this right of distress vested in the churchwardens & overseers of the parish prevails as against the equitable charge created by debentures charging, in the usual form, all the property of the co. where there is no assignment of chattels in the covering deed.—*Re MARRIAGE, NEAVE & CO., NORTH OF ENGLAND TRUSTEE, DEBENTURE & ASSETS CORPN. v. The debentures were not secured by a trust deed & operated only as an equitable charge on the co.'s property & assets. The gas co. obtained, under Gasworks Clauses Act, 1871 (c. 41), s. 23, & their special Act, s. 74, which provided that sums payable to the co. might be recovered summarily or by action, an order & warrant from justices empowering them to levy a distress on the co.'s goods & chattels for the amount of the debt, & then applied in the debenture holders' action for leave to proceed with the distress:—Held: the statutory rights of the gas co. overrode the equitable rights of the debenture-holders, & leave was granted them to proceed with the distress.—*Re CROSBIE (ADOLPHE), LTD., JOHNSON & HUGHES v. Re-entry—By owner of rentcharge.]—When lands are sold to a railway co. in consideration of a rentcharge, the parties may agree for its being secured by a power of entry; & a conveyance made upon such an agreement, whereby the land was conveyed to uses that the grantor should take the rentcharge, & if it fell into arrear should enter until satisfaction, was held to entitle him to leave to enter against a receiver of the undertaking appointed by the ct.—*FORSTER v. The co. claimed the benefit of the agreement, & refused to deliver the goods until they were paid the amount which the trader owed them for freight due at the time of the filing of the petition. The receiver in order to obtain the goods paid the co. £50 under protest, & then applied to the ct. of Bkpcy. to order the co. to repay him the £50, & an order was made accordingly:—Held: the Ct. of Bkpcy. had no jurisdiction to make the order.—Re BUSHELL, Ex p. GREAT WESTERN RY. 677. — Receiver acting beyond powers.]—By an order made in a debenture holders' action pltf., W., was appointed receiver & manager of the business of Ind, Coope & co., a brewery co., & he carried on the business of the co. as before. By a letter signed Ind, Coope & co., by W., receiver & manager, defts. were instructed to carry to Malta a quantity of beer consigned to the co. c/o the co.'s agents at Malta. Defts. carried the beer to Malta under a bill of lading which named the co. as the consignees & provided that the shipowner should have a lien on the goods shipped not only for the freight due thereon but also for any previously unsatisfied freight due either from shippers or consignees to the shipowner. Defts. for many years had carried beer for the co. to Malta under bills of lading in this form, & they claimed a lien on the beer in question for certain unsatisfied freight due to them from the co. before pltf.'s appointment:—Held: defts. were not entitled to a lien for arrears of freight, because in truth pltf. & not the co. was both shipper & consignee, & notice of this fact was conveyed to defts. by the form of the shipping instructions; & pltf. had no power, without the leave of the ct., to create such a lien.—*Moss S.S. 679. Right to sue receiver—Payment of debt out of surplus funds.]—A receiver appointed in a suit instituted by incumbancers was ordered to keep down the incumbrances out of the rents & to pay the residue to the owner of the estate. A judgment creditor may file a bill against the owner & receiver, without making the other incumbancers parties, to have his debt satisfied out of the surplus rents.—*LEWIS v. 680. Right to rent—As against mortgagee—No notice to pay by receiver for mortgagee.]—Land in the occupation of a tenant at a rent was in 1908 with other properties mortgaged by the owner thereof to a second mtgee., subject to a first mtgee. In Mar. 1911, the first mtgee. became vested in the tenant, who at the same time received notice of the second mtgee. In Apr. 1911, the second mtgee., under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), appointed a receiver of the properties comprised in his mtgee., & notice of the appointment was given to the mtgor. The second mtgee. instructed the receiver to take no steps without further instructions. The receiver accordingly took no further steps & no further instructions were ever in fact given to him. No notice of the appointment was either then or at any subsequent time given to the tenant. In July, 1911, pltf. recovered judgment against the mtgor. in the county ct. for a sum of money & on Mar. 25, 1912, the judgment being unsatisfied, pltf. served a garnishee summons in the county ct. on the tenant to show cause why he should not pay to them the half year's rent due from him on that date. On Mar. 28, 1912, the second mtgee. served notice on the tenant to pay the rent to him. The receiver did not demand payment of the rent from the tenant, nor was he a party to the garnishee proceedings. The tenant, after deducting the interest due to him upon his mtgee., paid the balance of the rent into ct.:—Held: the notice by the second mtgee. to the tenant to pay the rent to him was inoperative, & pltf. were entitled as against the second mtgee. to the balance of the rent due from the tenant.—*VACUUM OIL CO., LTD. v. 682. Right to serve bankruptcy notice.—A judgment creditor obtained, by way of equitable execution, the appointment of a receiver of certain property of judgment debtor. There was no evidence that there was any money of judgment debtor in the hands of the receiver, nor was he in possession of any interest of judgment debtor which could be sold:—Held: as the appointment of the receiver did not prevent debtor from paying the judgment debt it did not operate as a stay of execution within the meaning of Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 4 (1) (g), & the judgment creditor was therefore entitled to serve a bkpcy. notice on judgment debtor in respect of the judgment.—*Re BOND, Ex p. Before the order was acted upon an order was made to wind up the co.:—Held: the order appointing a receiver did not confer on judgment creditor any charge on debtor's property so as to make him a secured creditor, & was not equivalent to a seizure of the property in execution.—*CROSHAW v. 691. Leave of court to levy—When granted—Order for receiver obtained in false circumstances.]

—The co. having raised large sums of money by bond & on mtge., & being also considerably indebted on simple contract, agreed with one of their simple contract creditors to suffer judgment to be entered up against the co. at a future day. After this agreement, various negotiations took place between the bond & other creditors of the co. & the co., with the view of postponing on certain terms the enforcement of all claims, as well by specialty as simple contract against the co. for seven years; these terms were accepted by the great majority of the creditors, but rejected by the simple contract creditor. After such rejection, but before the period for issuing execution had arrived, a bill was filed by one of the bond creditors against the co. & its other specialty creditors for the enforcement of his alleged equitable lien, & for the appointment of a receiver. The receiver was appointed by the consent of all parties to the suit, & entered into the possession of all the chattels of the co. The simple contract creditor then sued out execution against the co. On the petition of the simple contract creditor:—Held: inasmuch as the order appointing a receiver was obtained by a surprise on the ct., & did not rest on an equity which could be maintained, & would not have been made if all the circumstances of the case had been brought before the ct., the simple contract creditor ought to be allowed to levy upon the goods & chattels of the co. notwithstanding the order.—*RUSSELL v. The co. made several mtges. of the rates, tolls, & dues under the Act; one of the mtgees., on behalf of himself & all others, obtained the appointment of a receiver of the co.'s rates, tolls, & dues, who was ordered to pay thereout the expenses of carrying on the co.'s business, & then the interest on the said mtges., & to pay the balance into ct. in the cause. A judgment creditor of the co. presented a petition in the cause before the hearing, praying that he might be at liberty to sue out & execute a fi. fa. & elegit against the goods & lands respectively of the co.:—Held: he might execute a fi. fa., but that all he could take under the elegit would be such right in the lands as the co. had, namely, subject to the mtges. & to the right of user of the canal by the public, & subject also to the powers of management of the co.—*POTTS v. On July 2, 1889, the co. entered into an agreement with some engine makers for the erection by them at the colliery of a machine. The purchase-money was to be paid by monthly instalments, commencing at a specified date, & it was provided that, if the payments were not made regularly, the vendors should have the right at once to call upon the co. for immediate payment in full of the whole of the balance of the purchase-money then remaining due. It was also stipulated that, immediately on the vendors receiving payment of the balance, the machine should become the property of the co., but that until fully paid for it should remain the property of the vendors. The machine was erected accordingly, & it commenced working in Aug. 1890. It was of the nature of a trade fixture. Two instalments of the purchase-money were paid by the co., but they failed to make any further payments.

In Feb. 1891, the bankers brought an action to enforce their security, & a receiver was appointed, who took possession of the colliery. In Mar. 1891, the co. resolved on a voluntary winding up, & a supervision order was made in May:—Held: the stipulation that the machine should remain the property of the vendors until it was fully paid for was valid, & notwithstanding the inclusion in the mtge. deed of machinery to be after erected, the co. could not confer on their mtgees. a better title to the machine than they had themselves. Consequently the receiver desiring to give up possession of the colliery, the vendors were entitled to remove the machine.—CUMBERLAND UNION BANKING CO. v. 711. ———.]—By an agreement in writing, dated Nov. 11, 1910, G. M. & co., agreed to supply & erect upon the works owned by the firm of M., J. & co., the predecessors of deft. co., a complete installation of a patent automatic sprinkler for the protection of the premises from fire, at the price of £237, payable by annual instalments. In the event of default being made in any annual instalment, or of any breach of the agreement by the purchasers, the whole unpaid balance of principal & interest was immediately to become due. The agreement further provided that the basis of the contract was that the sprinkler installation remained the sole & exclusive property of the contractors until the whole sum of £237 had been paid, & in the event of default the contractors might enter upon the premises & remove the installation. Deft., co., was incorporated in 1911 & took over the assets & liabilities of the firm of M., J. & co., including their interest under the agreement. In Dec. 1911, deft., co. issued a series of first mtge. debentures containing a charge in the usual form on the undertaking, such charge to be a floating security. On Oct. 18, 1912, a receiver & manager was appointed in an action brought by the debenture holders to enforce their security. On Oct. 21 the last instalment under the agreement fell due & was not paid. The debenture holders had no notice of the agreement. On an application by G. M. & co., for liberty to enter upon deft. co.'s premises & remove therefrom the sprinkler installation:—Held: the effect of the hire-purchase agreement was to confer upon appcts. an interest in the land to which the sprinkler installation was affixed & to authorise them, in the events which had happened, to enter & remove it; the interest of the debenture-holders being also equitable the ordinary principles of priorities applied; & the interest being subsequent in date was therefore postponed to the interest of appcts.—Re MORRISON, JONES & TAYLOR, LTD., COOKES v. 712. Purchaser of goods—Goods left on company's premises.]—On Aug. 27, 1903, deft. co. issued first mtge. debentures, secured by a deed of which the co.'s two managing directors were trustees. The deed provided that the co. should not sell its machinery without the concurrence of the trustees, but gave the trustees an unfettered discretion to concur in any sale which in their opinion did not prejudice the interests of the debenture-holders. In 1912 the co. issued a number of debentures to deft. bank. The co. having got into difficulties, the two managing directors made further advances to the co. from time to time. In Oct. & Nov. 1916, the co., with the concurrence of the two managing directors as trustees of the deed of 1903, sold certain machinery to pltf. & the proceeds of the sale were applied in discharging the debt due from the company to the two managing directors. Under the agreement of sale the machinery was to become the property of pltf. immediately, but he had the right to leave it on the premises as long as he liked. On Dec. 18, deft. bank appointed a receiver under their debentures & on the same day another debenture-holder obtained an injunction restraining the co.

from dealing with the property. The receiver appointed by the bank on going into possession declined to allow pltf. to remove such of the machinery as was attached to the freehold. On Jan. 29, 1917, the co. went into liquidation:—Held: by Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), ss. 17, 62, the property in the fixed machinery or, at any rate, the right to take possession of it, passed to pltf.

as from the date of the purchase; the sale of the machinery was not outside the ordinary business of the co.; & that the concurrence of the trustees in the sale was reasonable, therefore, pltf. was entitled to the machinery as against the debenture-holders.—*HAMER v. 726. — Without prejudice to right of incumbrancer—Right to serve notice on tenants.]—A receiver was appointed in an action in the Q. B. Div. under an order directing him to collect the rents of certain specified property, including property of which S. was in possession as mtgee., such order to be without prejudice to the rights of any incumbrancer who might be in or enter into possession. The receiver gave notice to the tenants of the mtgd. property to pay the rents to him, who informed him that they had already been served with a notice from S. The receiver not withdrawing the notice, S. brought an action in the Ch. Div. asking for an injunction to restrain the receiver from receiving the rents:—Held: although the receiver's conduct was improper & a violation of the rights of S., S. was not justified in instituting a fresh action in the Ch. Div.; & whatever might have been the course previous to Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), such a proceeding since that Act was irregular, the proper course being to apply in the action & to the ct. in & by which the receiver was appointed.—SEARLE v. CHOAT (1884), 25 Ch. D. 723; 53 L. J. Ch. 506; 50 L. T. 470; 32 W. R. 397, C. A.

727. Duty to give notice or take possession—Effect of omission—Bankruptcy.]—By an order dated May 14, 1887, by which pltf. obtained final judgment in an action, a receiver was appointed to carry on the business of deft., & to collect & get in outstanding debts. By a further order dated Dec. 20, 1887, the order of May 14, 1887, was rescinded except as regarded the book debts mentioned in the four parts of the first schedule as to which the receiver was to continue to act for pltf. with power to issue to any of such book debtors a circular in prescribed form; & it was further ordered that the whole of the book debts mentioned in the four parts of the first schedule should be allocated to & accepted by pltf. in satisfaction of his judgment debt interest & costs; & after giving deft. power to redeem any of the book debts in the schedule by payment thereof, it was further ordered that in case any of the book debts mentioned in the first part of the first schedule should not have been paid by the respective debtors or redeemed by deft. on or before Mar. 31, 1888, pltf. should be at liberty to give notice of the order of May 14, 1887, & of that order in the form prescribed in the second schedule, to each of the debtors mentioned in the said first part & to collect & recover such debts in his own name. On Feb. 13, 1888, the receiver sent to debtors mentioned in the first schedule of the order of Dec. 20, 1887, a notice requiring payment, & stating that deft.'s firm were closing up accounts with a former member, & that it was necessary to collect all outstanding debts. On Feb. 23, 1888, deft. in the action committed an act of bkpcy. upon which a petition was presented against him. On Apr. 4, 1888, pltf. without knowledge of the act of bkpcy. or of the petition, sent to debtors whose names were mentioned in the first part of the first schedule, a notice as prescribed of the appointment of the receiver & the assignment. In May, 1888, debtor was adjudicated bkpt. & the trustee claimed the scheduled debts:—Held: the order appointing the receiver did not constitute pltf. a secured creditor; the order of Dec. 20, 1887, transferred the book debts to pltf. but left them in the order & disposition of the bkpt. without notice; & although the debts in the first part of the schedule were taken out of the order & disposition clause by the notice of Apr. 4, 1888, those contained in the other three parts of the schedule were in the order & disposition of bkpt. at the time of the bkpcy., the notice sent out by the receiver on Feb. 13, 1888, being insufficient.—*Re TILLET, Ex p. On May 9, 1893, the mtgees., under the powers of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), appointed A. B. receiver of the income of the mtgd. property, & he entered into possession of the premises & carried on the business. On May 16 the trader committed an act of bkpcy., & on May 17 the mtgees., without notice of this act, commenced an action in which A. B. was on May 19 appointed receiver of the book debts by the ct. Neither the mtgees. nor A. B. ever gave notice of the assignment to the debtors; & A. B. received certain moneys paid in respect of the book debts. On June 16 a receiving order was made against the trader, & he was subsequently adjudicated bkpt.:—Held: (1) neither the appointment of a receiver by the mtgees. nor that by the ct. was sufficient to take the book debts out of the order & disposition of the bkpt. with the consent of the true owners, unless followed by notice to the debtors within a reasonable time; (2) as by the default of the mtgees. no such notice was given, the trustee in bkpcy., was entitled to the book debts & the moneys received in respect thereof.—*RUITER v. In many cases when receivers are appointed there is an insurance already on foot, & then he takes over the policy, pays the premiums, & is allowed them on passing his accounts. It appears to me that it is consistent with his duty as receiver & that the ct. has itself sanctioned it, that he should make & keep this insurance on foot. . . .

Proper repairs of real estate appear to . . . be a matter which falls within the functions of a receiver, where the receiver is appointed to receive the rents & profits (CHITTY, J.).

An order was subsequently made for the payment by the last-mentioned deft. to the receiver of a specific sum, being money received by him in respect of the proceeds of the goods, & comprised in the charge:—Held: (1) the receiver was not a creditor entitled to present a bkpcy. petition against such deft. within Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 6.

If he is possessed of chattels as receiver, & those chattels are unlawfully detained from him, he may well be able to maintain an action to recover them as being the person in possession of them, quite independently of the fact that he is a receiver. . . . But in such cases he does not sue in his character of receiver (FRY, L.J.).

(2) The petitioner is a receiver. . . . He could not sue for this sum of money in his own name either at law or in equity. Even if he could by the authority of the ct. sue for it in his own name, is the money due to him personally either at law or in equity? At law it is certainly not. Appeal against receiving order.]—

After the death of one of two partners in a firm the surviving partner ordered certain goods in the firm name to be sent to the place of business of the firm. An action was subsequently brought against the firm in respect of the goods, the writ being served on the surviving partner. Judgment was obtained in this action against the firm, & a bkpcy. notice issued & served on the surviving partner on failure to comply with the requirements of which a receiving order was made against the firm. An appeal was brought against the receiving order by the receiver appointed in a partnership action which had been commenced in the C. Div., & by the widow of deceased partner as his extrix. :—Held: the receiver had no locus standi to appeal against the receiving order.—*Re JAMESON & SANDYS, Ex p. C. was a merchant in London, who had accepted bills of exchange drawn on him by American houses, payable & dishonoured in London. C. took proceedings in liquidation with the consent of his English creditors, & with notice thereof to his American creditors, but without the consent of these latter, who commenced independent actions against him in the cts. of New York, to recover the amounts due on the bills. The bkpt. had property in America available for the payment of the bills :—Held: the Ct. of Bkpcy. would not grant an injunction to restrain the actions in the foreign country, but permission would be given to apply to the registrar for an order that the receiver appointed in the liquidation might defend the actions.—Re CHAPMAN (1872), L. 785. Receiver of mortgaged estate—Interest—Rents not appropriated—Receiver to keep down interest.—[On a bill by infant tenant in tail, a receiver was appointed, with an order to keep down the interest of incumbrances out of the rents. He kept down accordingly the interest of all but one mtge., the interest of which, belonging to infants, was never applied for, except a small portion for maintenance, the residue of the rents being paid into ct. to the credit of the cause. Tenant in tail, coming of age, suffers a recovery, & resettles the estate, & afterwards dies. The master, by his report, having certified that deceased was not bound, while tenant in tail, to keep down the interest of the incumbrances, & consequently that the rents paid into ct., during that time, belonged to his personal representatives; the party claiming to be entitled to the estate under the settlement petitioned for leave to except to the report, on the following grounds: (a) that in the case of an infant tenant in tail, the interest of incumbrances ought to be kept down out of the rents; (b) that the direction to the receiver to keep down the interest, amounted to an appropriation of so much of the rents to that purpose; & (c) that deceased by not claiming the fund when of age, showed an intention that it should be so appropriated:—Held: (1) the general question could only arise in favour of a remainderman or reversioner, & all such rights were in this case barred by the recovery; (2) the order was not meant to vary the rights of the real & personal representatives, but to prevent the incumbrancers from being prejudiced by the ct. taking the estate into its custody, & also to protect the estate from hostile proceedings on the part of creditors; & did not amount to an appropriation; (3) there was nothing in the circumstances to alter the character of the property, which, consisting of rents paid into ct., & neither applied in payment of interest, nor appropriated for such payment, was personal estate, & to be dealt with as such.—*BERTIE v. Limitations from running against him.—PENNEY v. TODD (1878), 23 W. R. 502.

795. Notwithstanding appointment of liquidator.]—A co. issued debentures constituting a first charge on the whole of their undertaking & property, & empowering the holders, in the event of proceedings for the winding up of the co., to appoint a receiver invested with very ample powers of carrying on the co.'s business, & managing & disposing of their undertaking & property. An order was made for the winding up of the company, & an official liquidator was appointed. The debenture holders, under their powers, appointed a receiver & applied to the ct. that, notwithstanding the appointment of the liquidator, the receiver might be at liberty forthwith to take possession of all the co.'s undertaking & property:—Held: the ct. ought not to interfere with the right of the debenture holders to a receiver under their deed; & leave was given to the receiver appointed by them to take possession, notwithstanding the appointment of an official liquidator, but without prejudice to any question as to the powers of the receiver, other than the power to take possession & to sell the property.—Re HENRY POUND SON & HUTCHINS (1889), 42 Ch. Div., in pursuance whereof the sheriff took possession of certain goods & chattels in the possession of deft. including various articles pawned with her & not yet redeemed. The receiver perfected his security, & claimed the redeemable pledges in deft.'s house:—Held: deft., as pawnbroker, had a qualified property in the articles pawned with her & not yet redeemed, which was not intercepted by the appointment of a receiver; & therefore the sheriff was entitled to hold such articles on behalf of execution creditor, & to receive money paid to redeem the same.—*Re ROLLASON, ROLLASON v. The purchaser did not complete, & litigation ensued between him & the vendor. In Aug. 1902, judgment creditor of the purchaser obtained by way of equitable execution, an order appointing himself, upon giving security, receiver of the purchaser's interest in the land under the contract for sale, & at once gave notice of this order to the vendor, but did not perfect his security as receiver until May, 1903. In the meantime in Jan. 1903, the purchaser being unable to complete, the litigation between him & the vendor was, without notice to judgment creditor, compromised by the contract for sale being rescinded, & the vendor paying the purchaser £110, not in part repayment of the deposit, but to give up possession of the property:—Held: as judgment creditor did not perfect his security as receiver until after the compromise, he had no claim against the vendor in respect of the £110.

(2) It is rightly conceded that an order appointing a receiver by way of equitable execution creates no charge on personal estate (FARWELL, J.).

On the application for this order deft. made an affidavit stating his approval of the person proposed. Before the receiver had perfected his security some money arising from the sale of furniture belonging to the intestate was received by deft.'s firm, & appropriated by him, & he claimed to retain out of it a debt due to him by the intestate:—Held: by reason of the relation in which deft. stood to pltf. as a member of the firm of solrs. who were acting for him, deft. stood in no better position than he would have stood after the receiver had perfected his security, & deft. could not under the circumstances exercise his right of retainer.—*Re BIRT, BIRT v. The Order is not, that no proceeding shall be taken to appoint a receiver, but that no receiver appointed shall take possession. It assumes that the receiver may be appointed under the decree. If not, why provide that he shall not take possession without notice. That is almost equivalent to an enactment that he may be appointed without notice (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*DRESSER v. Enforcement of—Writ of possession.—In Oct. 1899, receivers were appointed in debenture-holder's actions of the undertaking & of the property whatsoever & wheresoever both present & future of an English co., the order following the wording of the debentures. Among the assets of the co. was a debt due to them from a French firm. In Nov. 1899, P. & co., English creditors of the co., took proceedings in France for the purpose of attaching the debt due to the co. from the French firm. Pltfs. in the debenture-holder's actions moved to restrain P. & co. from intercepting, attaching, or taking in execution, or attempting to obtain payment of moneys due to the co. from the French firm, or from otherwise interfering with the receivers:—Held: (1) the appointment of the receivers made no difference; for though the ct. can appoint receivers over property out of the jurisdiction, the receiver is not put in possession of foreign property by the mere order of the ct.; something else has to be done, & until what is necessary has been done in accordance with foreign law, any person, not a party to the suit, who takes proceedings in a foreign country is not guilty of contempt either on the ground of interfering with the receivers' possession or otherwise, & for this purpose no distinction can be drawn between a foreigner & a British subject.

(2) The ct. will grant a receiver a writ of possession or a writ of assistance to enable him to recover possession & it will order tenants to attorn to the receiver (COZENS-HARDY, J.).—*Re MAUDSLAY, SONS & FIELD, MAUDSLAY v. The evidence in support of the motion showed that the property was wasting, & that, even if pltf. was only sub-mtgee., it was insufficient for the original mtge. upon it; & this evidence was not met to the satisfaction of the ct.:—Held: under the circumstances it was just & convenient within Jud. 849. — Payment to solicitor of creditors.]

—The appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution set out the names of creditors, the sums due to each, & the order in which they were to be paid. Instead of paying creditors personally, the receiver handed the sums which from time to time came into his hands to the solr., who had conducted the action for pltf., & who had obtained the receiving order on behalf of pltf. & the rest of creditors. These sums did not reach the hands of creditors:—Held: the receiver could not take credit for the sums so paid to the solr. His duty was to pay creditors himself. Having failed to do so, he must recoup them by bringing the whole amount received into ct.—IND, COOPE & Co. v. KIDD (1891), 63 L. J. Q. B. 726; 10 T. L. R. 603; 38 Sol. The purchaser of one of the lots having refused to comply with this condition, a summons was taken out, upon which an order was made that, on or before Apr. 7, 1886, or subsequently within seven days after service of the order, the purchaser should lodge in ct. the balance of the purchase-money, after deducting the deposit, with interest thereon from July 21, 1885. The purchaser then asked that after the direction for the payment of the money less the deposit, there should be inserted in the order the words "less the rents & profits of the premises from July 21, 1885." He contended that there ought to be no difference made between a completion of a purchase, where the property was being sold under the direction of the ct., & when it was being sold outside the ct. in the usual way, the course then adopted invariably being to allow the rents & profits to be set off against the interest, the balance being either paid or received by the purchaser:—Held: a receiver being in possession of the rents, a direction must be inserted in the order that the receiver should pay the rents to the purchaser.—*Re SMITH. His exors. stopped the completion of the contracts making terms with the builders. An action having been brought for the administration of D.'s estate, a receiver & manager of his estate & farm was appointed, & he resided for some time in the house devised to S. for life, & used the furniture given to her & also used the farming stock in carrying on testator's farm:—Held: S. was entitled to an inquiry what compensation ought to be paid her for the use & occupation of the house, & the injury done by user to the furniture & stock.—*Re DAY, SPRAKE v. When property is in or under the control of this ct., an application must be made to the ct. by a party claiming right to it. The ct. will not allow an entry, or an ejectment, or any other act of interference, with its receiver; & there is no injustice in that, because the party might at any time come to ask leave of the ct. to pursue or establish his remedy against the property, & the ct. seldom refuses leave to do so by an ejectment, or other action (LORD TRURO, C.).—Re FRANKS (1851), 16 L. 882. Interference amounting to contempt—Interference before order drawn up—By person cognisant of order.]—(1) A commission of bkpcy. cannot supersede a decree of this ct. for a receiver, which is a discretionary power exercised by this ct. with as great utility as any sort of authority that belongs to them, & is provisional only, & does not affect the right of parties.

(2) Where a person . . . attends a cause to which he is debt. the whole time of the hearing, & had notice of the decree by being present when it was pronounced in ct., if he does any act that is a contravention to the decree, he is guilty of a contempt, & punishable for it notwithstanding the decretal order is not drawn up (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—SKIP v. LANGFORD (1835), 5 L. J. Ch. 60.

884. — Refusal to deliver property to receiver—Property held under conveyance—Persons conveying not parties to motion.]—Motion by a receiver under the ct. to commit a party for contempt, on the ground of an encroachment on the lands, & a refusal to deliver up the part encroached on, refused, the party absolutely denying the allegation of encroachment.

The comrs., having bought the property in 1809, sold, in 1842, to C. all he holds, as he says, but only a part, as is said by the other side. But, on looking to the map, there can be no reasonable doubt that all C. holds he obtained under the conveyance, whether there be an encroachment or not; he is not therefore guilty of any contempt of this ct. The receiver is no doubt to be protected, & his possession is not to be disturbed; but, the sale taking place in 1842, is it reasonable to come here now & that, too, against Mr. C. & not against the comrs.? I think not. Let the motion be dismissed with costs (per CUR.).—HOPKINSON v. POWIS (1844), 3 L. T. O. S. 319.

889. — Execution against unpaid capital—Companies Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 16), s. 36.]—The appointment of a receiver of the undertaking of a railway co. under Railway Companies Act, 1867 (c. 127), s. 4, does not affect the right of a judgment creditor to issue execution against unpaid capital under above sect. Unpaid capital is not receivable by a receiver appointed under Railway Companies Act, 1867 (c. 127), s. 4. H. was appointed receiver & manager of the West Lancashire Railway Co. He held shares in the co., which purported to be fully paid up, but which had in fact been issued at a discount, & on which it was alleged that moneys still remained due. The Rock Life Assurance Co. held debenture stock of the railway co. on which interest was in arrear. The suing officer of the insurance co., having recovered judgment in respect of the arrears, gave notice of an application to the Q. B. Div., under above sect., for leave to issue execution against H., to the extent of the moneys remaining due in respect of his shares. The railway co. thereupon moved to commit him for contempt of ct. in instituting proceedings against the receiver without the leave of the ct. for the purpose of obtaining moneys alleged to be receivable by him in his capacity of receiver:—Held: resp. was within his rights, & the motion must be dismissed with costs.—Re WEST LANCASHIRE RY. WICKHAM* (1831), 4 Sim. 511; 58 E. R. 191.

902. — Object merely to compel payment of costs—Order not made.—(1) A receiver appointed to get in property, part of which he finds in the possession of another receiver, ought not to take proceedings to deprive the latter of such possession, without the authority of the ct.

(2) A motion ought not to be made for committal on the ground of a disturbance of the possession of a receiver, when the object of the motion is merely to compel the payment of costs, after the question with respect to the possession of the property has been settled.—*WARD v. The M. co. made default in payment of an instalment, & the E. co. brought an action in the K. B. Div. against the M. co. for the whole amount of the purchase-money. Pending this action a debenture-holders' action was brought in the Ch. Div. & a receiver appointed. He went into possession & for a time carried on the theatre, using for that purpose the electric plant. Subsequently the E. co. obtained judgment in their action. After this the receiver sold the theatre to a new co., who purchased part of the plant, & the rest was returned to the E. co. The E. co. claimed rent from the receiver for the use of their plant while he was carrying on the theatre, but refused to bring in a claim in the debenture-holders' action, & threatened proceedings in the K. B. Div. The receiver applied by summons for an order that the E. co. should bring in their claim in the debenture-holders' action within seven days & be restrained from taking any proceedings to enforce it:—Held: this was a dispute as to the conduct of an officer of the ct. in respect of which the ct. was entitled to claim exclusive jurisdiction, & it would not allow its own officer to be sued in another ct. in respect of acts done in discharge of his office.—*Re MAIDSTONE PALACE OF VARIETIES, LTD., BLAIR v. 922. ————]—There is no inflexible rule that a trustee can only be appointed receiver on the terms of his having no remuneration.

Testator directed his trustees, of whom S. was one, to allow S. to manage his business during her own life, subject to a power in the co-trustees to stop the carrying on the business if carried on unsuccessfully for any period of eighteen months. S., while she managed the business was to have one-fourth of the net profits, but not to an amount exceeding £800 a year. Shortly after testator's death a judgment for administration was made, which directed inquiries as to the business, & appointed S. receiver & manager of it as from testator's death, without giving security, not saying anything as to remuneration. About fifteen months after testator's death S. resigned her office, having been in bad health for several months, & shortly afterwards died. The business had fallen off, & the profits for the whole period of her receivership were very trifling. Her exors. in passing her accounts asked for remuneration to be allowed her at the rate of £800 a year. The residuary legatee insisted that there ought to be no remuneration. The judge allowed £500, being at the rate of £400 a year. The residuary legatee appealed:—Held: although the ct. does not usually appoint a trustee to be receiver except on the terms of his having no remuneration, there is no inflexible rule that he shall not receive remuneration, & the fact of the judgment not mentioning remuneration did not amount to a decision that there should not be any, the judge therefore had a discretion, & no ground was shown to induce the Ct. of Appeal to interfere with his exercise of it.—*Re BIGNELL, BIGNELL v. A loss occurred, in consequence of the receiver's liability being only in the nature of a simple contract debt. The solr. was, at the instance of a deft., made personally liable for the loss occasioned by his neglect:—Held: the country solr. was liable, though the representations were made by his London agents.

There is no general & universal rule that £5 per cent. should be allowed for the receipt of the rents & profits, the allowance in cases of extraordinary difficulty being increased; & in cases of extraordinary facility, diminished. Generally speaking, in the greater number of instances, they were allowed £2 10s. per cent. for receiving gross sums; but, on many occasions, that is reduced to £1 10s. per cent. 959. — Costs properly incurred.]—Though a receiver, who has defended an action without having first obtained leave of the ct. so to do, will not usually be allowed his costs, the ct., under particular circumstances, allowed the receiver the costs of defending an action of trover in which he had been successful, as the costs of the defence had not exceeded such as would have been authorised by the ct.

If the possession which the receiver holds of any description of property under the order of the ct. is assailed by any other party by acts of violence or litigation, it is the duty of the receiver to come to the ct. & to take the direction of the ct. as to what course he should take in the case of any such hostile proceedings. . . . In every case the ct. will inquire whether any unnecessary costs have been incurred by the receiver in adopting a course he ought not to have pursued; & if the ct. finds no additional costs have been incurred, it would not be very just against the receiver to punish him by making him pay those costs which, if he had taken the right course, must have fallen on the estate. . . . If he can show that no additional costs had been incurred by the course he pursued, then the estate is not prejudiced, although he had done that which was irregular to the prejudice of himself; & it is no reason why he should not be indemnified out of the estate those costs which must necessarily have come out of the estate whatever course he might have taken. . . . The ct. is not to lay down a rule that, if an action is brought against the receiver, the receiver must take his chance of defeating plff., or if he comes to the ct. to ask the direction of the ct. that he, the receiver, is to bear the expense of coming here (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—BRISTOWE v. NEEDHAM (1847), 2 Ph. 190; 9 L. T. O. S. 69; 47 E. R. 860, L. C.

When an action had been brought against a receiver & administrator pendente lite charging him with personal fraud & misconduct while acting as administrator & receiver, but otherwise having no relation to the estate except so far that the acts complained of were acts done by him while acting as an officer of the ct.:—Held: the receiver was not entitled to be indemnified against the costs incurred in successfully defending this action.—*Re DUNN, BRINKLOW v. 976. — —.]—B., in Oct. 1862, was appointed receiver in a cause in which he was a deft. The bill, which alleged a partnership, between H. & B., was in Nov. 1863, dismissed with costs. The minutes proposed that the receiver should pass his accounts, & pay into ct. the balance which should be certified to be due from him. An application to vary, on the ground that passing the accounts had become unnecessary, was refused, with costs.—HUTTON v. BEETON & M'MURRAY, BEETON v. M'MURRAY & HUTTON (1863), 9 Jur. N. S. 1339.

977. Compliance with order for payment—What amounts to.]—When an action is commenced in a district registry & money is ordered to be paid by a receiver into ct. to the credit of the action, it is not a compliance with that order to pay the money into a bank "to the credit of the district registrar." That mode of payment is irregular, & the money will be ordered to be brought into ct. under Court of Chancery Funds Act, 1872 (c. 44), & Rules.—FINLAY v. DAVIS (1879), 12 Ch. D. 735; 39 L. T. 662; 27 W. R. 334.

1027. Appointment on misleading evidence.—In a debenture-holder's action by plffs. S. had been by order of Nov. 27, 1916, appointed receiver & manager of the property & assets of defts. In an affidavit of W. described as a "director of public cos.," he stated that for five years past he had known S. of No. 1, R. Street, A., "accountant," the proposed receiver & manager, that the accountant had carried on business as such for upwards of five years at No. 1, R. Street, & elsewhere in the City of London, & that S. was a person of respectability & a fit & proper person to be appointed receiver & manager of defts.' property & assets. S. was, according to the evidence, secretary to a political league, & had an office at No. 1, R. Street, for two months past, & there was no evidence that he had carried on business as an accountant. On motion to discharge S. from the receivership:—Held: the appointment had been procured by means of a misleading affidavit, & the receiver must be discharged.—Re CHURCH PRESS, LTD., VICTORIA HOUSE PRINTING CO., LTD. v. CHURCH PRESS, LTD. (1917), 116 L. T. 247.

1029. Receiver absconding.—SHACKEL v. MARLBOROUGH (DUKE) (1844), 1 Seton's Judgments & Orders, 6th ed. 805.

1030. Irregular rendering of accounts.—A receiver had been accustomed to bring in his accounts very irregularly in point of time, & thereby the actual balances in his hands never clearly appeared. He was specially ordered to bring in his accounts before a given day in every year, accompanied with an affidavit, showing the actual balance in hand, inquiries were also directed as to his former balances, & he was ordered to pay the costs of the application.

The conduct of the receiver has been very irregular; petitioner has great reason to complain of it; & for the protection of petitioners, it is necessary that the receiver should be discharged, or that some better security than has hitherto been afforded should be provided. Petitioner must be indemnified from the costs of it. The receiver must pay them, & if he has not acted in concert with those who are entitled to the estate subject to the charges, he must personally bear them. If he has acted in concert with them, or been countenanced by them, it may not be improper to allow him to charge them in account, against any balance of the rents which may remain after payment of the charges (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—BERTIE v. SUB-SECT. 5.—ON BEHALF OF PRIOR INCUMBRANCER.

1034. Establishment of prior title.—Cestuis que trust under a will instituted a suit to have the trusts carried into effect & to set aside a mtge. of a part of the trust estate made by the trustees. By the terms of the mtge. the mtgees. were not entitled to take possession except upon a prescribed notice. Before this notice had been given plff. had obtained an order for a receiver, & also an order to take proceedings with respect to a claim adverse to the interests of all the parties to the suit. Afterwards a decree was made in the suit, establishing the validity of the mtge. & directing a sale, in which all parties were ordered to join. The mtgees. neither consented to nor opposed the interlocutory orders being made, nor did they at the hearing ask for a dismissal of the bill as against themselves, or oppose the insertion of the direction for a sale. They afterwards applied to have the receiver discharged & to be let into possession, & gave the notice prescribed by the mtge. On their application being refused, they appealed from the refusal, & at the same time from so much of the decree as rendered it obligatory on them to concur in the sale:—Held: (1) they had not adopted the proceedings in the suit, but were entitled to priority over the costs of it & of the action, & also to have the receiver discharged & the decree varied so far as it bound them to join in the sale; (2) testator's estate in the subject of the security being equitable, the ct. might direct possession to be delivered to the mtgees.—LANGTON v. LANGTON (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 30; 3 Eq. Rep. 391; 24 L. J. Ch. 625; 24 L. T. O. S. 294; 1 Jur. N. S. 1078; 3 W. R. 222; 44 E. R. 12, L. J.J.

executed by deft. before the judgment in the action, the Q. B. B. Div. declined to review the evidence upon which the master had acted, accepted his report as conclusive, & refused G.'s application:—Held: inasmuch as the receiver was appointed under an equitable jurisdiction now vested in the Q. Clause 34 provided that the co. should pay the B. trustees a fixed remuneration per annum to continue payable until the trusts of the B. security should be finally wound up & whether or not a receiver should be appointed or the trusts should be administered by the ct. The B. security became enforceable & a receiver was appointed in a B. stockholder's action. This receiver was superseded by a receiver appointed in an action by the trustees of a prior lien security, to which action the B. trustees were parties, & in which their security was established. The hotel was actually sold by the prior lien trustees, the entire purchase-money being received & paid by them into ct. in pursuance of an order in the prior lien action. The B. trustees joined in the conveyance. After discharging the prior lien a considerable surplus was left in ct. for the B. stockholders:—Held: the B. trustees were entitled to their fixed contractual remuneration under clause 34 until the trusts of the B. security were finally wound up, & under clause 18 to a lien on the surplus proceeds of sale in ct. in priority to the B. stockholders.—Re PICCADILLY HOTEL, LTD., PAUL v. 1053. Principal.—By a general order of the Ct. of Ch. the receiver under a trust estate, enters into a recognisance with two sureties, for the faithful discharge of his duties. A receiver is allowed a salary, but if he neglect his duty, then a master in Chancery has the power to deprive him of it, & also to order him to pay interest on the amount of money retained in his hands. A receiver, who was ordered to pay over a sum of money & interest, became a bkpt., & the Ct. of Ch. sent a case to the Ct. of K. B., to be informed whether the sureties were bound in law to pay that interest. This ct. held, that the recognisances being forfeited, the penalty was the debt, & consequently, that the ct. of equity might make them pay to that amount, & thus include the interest.—*DAWSON v. The registrar certified that W. was entitled to be indemnified against £900 due to trade creditors but subsequently certified that £400 was due from W. on passing his accounts. W. was ordered to pay this sum into ct., but became bkpt., & never did so. The sureties submitted to the jurisdiction of the ct. as fully as if the bond had been put in suit, & a summons was taken out on behalf of the trade creditors asking that a certificate should issue finding £100 due from W., that he had made default, & that the sureties were liable to make good that default:—Held: the trade creditors could only claim through W. to the extent of his right to indemnity against the estate. An order, by consent, was made accordingly, on paying the costs of the application, & of proceedings consequent on the order.—WALKER v. WILD (1816), 1 Madd. 528; 56 E. R. 194.

SECT. 4.—INDEMNITY.

1065. Agreement with receiver for indemnity—Against loss through default of receiver—Validity.]

—A receiver cannot be permitted to enter into any agreement with his sureties by which he, in effect, indemnifies them against any loss that may accrue from his dealing with the receivership fund. The security for his good conduct must not be worked out of the estate itself.

Nor can he be permitted to put the fund entrusted to his care under their control or the control of any person appointed by them, but must retain the complete control over it in himself, so as to be liable to act with promptitude on any emergency.

It makes no difference in such a case that the arrangement between the receiver & his sureties has not been the direct cause of a loss, nor that neither of them has obtained any personal advantage from it.

Where an order has been made in a cause directing a receiver to pay the fund to a particular person, & that person dies, the receiver is not bound in the first instance to take out a representation to the deceased, nor to apply to have the order revised; it is sufficient for him to keep the money in the custody in which it was originally placed, until the state of the proceedings in the ct. enables him to pay it over.

It is clearly the duty of the receiver, as an officer of the ct., to keep in his own hands the control over the fund (LORD BROUGHAM).—WHITE v. BAUGH (1835), 3 Cl. & Fin. 44; 9 Bli. N. S. 181; 6 E. R. 1354, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. SALWAY v. SALWAY (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 215, L. C.

—A person appointed in a cause to be receiver of the rents of testator's estate was entitled to some shares of that estate by descent, & had acquired others by purchase. By deed he gave to his sureties by way of indemnity a security on the descended shares, expressly excluding the purchased shares, but without any expression of an intention to exonerate them from such liability as they might by law be subject to. The receiver became bkpt., being considerably indebted to the estate; & the assignees sold his purchased shares. On further directions, it was declared that the descended & the purchased shares were liable to make good to the other part owners under the will so much of the balance due from the receiver as the sureties were not liable for, & from this declaration there was no appeal:—Held: the sureties had for the sums paid by them the same lien on the receiver's shares as the other part owners would have had, & they had not by taking the security on the descended shares lost this right as against the purchased shares.—*BRANDON v. The surety paid the amount to the solr. prosecuting the proceedings, & then applied to have his recognisance vacated. The petition was served on pltf. who did not appear. The ct. refused to make the order, but directed pltf. to be served with a notice, that the order would be made on a given day, unless pltf. showed cause to the contrary. 1081. —.]—Arts. of partnership provided that the partnership should continue for fourteen years from Jan. 1, 1891; that if any partner should die or become bkpt., he should be deemed to have ceased to be a partner on the date of such death or bkpty., & his share in the capital should remain as a loan to the surviving or continuing partners or partner during the residue of the term of fourteen years, or during such shorter period as they should carry on the business, either alone or in partnership with others, bearing interest at 5 per cent., & the payment of the loan with interest should be secured by the joint & several bond, or the bond or covenant of the surviving or continuing partners or partner.

The partnership firm consisted of a father & his three sons, of whom deft. was the youngest. The whole of the capital was provided by the father. In June, 1892, the father & the two elder sons became bkpts., & the trustees in their bkpty. brought an action against deft. for a declaration that the provisions of the arts. under which deft. claimed to retain as a loan the respective shares of the bkpts. in the capital of the partnership were void as against the creditors of the bkpts., & moved for the appointment of a receiver & manager of the partnership business. Deft. claimed the right, as solvent partner, to be appointed receiver & manager:—Held: deft. was entitled to be appointed receiver & manager; but that he must give security, pass his accounts, furnish plffs. with proper accounts, allow them all reasonable access to the books, & pay the balances in his hands, as & when they reached a certain amount to be agreed upon, into ct., or into a joint banking account of plffs. & himself.

I do not think it desirable to appoint deft. manager & some one else receiver, as that course sometimes leads to difficulties (STIRLING, J.).—COLLINS v. BARKER, [1893] 1 Ch. 578; 62 L. J. Ch.

1082. Appointment for limited period.]—Upon default being made by a co. in the payment of interest on the debentures issued by it, a debenture-holder commenced an action on behalf of himself & all other debenture-holders against the co. for the enforcement of their security, & for the appointment of a receiver & manager. A receiver & manager was duly appointed, & on the co. subsequently going into voluntary liquidation, he was continued as liquidator. The action came on as a short cause upon motion for judgment. The minutes provided for an account to be taken of what was due under & by virtue of pl'tfs.' security & for a sale; also for the continuation of the receiver & manager until further order:—Held: the minutes ought to contain a provision, not only for the continuation of the receiver & manager but also for his discharge, & a direction should be inserted in the minutes that the business of the co. was not to be carried on by the receiver & manager for a longer period than six months without the leave of the judge in chambers; & if any further time should be required, an application for further time must be made before the expiration of the six months.—*DAY v. 1095. Foreign mine.]—An assocn. was formed in England to conduct mining operations abroad. The property was vested in two & became vested in one by survivorship. The shareholders had no evidence of their title excepting the holding of certificates, being entitled to the benefit of them. The surviving trustee made advances out of his own money to carry on the business of the assocn., & offered to sell the property, & after payment of the money due to him to divide the produce among the shareholders rateably, but he refused to make out a full & satisfactory account of his outlay. On a bill filed by a shareholder on behalf of himself & all other shareholders, except the trustee, the ct. granted an injunction to restrain all selling or dealing with the property by him, except in the ordinary course of business, & appointed a receiver & manager of the business in this country with directions to apply the money received in discharge of the liabilities in the ordinary course of business.—*SHEPPARD v. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1105. Duties.—To investigate state of business—& inform creditors thereof.]—A receiver & manager of the property & business of traders who had filed a liquidation petition was appointed by the ct. under Bkcy. Rules, 1873, r. 260. Without obtaining any previous sanction from the ct., or the creditors, he expended a considerable sum in obtaining a valuation of the debtor's assets, & he also employed the debtors to assist in managing the business at a weekly salary:—Held: (1) the ct. had a discretion as to allowing the sums so expended, & under the circumstances they had been properly allowed; (2) the sanction of the ct. to the expenditure could be given after it had been made; (3) it is the duty of a receiver, whether appointed by the ct. or nominated by the creditors, to investigate the state of the debtor's affairs, & inform the creditors at their first meeting, what he believed to be the value of the debtor's assets.—*Re GOMERSALL, Ex p. 1111. — Authority to contract with servants—For protection of business—Restraint of trade.]—The receiver & manager of a restaurant business, appointed by the ct. in certain Ch. proceedings, required each of the waiters at the restaurant to sign an agreement that in consideration of the employer retaining the waiter's services at 4s. per week, the latter agreed not to enter into the service of a new restaurant, about to be opened in the vicinity, during the current year, & in case of breach to pay £1 a day for every day he might remain in the service of the new restaurant as liquidated damages:—Held: the receiver & manager had authority to enter into the agreement, & it was a reasonable agreement necessary for the protection of the business.—*HOWARD v. 1126. — — —.]—The right of a consignee of a West Indian estate gives him a lien on the plantation in respect of the balance due to him, & is an exception to the general rule, which applies to principal & agent. Such lien not being the result of an express contract, but given by implication of law, if created by written contract, is excluded. Therefore, if a consignee takes an express security, such security being the stipulation & agreement of the parties, it excludes his general lien. So held by the Judicial Committee, where the party claiming a general lien as consignee, was also a mtgee. of certain estates, & had, by deed, stipulated for the consignment of their produce, as well as that of other plantations, subject to the rights & interests of existing mtges. then subsisting thereon.—*Re LEITH'S ESTATE, CHAMBERS v. 1127. — — — Cultivation expenses.]—The consignee of a West Indian estate, who had, out of his own moneys made payments on account of an annuity charged on the estate, was held entitled to be reimbursed such payments out of compensation money which had been awarded under the Act for the Abolition of Slavery.

1128. — Payments sanctioned by court.]—West Indian estates were divided upon trust for sale & distribution of the proceeds among testator's children absolutely. In a suit for the administration of the trusts consignees were appointed, & pending the suit settlements were made of the children's shares, by which interests for life & in reversion were limited. In making payments which had been sanctioned by the ct., the consignees became in advance to the trust estate:—Held: these advances were a charge upon the corpus of the trust estate.—*MORISON v. 1129. ———— In priority to incumbrancers.—Ex p. DAVIS & BODDINGTON, Ex p. CHAPMAN, Ex p. GREATHEAD (1859), 3 Sol. Jo. 544.

1130. ———— The rights of lien, of consignees in this country & of the resident managers of West Indian plantations on the estates, rest upon the same principle.

The manager of a West Indian plantation has a lien for the costs of management on the interest of the person appointing him; but if appointed by a tenant for life, he has also a lien for the supplies which produced the first crop taken by the remainderman.

Where the appointment of a manager of a West Indian plantation is not express, yet if the persons interested in the estate know that he is performing the duties & do not interfere, they must be presumed to have acquiesced in his continuance in that office, & they cannot dispute his claim to a lien on the estate for the expenditure, which, by their tacit acquiescence, they have encouraged him to make.

Where a receiver or manager of a West Indian plantation is appointed by the ct. in a suit properly constituted, he is considered as appointed on behalf of all persons interested in the property, & he is entitled to his ordinary commission & allowances & also to a lien on the estate, as against all persons interested in it, for the balance due to him.—BERTRAND v. DAVIES (1862), 31 Beav. 429; 54 E. R. 1204; sub nom. BERNARD v. DAVIES, 32 L. J. Ch. 41; 9 Jur. N. S. 34; 11 W. R. 48; sub nom. BERNARD v. DAVIES, Ex p. BERTRAND, 7 L. T. 372.

1132. ———— Against persons having prior title to owner.—(1) An agent employed to manage a West Indian estate by the owner, subject to the charges upon it, is not as such entitled to a lien on the inheritance in respect of his advances for cultivation against those whose title is prior to that of the employer. If a trustee is in possession of a plantation managing it on behalf of all parties, & employs a manager, such manager has the same remedies as the trustee who employed him, for the expenses & advances.

(2) When the Ct. of Ch. is in possession by a manager & receiver, it acts for all persons interested, & its officer has at least as extensive remedies against the estate as a trustee.

(3) The security proposed to be given by [the receiver] was afterwards waived by the parties interested (LORD KINGSDOWN).—FRASER v. BURGESS (1860), 13 Moo. P. C. C. 314; 2 L. T. 446;

1134. ———— On future profits.—A West Indian plantation is a species of trade, & cannot in general be carried on without advances from a consignee in this country, to be reimbursed out of the future proceeds. This difference between West Indian estates & landed estates here, affects the mode in which cts. view the dealings & conduct of trustees & even the construction of wills & instruments relating to the former estates. Semble, a consignee advancing money to carry on a West Indian plantation has an implied lien on the future profits for such advances.—DANIEL v. TROTMAN (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 123; 2 New Rep. 92; 8 L. T. 522; 9 Jur. N. S. 583; 11 W. R. 717; 15 E. R. 649, P. C.

1137. ———— Testator devised seven different estates in the West Indies in trust for his grandson for life, with remainders over. Before the grandson attained the age of twenty-four when he was to come into possession, consignees of the estates were appointed. A suit was instituted in Jamaica for the purpose of having the manager's account passed in the island; but when the tenant for life attained twenty-four, in 1818, it ceased to have operation. One of the estates, viz. L., was charged by testator with an annuity which the consignees paid for many years until in 1852 they found that the proceeds of the L. estate had been quite insufficient to do so, & they were declared creditors in respect of the amount in excess which they had so paid, & a reference was directed to ascertain what the amount was:—Held: the consignees were bound to have kept a distinct account of the receipts & expenditure of the L. estate so as to be able to show from time to time how the deficiency arose.—*THARP v. 10. —.]—Appcts., a board of guardians, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, now the Ministry of Health, but apparently without statutory authority, granted to the registrar of births & deaths certain gratuities, subject to a deduction for superannuation allowance. On the registrar's retirement appcts. granted him a superannuation allowance based on his fees plus the gratuities, & the district auditor, acting under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), s. 32, disallowed & surcharged on certain of the guardians the difference between the amount due on the basis of fees alone & the amount due on the basis of fees plus gratuity, on the grounds that, though he was precluded by Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887 (c. 72), s. 3, from disallowing the gratuities, their payment was unlawful, & they were not "emoluments" within Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (c. 50), s. 3, for the purpose of calculating superannuation, allowance. The guardians then obtained a rule nisi for a certiorari to quash the certificate of disallowance & discharge, on the grounds that the gratuities were "emoluments" within the Act of 1896, & that the sanction of the Ministry of Health legalised their payment. By sect. 19 of the Act of 1896 the expression "emoluments" includes "all fees, poundage, & other payments made to any officer or servant as such for his own use":—Held: the district auditor was not entitled to treat as illegal payments which had been authorised under the Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887 (c. 72); they formed part of the "emoluments" of the person to whom they were paid within Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (c. 50), s. 3, & were properly taken into account in computing his pension.

The registrar of births & deaths, who is not a servant of the board of guardians, & cannot be dismissed or controlled by them, is remunerated first of all by a scale of fees, depending on the number of births & deaths he registers, fixed by the Act of 1836 & paid by the guardians, & secondly, by a scale of fees contained in the Act of 1874 for services rendered in the way of supplying certificates, copies of certificates, & extraordinary work to persons who register (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—R. v. GRAIN, Ex p. WANDSWORTH GUARDIANS, [1927] 2 K. B. 205; 96 L. J. K. B. 563; 136 L. T. 776; 91 J. P. 71; 43 T. L. R. 342; 71 Sol. Jo. 308; 25 L. G. R. 231, C. A.

11. Remuneration—Mode of.]—R. v. GRAIN, Ex p. WANDSWORTH GUARDIANS, No. 10, ante.

12. — What guardians liable—Workhouse not belonging to parish in which situated.]—By a local Act, the management of the poor of a parish was vested in trustees, who paid to the registrar of births & deaths for the district within which their parish was situate, fees for the registration of births & deaths occurring in a workhouse locally situate within their parish, but belonging to another parish, & built by the guardians of that parish for the reception of the poor thereof under a local Act:—Held: under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), s. 56, the last-mentioned guardians were bound to repay to the trustees the amount of fees so paid to the registrar & a peremptory writ of mandamus was issued to compel them to do so.—R. v. ST. LUKE, MIDDLESEX GUARDIANS (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 214; 4 W. R. 230.

13. — Liability to attachment.]—Fees earned by a registrar in respect of births & deaths actually registered are debts accruing due so as to be attachable before the accounts have been vouched or time for payment has arrived.—EDMUNDS v. EDMUNDS, [1904] P. 362; 73 L. J. P. 97; 91 L. T. 568.

Part II.—The Registers.

SECT. 1.—CORRECTION OF ERRORS.

See 1874 Act, ss. 8, 36.

15. Power of court to correct—Entry made for fraudulent purpose.]—The ct. has no power to issue a mandamus to the registrar of births, etc., under 1836 Act, commanding him to erase the entry of a birth, on its appearing that the child was supposititious, & that the entry has been made for fraudulent purposes.—*Ex p. SECT. 3.—SEARCHES.

16. Right to search—Subject to proper control.]—Pltf. applied to deft., a parish clerk, who kept the parish registers under the direction of the rector, for permission to search them. He told deft. he did not want certificates, but only to make extracts, & was informed that the charge would be the same whether he made extracts or had certificates. He accordingly searched the registers & made extracts. The evidence was, that no mention of the charge was made before the search, but that pltf. was told by deft. that the charge was 3s. 6d. for each extract, the amount of which he paid:—Held: (1) the payment was not voluntary, & pltf. was entitled to recover the excess paid in an action for money had & received; (2) deft., & not the rector, was the party to be sued.

(3) Semble: the fees if taken by the clerk after the examination of the book, would have been taken colore officii, & might have been recovered back.

(4) Semble: pltf. was entitled to take minutes in the course of his search, but not to occupy an unreasonable time for that purpose, nor to have the registers in his hands, it being the duty of the clerk to superintend the search, & to keep a control over the registers.

PART II. SECT. 1.

a. Mandamus to Registrar to amend register.]—On an application under Births, Deaths & Marriages Act, 1804, s. 43 (3), to have the register amended, the Registrar refused to amend the register, being of opinion that by so doing he would bastardise the child:—Held: a writ of mandamus

Where the party searching takes extracts he is not bound to pay more than for a search. [Pltf.] had a perfect right to search (PARKE, B.).—STEELE v. WILLIAMS (1853), 8 Exch. 625; 1 C. L. R. 258; 22 L. J. Ex. 225; 21 L. T. O. S. 106; 17 J. P. 378; 17 Jur. 464; 156 E. R. 1502.

(2) If lessee for years of lands grants a rent out of said lands for the life of the grantee, such grant is good during the term, if the grantee live so long; but the grantee has but a chattel.

(3) Grant out of land in fee, & out of land for a term of years of a rent for the life of the grantee, the rent issues only out of the land in fee.

(4) In the principal case, Whiteacre during the term is subject to the distress, although the rent does not issue thereout.

(5) If a man grants a rent out of the manor of D., & further grants that, if the rent be behind, the grantee shall distrain for same rent in the manor of S., it is but a penalty in the manor of S., & not a rent issuing out of it.

(6) If the manor of D., out of which the rent is granted, be recovered by eigne title, all the rent is extinct; but if the manor of S., in which the distress is limited, be evicted, the whole rent remains.

(7) If the grantee purchases parcel of the manor of S., the rent is not extinct.—BUTT'S CASE (1600), 7 Co. Rep. 23 a; 77 E. R. 445.

7 ——— Conferred by statute.—A perpetual rent reserved as the consideration upon the sale of land, even though no power of distress is contained in the conveyance to the purchaser, is, upon a subsequent sale of the rent, not improperly described by the then vendor as a "rentcharge" inasmuch as a power of distress is conferred by 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 5.

In a contract for sale the subject-matter was described as "an aggregate yearly rentcharge of £215 9s. payable in perpetuity by the corp. of Liverpool in respect of a waterpipe rent, created under the authority of the corp. waterworks Act, 1855, & secured by covenants of the corp., & by a statutory charge on the rates leviable by the corp. under their Acts." The abstract of title showed, that in 1856 the vendor's predecessors in title, one of whom was an absolute owner, & the other a tenant for life under a settlement, had respectively granted lands & easements to the corp. in consideration of two rents of £1 5s. & £250, respectively, payable in perpetuity by the corp., & that the corp. had covenanted to pay those rents respectively. The rent comprised in the contract of sale consisted of the rent of £1 5s. & £214 4s. part of the rent of £250. The vendor was tenant for life under a settlement, & had sold under his statutory powers. The corp. waterworks Act of 1855, with which Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), was incorporated, empowered the corp. "to purchase, either absolutely for a sum in gross, or at an annual or other rent," certain lands "or any easement over same"; & the corp. waterworks Act, 1855, provided that "the persons empowered by Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), to convey lands shall have full power to convey or grant in perpetuity, at an annual or other rent, any lands, for the purposes of this Act or the Acts incorporated therewith, or any easements over such lands":—Held: the rent sold was not improperly described as a "rentcharge."

[It is said] you cannot reserve a rent out of an easement. No doubt a subject could not do so at common law; but the King could, even at common law, & the subject may do it by statute (DAVY, L.J.).—Re GERARD (LORD) & BEECHAM'S CONTRACT, [1894] 3 Ch. 295; 63 L. The annual sums were received by the bursar of the college for the trustees, pursuant to the directions in the will, & paid over by him. If all these annual payments were made out of the lands in county D. as far as the nett profits would go, the annual sums received by each fellow would be less than £10 & more than 40s. If the payments were made rateably out of the land in each county, in proportion to the profits received from each, a less sum than 40s. would be received by each fellow out of the lands in D.:—Held: the fellows had not a rentcharge, there being no power of distress.—*WEST v. 19. Money payment not charged on land.]—By a charter of incorporation & an Act of Parliament, the inmates of the "Hospital of King James at Gateshead" were to consist of a master, three ancient brethren, & by additions from time to time made, twenty-three younger brethren, the latter forming no part of the corp'n. The brethren, whose appointments were for life, were subject to certain rules, & were removable, though none had ever been removed, for certain misconduct. The estates of the hospital, which were originally granted to the master & brethren & their successors in free, pure & perpetual frankalmoign for ever, were under the management of the master, who, after payment of land & income tax, tithes, repairs & other outgoings, was to appropriate to his own use one-third of the net proceeds, & pay £25 a year to each of the three ancient brethren & £40, afterwards increased to £70, a year to the chaplain, & to reserve in his hands a balance not exceeding £60 to meet current expenses, & to divide the residue among the younger brethren in equal shares, yet so nevertheless that no younger brother should take such division more than £25. The number of younger brethren had never been increased so as to reduce their respective shares below £24 per annum. None of the brethren actually occupied any part of the hospital property :—Held : the younger brethren had neither a legal nor equitable estate in the lands & tenements belonging to the hospital ; nor a rentcharge thereon.

[It was contended] that this was a rentcharge. If, however, it is only a right to a money payment, it clearly is not a charge on land. Further, it is a fluctuating sum, for which there could be no power of distress (BRETT, J.).—SIMEY v. MARSHALL (1872), L. R. 8 C. P. 269 ; 2 Hop. & Colt. 1 ; 27 L. T. 581 ; 37 J. P. 119 ; 21 W. The Greenwich property passed to the trustees under the residuary devise :—Held : upon the true construction of the will, the annuity was not a rentcharge, but was a personal annuity secured by a charge on the Greenwich property, & the estate duty on it must be paid by the exors. as testamentary expenses.—*Re TRENCHARD, TRENCHARD v. 34. —.]—By agreement dated in 1634, the Earl of P., owner of the R. estate, agreed to pay to the churchwardens & overseers of the poor of the parish of P. a yearly rent of £6 for certain charity lands belonging to the parish, which were lying intermixed with his estate, & to set out sufficient land of a better value for performance thereof, which he should either tie for the said yearly rent, or otherwise assure & convey to such persons as should be nominated to be feoffees in trust for the same. No land appeared to have been set out or assured in accordance with this agreement, & the successive owners of the R. estate continued to pay the rent of £6, but in the course of time the estate became greatly subdivided, & upon a division & settlement of the property in 1786 a portion thereof was conveyed to the person through whom the present owner claimed it.

Upon the title deeds of this portion the annual payment of £6 was recited to be due to the parish of P.; & the owners of the other portions were indemnified against the payment. The portion of the estate which as between the several owners was liable to the payment was bought by the father of the present owner. The £6 was regularly paid by the purchaser & by the present owner when he came into possession, & a receipt for the money was expressed to be "for rent of parish lands." Upon an information filed at the relation of the churchwardens & overseers of the parish, charging that the boundaries had been confused, & praying for a commission to set out the parish lands, or other lands of equal value:—Held: the agreement of 1634 did not amount to a sale of the lands in consideration of a rentcharge, but with the entries & receipts conclusively established a tenancy from year to year, at a rent of £6.—*A.-G. v. 42. — —.]—Testator gave a rentcharge to issue out of lands in England, to A. for life, & directed that after her death it should be continued, & equally divided between B., C., & D. during their lives & the life of the longest liver. B. died domiciled abroad, leaving an English will, by which she disposed of her personal estate. On the death of A., who was survived by C. & D., the Crown claimed from B.'s exors. legacy duty in respect of B.'s third share of the rentcharge:—Held: such duty was payable, for the interest in the rentcharge which passed to B.'s exors. was, by the Wills Act, "an estate pur autre vie, applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate," & therefore fell within 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 20, & it was not exempt from duty by reason of B.'s foreign domicile, inasmuch as, although it was by law applicable in the same manner as personal estate, it was not by any of the statutes made personal estate, but was realty not following the person.—*CHATFIELD v. 43. Right of election of holder.]—T. devised an annuity of £300 per annum to his wife for life, then to accumulate to make a portion for his first daughter who should marry; then, in order to raise portions for other daughters; then to remain to his eldest son, & on his decease, to the heirs male of his body, & in case of his having no issue, remainder to his next eldest son & his heirs male. The daughters married in the life of the wife; the eldest & two other sons of testator died, leaving the wife without issue. This is not personal estate, vesting absolutely in the eldest son, on the principle, that it would be an estate tail in land; neither does it vest as an executory devise in the fourth son of testator who survived, but it is an annuity, & being exhausted by the events, there being nobody to take it as such, sinks into the residuary estate of testator.

Where it is charged upon land, it may be real or personal at the election of the holder: he may proceed against the land or against the person. If it is out of the coffers, it is personal only as to the remedy; but the property itself is real as to its descent to the heir (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH).—TURNER v. TURNER (1783), Amb. 776; 1 Bro. C. 52. Portion of estate.]—By will in 1810, B. devised to trustees his estate in Jamaica to hold to the use that H. should, out of the rents & profits, receive for life an annuity payable quarterly for her separate use, with powers of distress & entry & perception of the rents & profits, & after her decease to the use that the trustees should pay the annuity unto her children, as she should appoint, for their lives. Testator gave other annuities out of the rents & profits of same estate, & gave the estate to the use of his son for life, with remainders over. The last payment on account of H.'s annuity was in 1842. H. died in 1853. She made an appointment, & arrears were due to her & her appointees. The estate was for some years a waste, & no rents & profits were received till 1870, & when received they were paid into ct.

These annuitants are, in my judgment, as much entitled to recover their annuities as the estate itself, as they are only portions of the estate (HALL, V.-C.).—PITT v. DACRE (LORD) (1876), 3 Ch. D. 295; 45 L. J. Ch. 796; 24 W. R. 943.

The estate was insufficient to provide the eight sums.—Held: the four legatees, the capital of whose legacies was at their respective deaths to fall into residue, ought to be treated as annuitants; in accordance with the rule in Re Cottrell, Buckland v. Beddingfield, No. 195, post, their annuities & the other four legacies ought to be put on a level & abate rateably; & accordingly, the annuities must be valued as at a year from testator's death & the four amounts so ascertained must be treated as pecuniary legacies, & each of those amounts & of the other four legacies must bear its rateable proportion of the total abatement.

I think the case of *Arnold v. B. Acquisition of Seisin.

(a) Grant Operating at Common Law.

99. Possession not presumed.]—Where a freehold rentcharge was granted by deed in Jan. 1845, the first payment to be made in Jan. 1846:—Held: the grantee was not in possession under Representation of the People Act, 1832 (c. 45), s. 26, until the rent had been received, or had become due.

The question undoubtedly turns upon the meaning of the words "actual possession," & we think those words mean a possession in fact, as contradistinguished from a possession in law; & that as the possession in fact of a rentcharge must be the actual, manual receipt of the rent itself, or some part of it, or something in lieu of it, so there could be no such possession in fact in this case (TINDAL, C.J.).

As in the case of land there must be more than the execution of the conveyance—there must be the actual possession or receipt of the rents & profits, there seems no reason why, in the case of an incorporeal hereditament, there should not be such further actual possession as the nature of the subject itself is capable of (TINDAL, C.J.).—*MURRAY v. 100. —]—The assignee of a rentcharge is not entitled to be registered, unless he has been in the actual receipt of it for six months before the last day of July.

The authorities relied on in that case [Murray v. Thorneley, No. 99, ante] show that actual seisin is quite independent of the rent being due. The payment may be forward or backward. Claimants here became first actually possessed of this rentcharge on Apr. 29, & therefore have not been in actual possession for the time required by the Act (MAULE, J.).—*HAYDEN v. The first half-yearly payment was duly made on Apr. 5, 1872:—Held: (1) the use being specific & not inconsistent with the rest of the habendum, the whole habendum must be read as specific, & so read, the deed operated as a grant at common law, & not under the Statute of Uses; (2) the grantees had not been in the "actual possession" of the rentcharge.—*WEBSTER v. The first payment, payable on July 29, 1872, was paid on July 30:—Held: as the grant operated under the Statute of Uses, the case came within the decision in *Heelis v. A. having agreed to sell to B. a perpetual rentcharge of £500 issuing out of the estate, assigned to B. the rentcharge to which he was so entitled, & conveyed his reversion in fee to trustees in trust to secure to B. a rentcharge of £500 a year, to commence on the termination of the prior rentcharge:—Held: the transaction was not to be considered as a sale of an interest in reversion, as A. when he made the agreement, had it in his power to secure to B. a perpetual rentcharge of £500 in possession.—WARDLE v. CARTER (1835), 7 Sim. 490; 58 E. R. 925.

110. — Application of rule against perpetuities.]—A., being mtgd. in fee simple of certain lands, & the equity of redemption in fee belonging to B., by indentures of lease & release, dated Oct. 1838, between B. of the first part, A. of the second part, I. of the third part, & H. of the fourth part, B. did limit & appoint, & A. conveyed to H., & B. confirmed, the said lands, to have & to hold the same to H., his heirs & assigns, to the use of H., his heirs & assigns, for ever, subject to a proviso for redemption by B., his heirs, etc., on payment of £5,000. Amongst other provisos there was one, that if default should be made in payment of the £5,000, it should be lawful for H., his heirs & assigns to sell. This deed contained a proviso for quiet enjoyment by B. until default, also the following: "Provided always, & it is hereby expressly agreed & declared, between & by the parties hereto, that, if at any time hereafter, when, & so soon as H. & every other person claiming or to claim B. from, through, or under him, shall, under or by virtue, of any power or authority herein contained, enter into or upon or otherwise become possessed of the said premises, or any part thereof, the same shall from thenceforth be subjected & be charged to & with the payment to B., & his assigns of the annual sum of £40, & the same shall thenceforth be recovered or recoverable by distress or otherwise upon or out of the mtgd. premises." This conveyance was executed by A. & B. but not by H. Default having been made in payment, H. entered into possession for the purpose of exercising the power of sale, & by indenture, dated in 1847, conveyed to T., who entered into possession of the lands & duly paid the £40 rent:—Held: (1) the rent was well created by way of use; (2) the rentcharge was not invalid as commencing at a period too remote, & so contravening the rule against perpetuities.—GILBERTSON v. 119. ——— Consideration must be adequate.]—An agreement to purchase land for an annuity for the life of the vendor, to be a charge on the land & to be paid quarterly, entitles the vendor, not only to the security of the charge, but to the covenant of the purchaser for the payment of the annuity.

The ct. may not perhaps enforce the specific performance of a contract for the sale of an estate where the consideration is uncertain, as a life annuity, if such consideration be greatly inadequate; but a difference of 7 or 8 per cent. is not such inadequacy.—*BOWER v. jointure of a certain amount to any woman or women with whom they might respectively intermarry. One of the tenants for life covenanted on the occasion of his marriage, that if he should come into the possession of the devised estates, he would execute the power of jointuring in favour of his wife. After this, & before coming into possession of the estates under the devise, he became of unsound mind & continued so until his death, before which, however, he had become entitled to the possession of the estates:—Held: his widow was entitled to have the rentcharge enforced by way of jointure against the devised estates, under the covenant made by her deceased husband on his marriage with her.—*AFFLECK v. He subsequently made several mtges. of the property by deeds, some of which recited the annuity deed. The annuity deed had not been registered as required by Judgments Act, 1854 (c. 15), s. 12:—Held: as above Act was in similar terms to the clauses in the Registry Acts, which had been decided not to make an unregistered conveyance void as against a subsequent purchaser who had notice of it, the Legislature must be taken to have used the words in the later Act in the sense given to them by those decisions, & the annuities therefore were valid as against all the subsequent incumbrancers who took with notice of them, & against the trustee in bkpey. of the grantor.—*GREAVES v. 130. Power of tenant for life—To grant easement in consideration of perpetual rentcharge—Agreement confirmed by private Act—Right to alter.]—Under a settlement dated July 7, 1888, P. P. C. was in 1900 tenant for life in possession of a settled estate in the Isle of Thanet & was then a bachelor, & G. P. C. was then tenant for life in remainder. By an agreement dated Apr. 20, 1900 & made between P. P. C. & G. P. C. of the one part & the W. & B. Water Co. of the other part the co. was authorised to make an adit or tunnel under the settled estate, to be completed by Dec. 31, 1914, or such later date as the grantors should appoint, & it was agreed that upon completion the grantors should by deed grant to the co. the right in perpetuity to maintain & use the adit & that the co. should pay to the grantors in perpetuity a rent of 1s. a yard per annum & should supply a certain quantity of water free to farms on the estate. The grantors were defined as P. P. C. & G. P. C. & their successors in title under the settlement.

By the W. & B. Water Act, 1900, the co. was (inter alia) authorised to make the said adit, & by sect. 42 the said agreement was confirmed & made binding on the parties thereto & was set out in a sched. to the Act, but the settlement was not otherwise referred to nor any special powers conferred upon the grantors. The adit was not completed by the agreed date, which had been extended to June 30, 1915. It was now proposed that the completion should be postponed till Dec. 31, 1930, & that the co. should in consideration of the extension of time pay an increased rental & supply an increased amount of free water to the estate. P. P. C. was now married & had three daughters:—Held: though when an agreement confirmed by a private Act confers powers on a grantor outside any statutory powers special reference to such powers ought to be made in the Act, the confirmation of the agreement sufficiently expressed the intention of Parliament to confer such powers, & P. P. C. & G. P. C. jointly could further extend the time for completion of the works & grant a perpetual easement in consideration of a perpetual rentcharge which could be increased beyond the amount specified in the agreement.—*WESTGATE & BIRCHINGTON WATER CO. v. Testator died in 1771, but the £2,000 was never set apart. The owners of the estate, however, continued to pay £60 a year to the vicar for the time being of the parish, & though a question was suggested on certain occasions that the gift was void under Mortmain Act, & that the payment of the £60 a year was a voluntary payment, the vicars of the parish claimed it as of right, & the owners of the estate in their succession duty accounts treated it as a charge on the land, & a deduction in respect of the £60 a year was claimed by them & was allowed:—Held: the true inference was that the £60 a year was a charge upon the estate to which the vicar of the parish for the time being was entitled.—ROBINSON v. 139. —[A registered order of the Ct. of Probate does not create a charge on lands.

By an order of the Ct. of Probate, made on Feb. 5, 1861, it was ordered that pltf. should pay one of debts. an annuity of £25 during her life. This order was duly registered at the office of the senior master of the Common Pleas under Judgments Act, 1838 (c. 110). The annuity was afterwards assigned to P., who on Sept. 12, 1862, filed his bill to have it declared that the annuity was a charge on the leasehold property of pltf.

The more important point is that which was raised in Pratt v. Bull, No. 138, ante, & was, whether a registered order of the Ct. of Probate was a charge on this property. At this moment it is established, by the decision of Vice-Chancellor Stuart & the Lord Chancellor, that it creates no such charge (ROMILLY, M.R.).—BULL v. 143. Grant charged on more than one estate—Liability of estate legally subject.]—Estates at W. were settled to the use of J. L. for his life, remainders to his eldest son, the son's wife & their children, & ultimately to J. L. himself in fee. By lease & release afterwards executed, J. L., for the advancement of his eldest son & younger son, & for the settling, conveying, & assuring the messuage, lands, etc., after mentioned & particularly described, granted & released the same, which were also in W., but were entirely distinct from the first mentioned estates; & also all other, his messuages, cottages, closes, lands, tenements & hereditaments whatsoever in W. or elsewhere; & the reversion, remainder, rents, etc., of all & singular the premises granted & released, & all his estate therein, to the use that he, J. L., should receive thereout an annuity of £30 a year for his life, & after his decease that his eldest son should receive thereout an annuity of £10 a year for his life; & subject to the said annuities, to the use of J. L.'s younger son, his heirs & assigns for ever. He also assigned all his household goods to the younger son, on his covenanting to pay £20 to the elder:—Held: the first mentioned estates, though not named, passed to the younger son by the general words; & although the annuity of £10 could not legally be charged on both estates, this did not negative the intention to pass both; but the annuity must be taken as charged upon the estate which might legally be subjected to it, the property being sufficient.—DOE d. 145. — Manors & lands appurtenant.]—A rent granted out of several manors, & the messuages, lands, tenements, & hereditaments, of the grantor, situate, lying & being, in the parishes of E. W. & C. or elsewhere, in the same county, in any way appertaining or belonging to the said manors, or to any of them, issues only out of the said manors & the lands appertaining to them, & is not also issuing out of an acre of land, in the parish of C. of which the grantor was seised in fee at the time of the grant, & which acre was not parcel of any of the manors.—FINCH'S CASE

146. — Freeholds & copyholds—Grantor not admitted tenant of copyholds.]—Testator charged his real estate, of which he should die seised, with the payment of certain annuities. At the date of his death his real estate consisted of certain freehold premises & a copyhold public-house of which he had never been admitted tenant upon the rolls:—Held: testator did not "die seised" of the copyhold premises, & the annuities were a valid equitable charge upon the freehold premises, but not upon the copyhold premises of which he was not admitted tenant.—Re NORMAN, THACKRAY v. NORMAN (1914), 111 L. T. 903; 58 Sol. Jo. 706.

SUB-SECT. 1.—CREATION BY INSTRUMENT INTER VIVOS.

A. Form of Instrument.

154. Necessity for deed.]—An instrument reciting that it had been agreed to sell an annuity, secured upon property in possession of the grantor, but containing no words of present grant, cannot be sued upon in a ct. of law, even though it should be enrolled.

A grant of annuity must be by deed, & no action at law can be maintained upon any other instrument for the arrears of an annuity (per Cur.).—Re Locke (1823), 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 603; sub nom. Re Locke, Ex p. Langslow, 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 129.

155. — Life annuity.]—An agreement for a life annuity may be in writing, without deed, & an action of assumpsit will lie upon such agreement.—DURHAM (Bp.) v. ALLENUTT (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 411.

157. — Effect of part performance—Reconciliation after deed of separation.]—Upon the separation of husband & wife the husband covenanted with a trustee for the wife to pay her an annuity for her life. Shortly before the death of the husband, & at his solicitation, a reconciliation & reprobation took place in consideration of a parol promise by him to the wife & to her trustee to continue the payment of the annuity to her, & to charge it upon his real estate. The husband died without having carried into effect the parol promise:—Held: such promise was effectual to charge the land with the annuity as against the devisee of the real estate under the husband's will.

160. — — — — —]—By agreement, a partnership between two solrs. was to be dissolved, the accounts taken, & the continuing partner to pay an annuity quarterly, for three years, to the retiring partner. The latter died before the expiration of the third year, without having received any part of the annuity. On bill, filed within six years from his death, but after six years from the quarter day preceding it:—Held: the annuity was part of the agreement; & his representative was entitled to specific performance of the whole of the agreement, irrespective of the question whether he was or not barred by Stat. Limitations from recovering the annuity in a ct. of equity.—MURRAY v. PARKER (1850), 19 L. J. Ch. 530; 15 L. T. O. S. 22; 14 Jur. 664.

161. — — — — —]—An agreement between two solrs. in partnership together, that one of them should continue to carry on the business under their joint names, & should be entitled to all the profits thereof, & should grant to the other partner an annuity of £300 during the life of his mother, & in the event of his dying in the lifetime of his mother should pay to his widow an annuity of £100 during the remainder of his mother's life, & should indemnify him against all liability in respect of his name being used, & that the partnership should cease on the death of the mother of the retiring partner:—Held: the agreement must be considered to mean that an annuity was to be granted by deed, & the retiring partner was entitled to enforce specific performance of such agreement.—AUBIN v. HOLT (1855), 2 K. & J. 66; 25 L. J. Ch. 36; 4 W. R. 112; 69 E. R. 696.

162. — — — — —]—Past cohabitation is a sufficient consideration for an agreement to grant an annuity, & such agreement will be enforced by a ct. of equity.—KEENAN v. HANDLEY (1864), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 283; 10 L. T. 800; 28 J. P. 660; 10 Jur. N. S. 906; 12 W. R. 1021; 46 E. R. 384, L. J.J.

163. — — — — — After award in arbitration.]—(1) A demand for the payment of an annuity during the joint lives of two persons is properly the subject of a suit in equity.

(2) Where A. agrees with B. to pay money to C.,

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

g. Enforcement in equity—Specific performance—No adequate remedy at law.]—An agreement for the payment of a personal annuity for the joint lives of A. & B. will be specifically performed, & debt. directed to pay it, on the ground that there is no adequate remedy at law.—SWIFT v. SWIFT (1841), 3 L. Eq. R. 267.—IR.

the agreement may be enforced by a bill in equity filed by B. & C. against A. R. agreed with E. Y., for valuable consideration, to pay an annuity to W. for the joint lives of W. & R. Afterwards, at the suggestion of E. Y., it consented to allow the matters in question to be referred to arb'n. R. declined to comply with the award of the arbitrator, & a bill was filed by E. Y. & W. against R. to enforce compliance with the award, or, alternatively, for the specific performance of the previous agreement:—Held: on demurrer, a suit to enforce pltf.'s demand was sustainable in equity.—PEEL v. PEEL (1869), 17 W. R. 586.

164. Time for performance—Whether of essence of contract.]—Upon a motion for a reference of title, where the performance of the contract is resisted upon other grounds, the ct. will look into the answer to see whether those other grounds are substantial or frivolous. Where the subject of the contract was a life annuity, & deft. insisted that time was of the essence of the contract a motion for a reference to the master upon the title was refused.—WITBY v. COTTE (1823), Turn. & R. 78; 1 Sim. & St. 174; 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 117; 37 E. R. 1024, L. C.

165. Construction—Contract ascertained from correspondence.]—Upon the construction of certain letters, aided by parol evidence:—Held: (1) testator for valuable consideration contracted to grant an annuity for the lives of certain persons; & upon the construction of testator's will; (2) the same annuity was charged as a "debt" upon his real estate, in exoneration of his personality.—MONEYPENNY v. MASCALL (1845), 2 Coll. 213; 63 E. R. 704.

166. — "Well & sufficiently secure"—Right to bond & covenant.]—When a party agrees to "well & sufficiently" secure an annuity & nothing is specified as to the security, the annuitant is entitled to have the bond & covenant of the grantor, although the grantor may invest a sum of money in the names of trustees in the public securities, the interest upon which would equal the amount of the annuity.—*PATERNOSTER v. C. Covenant to Pay.

169. Construction—Covenant controlled by recital—Liability restricted.]—By a deed of separation, after reciting an agreement by the husband to allow the wife £250 out of his salary as a searcher, the husband covenants generally to pay her £250 per annum during her life. The covenant is controlled by the recital, & dismissal from the office justifies non-payment of the annuity.—HESSE v. ALBERT (1828), 3 Man. & Ry. K. B. 406.

Annotation:—Consd. Crouch v. Crouch, [1912] 1 K. B. 378.

170. — Dividends of specified stock—Stock converted by Act of Parliament.]—By a marriage settlement, the husband covenanted to secure to the wife for her life, if she survived him, the dividends of a sum of £4,000 Navy 5 per cent. annuities. The husband had no stock in the Navy 5 per cents., at the date of the settlement, or at any subsequent period. By an Act of Parliament, the Navy 5 per cents. were converted into New 4 per cents., & by another Act, it was provided, that all obligations for the transfer of Navy 5 per cents. should be satisfied by a transfer of £105 in the New 4 per cents. for every £100 in the Navy 5 per cents. By a subsequent Act the New 4 per cent. annuities were converted into New 3½ per cent. annuities, & it was provided, that all obligations to transfer the New 4 per cents. should be satisfied by transferring an equal sum of New 3½ per cents. The widow under her settlement is entitled only to a transfer of £105 in the New 3½ per cents. for every £100 of the Navy 5 per cents. under her husband's covenant.—MILWARD v. MILWARD (1834), 3 My. & K. 311; 3 L. J. Ch. 141; 40 E. R. 119.

171. Restraint on anticipation—Attached to covenant with married woman—Valid.]—A deed of separation was executed in 1894 by resp. & his wife, the former covenanting to pay to a trustee thereunder an annuity for the separate use of the latter without power of anticipation. Power was reserved to resp. to give notice to the trustee after the expiration of twelve months from the date of the deed of his intention to pay a reduced amount, in which case, unless all the parties agreed as to the amount to be thereafter paid, the covenants in the deed should be void & of no further effect. Before the expiration of twelve months notice of such intention was given to the wife's solrs., & the wife instructed them to waive the stipulated notice to the trustee. In an action brought in 1904 to recover all arrears of annuity due under the deed as a still subsisting arrangement, the Supreme Ct. of the colony decreed the amount, holding that the wife's waiver of notice to the trustee was in contravention of the restraint clause in the deed:—Held: on the true construction of the deed the restraint clause applied to the annuity so long as it was payable, but not to the notice. Personal service thereof on the trustee was a mere formality which the wife was entitled to waive. Otherwise it was inequitable that she should enforce an obligation from which she had induced her husband to omit to free himself in the manner stipulated.

If there be a personal covenant for the payment of an annuity to a married woman for her separate use, there seems to be no reason why a restraint on anticipation should not be attached to the separate use; & when so attached, be as valid to all intents & purposes as it would be, if the subject of the separate use were income of a settled fund (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—MACNAGHTEN v. PATERSON, [1907] A. C. 483; 76 L. J. P. C. 94; 97 L. T. 412; 23 T. L. R. 727, P. C.

—See HUSBAND & WIFE, Vol. XXVII., pp. 101–132.

172. Right of covenantor—Evidence that annuitant alive.]—The ct. has no jurisdiction under R. S. C., Ord. 54, to make a declaration on an originating summons as to what evidence, if any, ought to be furnished to a person liable to pay an annuity to show that the annuitant is alive.

The position of a covenantor in a deed of this kind is that if he is sued he must decide whether he will defend the action, & if he does so, it is at his own risk. If the action goes on, it is for pltf. to prove that the event has happened which renders deft. liable to any claim, & it is impossible to prescribe which evidence can be given of that (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—*HUNT v. Therefore, where a lunatic purchased certain annuities for his life, of a society which at the time had no knowledge of his unsoundness of mind, the transaction being in the ordinary course of human affairs, & fair & bonâ fide on the part of the society:—Held: after the death of the lunatic his personal representatives could not recover back the premiums paid for the annuities.—MOLTON v. produce £20 per annum, which he directed to be annually divided among the poor of a parish. He then devised his real estates in that parish to A. & B., whom he also appointed exors. A. died a few years after testator. The annual sum of £20 was paid in the manner directed by the will, out of the rents of the real estates, by B. during his life, & after his death by his devisees on the supposition that it was a charge on the real estates. These payments were continued for about twenty-five years, when the devisees refused to continue the payment, & the exor. of B. then paid the £20 per annum for seven years, when he declined to continue to pay it. He had not received sufficient assets of B. to purchase the requisite amount of stock. An information having been filed to compel the exor. of B. to purchase the requisite amount of stock :—Held : he must be considered as having admitted assets of B., & he was decreed to purchase the stock, & make good the arrears of the annuity. —A. 183. Misapplication of fund—Liability of executor's interest—Enforcement against assignee.]—Testator bequeathed to A. & B., two of his three exors., so much money as would purchase £6,666 Consols, which stock he directed should stand in their joint names, upon trust to pay the dividends to C. for life ; the capital after C.'s death, to sink into the residue. He then, out of the residue, gave several pecuniary legacies, amongst which was a legacy of £5,000 to B., & bequeathed the surplus residue to D. Upon the death of testator, A. & B. purchased the Consols, pursuant to the directions of the will. A. afterwards died, & then B. sold out the stock, & applied the proceeds to his own use :—Held : quoad B. no appropriation was made of the stock, so as to separate it from the residue, & consequently C. & D. were entitled to be reimbursed rateably out of B.'s legacy of £5,000 the losses which they had respectively incurred by means of B.'s breach of trust.

If an exor. assigns his reversionary legacy, the assignee takes it subject to the equities which attached to the exor. ; & therefore, if the latter, though subsequently to the assignment, wastes testator's assets, the assignee cannot receive the legacy till satisfaction has been made for the breach of trust.—MORRIS v. The trustees invested a sum of £3,500 on a mtge. at 5 per cent. ; & the annuitant, who was one of the trustees, assigned the annuity to a purchaser, by a deed reciting that the £3,500 was appropriated to answer it. He afterwards was permitted by his co-trustees to call it in, & to misapply it :—Held : (1) the recital in the assignment precluded the purchaser of the annuity from being heard to say that there had not been an effectual appropriation of a fund to answer it ; (2) the provision in the will as to the insufficiency of the fund did not apply to the case ; (3) although the legatee of the annuity was only one of the trustees of the will, the purchaser from him could take no part of the assets till his defalcation was made good ; (4) on all these grounds, the purchaser of the annuity had no claim upon the residue.—BARNETT v. Appropriation—When discretion left to trustees—Whether exercised by court.]—Where trustees are directed to pay a certain sum to a person for life, & are empowered according to their discretion to invest the trust funds out of which that sum is to arise, but decline or neglect to act, & the assistance of a ct. of equity is sought in order to carry into effect the purposes of the will, the ct. will not, as a matter of course, exercise that discretion, but will only act on its established & known rules, unless the intention of testator plainly appears to exclude such a mode of proceeding.

Testator, after making certain specific bequests, proceeded as follows : " I give & bequeath to my trustees hereinafter named, so much of my personal estate & effects as, at the time of my decease, shall produce the clear annual income of £1,500 ; & I direct that the same shall be selected & appropriated & set apart, as soon as may be, etc., by my said trustees, in their uncontrolled discretion, upon trust to pay to his wife the dividends during her life or widowhood, & after her death or second marriage, the same was to become part of his residuary personal estate. He directed that if the annual produce so appropriated should be increased or reduced in amount, his wife was to receive the increased or reduced dividends, as the case might be, in lieu of those before directed to be paid to her. The trustees were fully empowered at their discretion to permit the personal estate to continue on the same securities as at the time of his decease, or to sell & re-invest, as testator himself might do. Some of the foreign funds ceased to pay any dividends, & the trustees refused to exercise their discretion as to altering the investments, but submitted to act as the ct. should direct.

The ct. refused to exercise the discretion vested in the trustees, but acting on its general rule in such matters, as testator had not expressed a different intention, directed the annuity to be raised by the purchase of an adequate sum in consols, & ordered the master to inquire, having regard to the interests of other parties under the will, what investments must be called in to effect this object :—Held : the decree thus made was correct.—PRENDERGAST v. Testatrix, at the date of her will, & thence till her death, had £50 a year bank long annuities, which would terminate in 1860:—Held: testatrix intended to give a perpetual annuity of £20, & the trustees of the will had not an option to make either a permanent investment, or set apart £20 a year long annuities, at their discretion; but were bound to take the course which was most for the advantage of the children of E., by investing in Consols such a sum as would produce £20 a year, to answer the legacy.—*HAGGAR v. The trustees, who had large discretionary powers of investment, secured a sum of £3,530 to answer the annuity, on a mtge. at 4½ per cent. of freehold ground rents, which were valued at £4,300:—Held: this was a sufficient security, & the trustees, being also residuary legatees, were not compellable to set apart a larger sum as the capital of the annuity.—*VICKERY v. 194. Right of annuitant—No right to value of annuity.]—WRIGHT v. CALLENDER, No. 424, post.

195. ————.]—Testatrix by her will, after giving certain pecuniary legacies, bequeathed to her husband an annuity of one pound a week during his life, & directed her trustees to appropriate & set apart & invest such sum of money as would when invested produce by the income thereof an annual sum equal to the amount of the annuity & to apply the income or, if necessary, the corpus of the fund so appropriated in payment of the annuity, which sum should on the dropping of the annuity fall into & form part of her residuary trust estate; & she devised & bequeathed the residue of her real & personal estate to her trustees upon trust for sale & conversion & payment of her debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & legacies, & to invest the moneys which should remain in certain investments, & to hold such investments upon certain trusts for the benefit of her son. The estate of testatrix was insufficient to pay the pecuniary legacies & to set apart a sum sufficient to answer the annuity to her husband in full. It was, however, sufficient to pay the pecuniary legacies, & the value of the annuity as at the date of her death:—Held: (1) the proper course for the trustees to adopt was to value the annuity as at the date of the death of testatrix according to the Govt. scale & to pay the amount of such valuation to the annuitant or invest it in the purchase of an annuity, as he should choose, & to pay the pecuniary legacies in full.

(2) In the ordinary case where there is a gift of an annuity to an annuitant with a direction to set aside a fund to answer the annuity, & the annuity is payable out of capital as well as income & there is a gift over of the residue, it was decided in Wright v. Callender, No. 424, post, & I think it is the law, that the right of the annuitant is to have the directions of testator carried into effect, & that if the estate is not sufficient to pay the annuity in full he is entitled to have the deficiency made up out of capital, but he must take the estate as it stands, & is not entitled to have the value of the annuity paid over to him (WARRINGTON, J.).—*Re COTTRELL, BUCKLAND v. No annuity was purchased, but the acting trustee paid to A. various sums exceeding the income of the share, & amounting together to three-fourths of the capital:—Held: the discretionary power was pro tanto well exercised, & the remaindermen on the death of C. were only entitled to so much of

198. Sale of property for purchase of annuity—Annuitant dying before completion.—Testatrix by her will bequeathed life annuities charged on land & subject to the annuities, devised the land to trustees on trust for sale. By a codicil she empowered the trustees to purchase govt. annuities for the annuitants, such govt. annuities, if purchased, to be in place of the annuities given to them respectively, & directed that the purchase-money should be a first charge on the proceeds of sale of the land, & that upon purchase of the govt. annuities the land should be discharged. The trustees proceeded to sell the land; the sale was completed & pursuant to the conditions of sale, a sufficient sum of money was deposited in a bank for the purchase of the govt. annuities, but such annuities were not actually purchased. One of the annuitants died after the contract of sale was entered into, but before completion or payment of the purchase-money. Another annuitant had subsequently died:—Held: the legal personal representative of the annuitant who died before completion was not entitled to receive from the trustees the value of her annuity; but the legal personal representative of the other annuitant was so entitled.

The amount of annuity which the residuary estate was sufficient to purchase was ascertained, but no annuity was purchased, & by an order of the ct. the residuary estate was directed to be invested in permanent securities, & the income to be paid to the widow & daughter equally during their joint lives, & it was declared that the difference for the time being between the value of the investments, & the price at which such an annuity could for the time being be purchased, would belong during their joint lives to the widow & daughter in equal moieties, & that each of them had power to dispose by will of one moiety of so much of the capital as, having regard to that declaration, should not be required to be retained as the price at which such annuity could for the time being be purchased. She also declared that neither annuitant should be allowed to have the value of the annuity in lieu thereof, & that if the annuitant should do or suffer any act or thing whereby the annuity should be assigned, charged, or incumbered, the annuity should thenceforth cease to be payable. She gave her residuary estate in trust for other persons. The estate was sufficient to pay all the pecuniary legacies in full & to provide sums enough to purchase annuities of the amounts given by the will, but was not sufficient to pay the legacies in full & to provide the two funds sufficient by their income to pay the annuities in full:—Held: the declaration as to cesser of the annuity on assignment, charge or incumbrance was not repugnant to the previous gift of the annuities, but there was a good gift over, on such an event happening, to the residuary legatees.—*Re DEMPSTER, BORTHWICK v. 247. Recovery of purchase-money—Paid in ignorance of death of annuitant.—L. who resided at Sidney, New South Wales, being entitled to an annuity for his life, assigned it, in 1847, to certain trustees, to dispose of it for his benefit. Pltf. entered into a correspondence by letter with the trustees, upon the subject of the purchase, & from the various letters which passed between the parties, it appeared that the terms of the purchase were not finally determined upon & settled until Feb. 28, 1849. Upon Feb. 6, the annuitant died. The purchase-money was paid by pltf. in ignorance of the fact, & was ultimately received by the extrix. of deceased:—Held: as at the time of the purchase of the annuity it had ceased to exist, pltf. was entitled to recover back the whole of the purchase-money from the extrix., on the ground that the money had been paid without consideration.—*STRICKLAND v. 249. Priority of assignee—As against creditor of grantor—Annuities charged on annuity.—D., by indenture, in 1799, demised estates in Ireland, of which he was seised for life, to trustees for ninety-nine years, on trust to pay him an annuity of £10,000, & to apply the residue of the rents & profits in payment of his debts. He soon after received the rents to his own use, excluding a receiver appointed by the Ct. of Ch. in England, in a suit instituted against him & the trustees for carrying the trusts into execution. In 1819 D. joined his eldest son B., the tenant in tail, in suffering recoveries of the estates, which, by a deed executed by them in 1822, were limited to trustees, among other trusts, to pay B. two annuities during D.'s life, with power to D. to charge the estates with £217,000, & power to B. to charge them with £100,000. In 1832, B. assigned his annuities & charge to W. to secure the repayment of moneys advanced. In 1835, W. having filed a bill in Ireland against D. & B., & others, for enforcing these securities, some of D.'s creditors, under the deed of 1799, who, in a suit instituted there in 1828, had obtained the benefit of the suit pending in England, with the appointment of a receiver over the trust estates claimed by their answer to W.'s bill, to be first incumbancers on D.'s annuity, to the amount of the rents received by him in breach of the trusts of the deed of 1799; & they filed a bill against him for an account, in 1836:—Held: as D.'s creditors, in their suits, never sought to attach his annuity before he granted the annuities out of it to B., but confined their proceedings to the carrying of the trusts of the deed of 1799 into execution, B. being no party to them, was by the deed of 1822 a purchaser for valuable consideration, without notice; his two annuities were well charged on D.'s annuity of £10,000; & W., as B.'s assignee, was a prior incumbrancer on it.—HOULDITCH v. WALLACE (1838), 5 Cl. & Fin. 629; 7 E. R. 543, H. L.

250. Effect of alteration of amount of annuity.]—An annuity duly charged on freeholds was by deed assigned, & by that deed a further security was given by the grantors upon copyholds in consideration of an additional sum of money paid to the grantors & the sum payable for redemption was increased in amount. The assignees of the annuity appeared in the memorial to be trustees for other persons, but the trust was not disclosed on the deed of assignment:—Held: the deed of assignment, so far as it affected the copyholds & so far as it contained any alteration of the term on which the original annuity was granted was void, but that it was valid as an assignment of the original annuity.—TIDD v. LISTER (1854), 3 De G. M. & G. 874; 2 Eq. Rep. 876; 23 L. T. O. S. 101; 78 Jur. 543; 2 W. R. 406; 43 E. R. 342, L. C. proceed in equity, but deft. might set off any sums bond fide advanced or paid on account of the annuity previous to the notice of assignment.—LAWRANCE v. BELL (1866), 14 W. R. 753.

The corp'n. subsequently sold property abutting on the roadway, which now formed the premises in question, by auction to T., subject to any rentcharges upon the property; & the question arose whether he was liable in respect of the rentcharge as owner of the soil of the street to the centre, which must be presumed to have passed to him on the conveyance of the property abutting thereon:—Held: as to the presumption of the highway passing ad medium filum, T. was liable to pay the rentcharge, the rule applied to streets in towns as much as to the country; & the presumption was not rebutted by the fact that the corp'n. had owned the soil beyond the medium filum.—*Re WHITE'S CHARITIES, CHARITY COMRS. v. 281. Rentcharge on reversion—Charged under power—Payment not postponed during life tenancy.—

Settlor conveyed freehold property to trustees, upon trust for himself for life; then upon trust for his widow for life; & after the death of the survivor of himself & his wife, as he should by will appoint; & subject thereto upon trust for his widow absolutely. The deed contained powers for the trustees during the lives of the tenants for life of the freeholds to lease & exchange them. Settlor, by his will, exercised the power of appointment, & bequeathed an annuity of £100 per annum to pltf. to be raised out of his freehold property. Testator died, leaving his widow surviving:—Held: the payment of the annuity was not to be postponed till the death of the tenant for life of the property, upon the reversionary interest in which it was charged; but was immediately raisable out of such interest.—PETTINGER v. AMBLER (1865), 34 Beav. 542; 55 E. R. 744; sub nom. PETTINGER v. BUNN, 12 L. T. 133.

A. Commencement.

(a) Creation by Will.

282. From testator's death.—The distinction between an annuity & a legacy is that the former commences from the death & the first payment is due at the end of the year. A legacy generally does not begin to carry interest till the end of the year.

If an annuity is given, the first payment is paid at the end of the year from the death: but if a legacy is given for life, with remainder over, no interest is due till the end of two years. It is only interest of the legacy; & till the legacy is payable, there is no fund to produce interest. I remember, when it was not clear in the case of the annuity; though it is so now certainly (LORD ELDON, C.).—GIBSON v. BOTT (1802), 7 Ves. 89; 32 E. R. 37, L. C.

(b) Creation by Deed.

Time from which deed operates.—See DEEDS, Vol. XVII., pp. 228–229, Nos. 426–436.

291. From execution of deed.—The deed which created this annuity was executed in 1713, by which an appointment was made of an estate under a power by a wife in favour of her husband; & it is an appointment of a legal estate, & not of a trust, as has been argued; for she appoints the trustees who stood seised to her use to stand seised to the use of her husband in fee, which is a conveyance of the legal estate; & she by the same deed has made this estate liable to these annuities; as to the commencement of which it seems to be her intent that they should not commence till after her death; for it seems an extraordinary thing, that she who has land at present in her hands, without any charge upon it, should make it liable to annuities to her relations immediately, when her husband & she might have children; but whatever her intent was, as she has not expressed when they shall begin, the law will raise a commencement for her, viz. from the execution of the deed. As to its being argued, that these annuities are to be paid three years after her death, those words in the appointment are so relative as to be applicable only to the gross sums in charity. . . . The present demand is either a rentcharge or a rent seck, & more naturally a rent seck, as there is no power of distress annexed to it, & it is not an annuity, for it is issuing out of land, & nobody's person charged (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—WESTON v. BOWES (1742), 9 Mod. Rep. 309; 88 E. R. 472, L. C.

B. Duration.

(a) Whether for Life or Perpetual.

292. General rule—Life annuity.—SAVERY v. DYER, No. 41, ante.

293. ———.]—Testator directed the investment of his property in the funds, & bequeathed to A. £50 per year for her & her three children; & after her decease, the money to be paid to each of them, as they attain the age of twenty-one; but, if either of them died, to be paid to the survivors:—Held: this gave not a life annuity, but such a sum in the funds as would produce £50 a year.

Where there is a simple bequest of an annuity, it implies no more than a gift for life, unless there is something else in the will to enlarge the gift.—POTTER v. BAKER (1851), 13 Beav. 273; 21 L. J. Ch. 11; 15 Jur. 1068; 51 E. R. 105; sub nom. POTTER v. BAKER, BALLARD v. WALLIS, 18 L. T. O. S. 115, L. J.J.

294. ———.]—Testator, by his will, gave an annuity in the following terms: I give devise & bequeath unto my son E. one clear annuity of £100 per annum, for & during his natural life, & should he die, a child him surviving, I continue the same annuity for such child's use & benefit, to be paid to his or her mother; & after making other bequests of legacies & annuities, he devised & bequeathed the residue of his estate real & personal or mixed on trust to keep up his plantations in the West Indies, in the next place to pay satisfy & discharge the several legacies & annuities before given & to apply the residue for the benefit of his wife & his other children:—Held: (1) the daughter of E. was, on the death of her father, entitled not to a perpetual annuity but to an annuity during her life only; (2) the direction to pay the annuity to the mother did not show that the annuity was to be confined to the minority of the child of E.

The general rule is, that where an annuity is given to a person by will, the will also creating the annuity, the annuitant takes it for life only.

On the principle of antecedent improbability adverted to by LORD COTTENHAM in Blewitt v. Roberts, No. 305, post, the rule is that an annuity given indefinitely is an annuity for life only, & an annuitant claiming a perpetual annuity must establish an exception in his favour (LORD TRURO, C.).—YATES v. He gave to A. the sum of £50 during her life. He left £800 per annum out of the proceeds of an East Indian estate, to be appropriated by his trustees to the maintenance & education of the eight children of his daughter, I., wife of C., provided the children should take his name, under forfeiture of the £800 per annum, should they decline to do so. If there should be an increased profit to £800 per annum, testator bequeathed the same as therein mentioned. If any of the children should die, their mother should have the benefit of deceased child or children's share or shares. The trustees should have the power, should any one of the children get into debt, to forfeit his share, & divide it with the other children. The trustees should have power to sell the East Indian estate, should the profits of the working not be sufficient to pay the annuities to the children; the proceeds of the sale to be invested in certain bonds, in the names of the said trustees for the benefit of the children. Should the profits not reach £800 annually from the working or sale of the estate, then the trustees should charge the residue of testator's property to make up the said annual sum of £800. Should the sale realise more than enough, when invested, to pay the sums, the extra proceeds should be invested in the aforesaid bonds for the benefit of I., but the sum to be paid to her from the said investment should not exceed £500 annually:—Held: the annuity to testator's widow was for life only; but the annuities to the children of I. were perpetual.—*HICKS v. As a general rule there can be no doubt that the gift of an annuity to A. is a gift of the annuity during the life of A. & nothing more. . . . There are cases in which the ct. has come to the conclusion that the gift is not really that of an annuity, but the gift to a person of the income arising from a particular fund without limit, & there the ct. holds that the unlimited gift of the income is a gift of the corpus from which the income arises. . . . It seems to me impossible to say that this is an appropriation of the fund unless I am prepared to hold that every charge of an annuity on any property & every gift of an annuity & of any property is an appropriation of the fund to meet the annuity so as to be a gift of the fund (FRY, J.).—*BLIGHT v. B. having died without issue:—Held: (1) the gift to the nephew & nieces was not void for remoteness; (2) they took the capital from whence the annuity proceeded absolutely, in equal shares as tenants in common.

I, therefore, understand the law to be, that when there is a gift of an annuity to one for life, or to several for lives, & then a gift afterwards to another person without any restriction, that means that the last taker is to have the capital from which the annuity was produced; consequently this annuity being given to the nephew & two nieces generally, without any words of restriction, they take the capital absolutely (MALINS, V.-C.).—EVANS v. The husband married again, & at the date of the decree there were four children of the first marriage, two daughters & one son, who had attained twenty-one, one son under age, & a child of a deceased daughter:—Held: the trust for maintenance & education did not cease upon the children attaining twenty-one, but the four children were entitled equally to one-half of the rents & profits during the life of their father, the daughters were equally entitled in the event of their marrying, & that the word "issue" was restricted to the first generation, & therefore, the child of a deceased daughter took no interest.—*FREWEN v. 362. Gift to single woman—Condition subsequent—Marriage with consent of trustees.—A mother by her will says, that if her daughter marry with the consent of trustees, or the major part of them, & signified in writing, before such marriage had, then I give to her, & not otherwise, £800 & directed M. to pay her £30 yearly whilst she continued sole, by £15 each May Day, & All Saints Day, & charged all her real estate with debts of all kinds & legacies. The daughter after the death of the mother married plff. without the consent of the trustees, & died soon after, but before her death the trustees declared their consent & approbation in writing. Lord Chancellor directed plff. should be paid the arrears of the £30 pro rata till the marriage; & in case the personal estate should be exhausted by payment of debts, so much of the real estate to be sold as will pay the £800 & arrears of the annuity.

In our law, where the condition is precedent, the legatary takes nothing till the condition is performed, & consequently has no right to come & demand the legacy; but it is otherwise where the condition is subsequent, for in that case the legatary has a right, & the ct. will decree him the legacy; but this difference only holds where the legacy is a charge on the real assets, & therefore, if this had been merely a personal legacy, should have been of opinion that as the marriage without consent would not have precluded M. of her right to this legacy in the Ecclesiastical Ct., no more would it have done so here (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*REYNISH v. annuity & gave her an annuity of £1,200 for life, & declared that if she should marry after his death she should be paid an annuity of £800 in lieu of the £1,200 & directed his trustees after her marriage to apply a sum of £400 a year or part thereof for the maintenance & advancement of his son till twenty-one, & on his attaining twenty-one to pay him any accumulated balance & thereafter to pay him an annuity of £400 till her death. He devised his real estate for the benefit of his son & charged all his estate with payment of the annuities. By a codicil made after the birth of the son he repeated the provisions of the earlier codicil:—Held: the effect of the gift was an annuity of £1,200 only until marriage with a gift over of £400 of it on marriage & residuary annuity of £800 for life.—*Re HEWETT, ELDRIDGE v. 367. —.]—Testator bequeathed an annuity to his daughter, a married woman, "in case she shall be living apart from her husband, & should continue so to do," during the lifetime of his widow, with a direction, that if at any time the annuitant should cohabit with her husband, the annuity should cease. By the same will he bequeathed a share in the residuum, upon trust to pay the income to the same daughter during such time as she should continue to live apart from her said husband; but should she at any time cohabit with him, testator directed that during such time the income should be paid between other legatees. The will also contained a trust for children of the daughter by any other husband. At the date of the will the daughter & her husband were living apart, but before & at the date of testator's death, they were reconciled, & living together, & so continued to live:—Held: the daughter was entitled to the bequests.—WREN v. BRADLEY (1848), 2

368. —.]—Testator directed his trustee to pay to his sister M. "during such time as she may live apart from her husband, before my son attains the age of twenty-one years, the sum of £2 10s. per week for her maintenance whilst so living apart from her husband." M. & her husband were married some years before the date of the will, & never lived apart till some time after the death of testator. Testator's son was living & an infant:—Held: the bequest to M. was not to be construed as a gift to her during the joint lives of herself & her husband until the son attained twenty-one, upon a condition, which might have been rejected as against the policy of the law, that she & her husband should not live together, but as a limited gift of weekly payments to be made during a period the commencement & duration of which were fixed in a way which the law does not allow, & the gift was void.

Testator did not like the husband, & his apparent object was to induce the wife to live separate from him. If so, the gift was for a purpose which is contrary to the law of England, for that law does not allow provisions made in contemplation of a future separation between husband & wife. According to English law if a condition subsequent which is to defeat an estate, is against the policy of the law, the gift is absolute, but if the illegal condition is precedent there is no gift (COTTON, L.J.).—*Re MOORE, TRAFFORD v. C. had left them estates in strict settlement, with remainder over on failure of issue male, to D., out of their regard to D., & considering that C. had made no other provision for him, agreed with D., his exors. & administrators, to pay him an annuity for twenty-one years, if A. & B., or the survivor of them should so long live; & in case of the death of D. within the term, to his child or children, if any, in such proportions as D. should appoint, or in default of appointment, to all of them equally; & if there should be no child, to his then wife, so long as she should remain a widow. D. covenanted with A. & B., their exors., etc., that in case he or his heirs should come into possession of the said estates under the will of C., then that he, D., his heirs, exors., or administrators, should pay to the exors. or administrators of A. & B., or the survivors of them, all sums of money received by him, his children, or wife, for & on account of the annuity. D., his wife & child, died within the term, & it was held that the deed did not operate as the grant of an annuity for the term of twenty-one years absolutely, but that it was determinable by the death of the grantee, his children & wife, & therefore that D.'s administrator was not entitled to claim payment of the annuity.—*BARFORD v. The capital of the residue, after the widow's death, was to be held as to £5,000, upon such trusts as the widow should appoint, & subject to her appointment the £5,000 was to be held in trust for B. for life, & after her death to fall into the general residue; & subject to such disposition as aforesaid, & as to the residue of testator's estate & effects after the widow's death, & subject as to the £5,000 & the interest thereof as aforesaid, upon trust to pay certain legacies amounting to £18,000, with an ultimate residuary gift to E.; & there was a direction that, upon the death of the several annuitants, the funds on which the annuities were secured should follow the ultimate destination of the residue:—Held: (1) the two first mentioned pecuniary legacies & three annuities had priority over every other gift; (2) the annuities were charged on the capital of the residue, but A. was entitled to retain the surplus income paid to her in one year, & to receive the surplus for another, although the income was in the subsequent years insufficient to answer the annuities; (3) on the death of an annuitant in the lifetime of the widow the ultimate residuary legatee did not become at once entitled to the fund set apart to answer the annuity; (4) after the widow's death the £5,000,

The annuitant has nevertheless the right to resort if it becomes necessary, to the corpus of the fund set apart.—HARBIN v. MASTERMAN, [1896] 1 Ch. 351; 65 L. J. Ch. 195; 73 L. T. 591; 44 W. Subsequent direction by testator to set apart fund.—[Testator gave an annuity of £250 to his widow, & directed that a competent part of his money should be invested, to the intent that the widow might receive the annuity "out of the interest, dividends, proceeds, & produce" thereof; & he gave the moneys to secure, but subject to, the annuity, & his residuary personal estate to plffs.:—Held: the annuity was a charge on the capital; & the assets being deficient, the exors. had properly paid the annuity out of the capital.—*MINER v. He directed the real estate to be sold by trustees, who were also exors. of the will, on the nephew attaining twenty-one, & the proceeds to be held upon the trusts thereafter declared. He also directed the trustees to sell his personal estate & out of the proceeds to pay his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses & legacies, & to invest the residue, with the surplus rents & profits of the real estate until it was sold, & the proceeds of it after the sale, & stand possessed of the investments upon trust to set apart thereout a fund for payment of the annuity, & on its determination to apply the fund, set apart to answer it, in the same manner as was therein directed with respect to the residue of the personal estate, & he gave the residue of the trust fund to his nephew. An insufficient fund was set apart to answer the annuity, of which there were consequently arrears at the annuitant's death:—Held: (1) the legacies were payable out of the proceeds of the real as well as of the personal estate; (2) the annuity was also payable out of the mixed fund; (3) the arrears of it were payable out of the fund set apart to answer it.—*BRIGHT v. 399. —.]—Testator was in 1792 possessed of freehold lands, & of an equitable fee in a copyhold estate. He made a will, by which he subjected the whole of his real estate in aid of his personality, to the payment of his debts, & subject thereto, he gave all his "messuages, tenements, lands, hereditaments, & premises, with the buildings, mines, etc.," thereon & therein, over which he had a disposing power, to trustees, for five hundred years, out of the rents, etc., or by assignment, etc., of the term, to raise money to pay his debts, legacies, & after payment thereof, to apply the rents, etc., or the remainder of the estate, to the use of his grandson C., on his attaining twenty-three, & to raise £1,000 to pay to his other grandson R., on his attaining twenty-three, & in order that these two grandsons might be properly educated, testator directed that the sum of £200, until C. should attain twenty-three & £100 afterwards, & till R. should attain twenty-three, should be raised for that purpose. By the custom of the manor the copyholds which testator possessed would descend to his customary heir or heirs, the tenure being gavelkind. Testator had not made any surrender of them to the use of the will. When he died in 1799, his only daughter, the mother of C. & R., was his customary heir, & on her death, they became her customary heirs. The annuities created for the maintenance of the grandsons had fallen into arrear:—Held: (1) they were charged on the real estate itself, & not merely on the annual rents & profits; (2) the annuities did not carry interest.—TORRE v. BROWNE (1855), 5 H. L. Cas. 555; 24 L. J. Ch. 757; 26 L. T. O. S. 129; 10 E. R. 1017, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. DAVIS v. BROWNE (1851), 14 Beav. 127.

400. —.]—Testator by his will gave to a daughter on her marriage a sum of stock producing an income of £210, & further out of his general dividends the sum of about £190 annually, making in all £400 per annum. He also referred to the settlements of two married daughters, & directed that the income of the property settled upon them by him at their respective marriages should be increased out of the same general dividends to £400 annually to each:—Held: the provision amounted to a gift of corpus, & the trustees of the respective settlements were entitled to receive as corpus, out of testator's estate, sums sufficient, in each instance, to produce the supplementary income.—ENGELHARDT v. ENGELHARDT (1878), 26 W. R. 853.

401. —]—Annuity & residuary bequest.—]—Testator, after reciting that the income of his wife, in case she survived him, would consist, in part, of the rent of a leasehold estate, which he had settled on her, directed his trustees, in case the lease should expire in her lifetime, to pay to her, out of the dividends & interest arising from a sufficient part of his personal estate, at their discretion, so much per annum as would be an equivalent for the rent lost thereby; & he gave his residuary personal estate to the trustees, in trust to invest it in the usual securities, & to accumulate the income until the lease should expire in his wife's lifetime, & then, during the remainder of her life, to pay her the income of the accumulated fund, & after her death, to stand possessed of the capital for his grandchildren. The lease expired in the wife's lifetime; but the income of the residuary fund was not equivalent to the rent lost:—Held: the wife was entitled to have the deficiency of her income made good out of the capital of the residuary fund.—*BOYD v. 424. ———.]—Testator directed his exors. to stand possessed of his personal estate, upon trust to invest a sufficient portion thereof in the funds to produce an annuity of £2 per week, to be paid to one of his sons, & that after his son's decease the sum to be so invested should fall into the residue. He directed his exors., as soon as his youngest child should attain twenty-one, to divide his remaining estate amongst all his children, except the annuitant, equally, & directed that, upon the decease of the annuitant, the sum invested to produce his annuity should be divided in like manner among all testator's other children who should then be living, & the issue of such as should be dead, share & share alike. 425. ———.]—Testator directed his trustees to invest so much money as would be sufficient to produce an annuity of £20 per annum, & to pay the annual sum of £120 to his widow until certain property to which he would be entitled should fall into possession, when his trustees were to invest so much money as would, with the money before directed to be invested, produce an annual income of £250, & to pay the sum of £250 to his widow for her life, & after her decease in trust to call in the sum of £1,000, part of the money so directed to be invested, & pay that sum to such persons as the widow should appoint, or, in default of appointment, to her next of kin. Testator then gave other legacies & bequeathed the residue of his property. The income of testator's estate proved to be insufficient for the payment of the annuity to his widow, & the arrears would exhaust the whole estate:—Held: the arrears of the annuity were the first charge upon the estate, in priority over the legacy of £1,000 & the other general legacies.—INGLEMAN v. WORTHINGTON (1855), 25 L. J. Ch. 46; 26 L. T. O. S. 253; 1 Jur. N. S. 1062; 4 W. R. 61.

426. ———.]—Testator directed the investment in the funds of sufficient to produce £40 a year, & the dividends to be paid to his wife for life, & he bequeathed his general residue & the fund invested, after her death, to other persons. An investment was made in 5 per cents., which were reduced & produced less than £10:—Held: (1) the widow was entitled to have the deficiency made good out of the corpus of the fund.

The widow had received less than £40 for thirty-three years:—Held: (2) there had been no laches or acquiescence, the question now relating to the respective rights of parties to an existing trust fund.—*MILLS v. his son T. together with all securities for the same, authorising them to allow the principal to remain outstanding at their discretion; & he directed his trustees to invest the same when called in, & stand possessed of "the said debt & of the interest to accrue due thereon, & also of the said stocks, funds & securities," upon trust to pay to pltf. an annuity of £30 for her life. He also directed his trustees to pay to his daughter M. three-fourth parts "of the residue of the interest or dividends to be received from the said debt, or the investment thereof." In a codicil to his will, he spoke of the same sum of money as "the said debt":—Held: the annuity was not merely payable out of the interest of the debt, but was a charge upon the capital, & upon the stock, funds & securities in which it might be invested; & a sufficient portion of the same was ordered to be set apart to satisfy the annuity.—HICKMAN v. UPSALL (1860), 2 Giff. 124; 2 L. T. 80; 6 Jur. N. S. 367; 8 W. R. 359; 66 E. R. 53.

429. ———.]—Testator devised his real & personal estate to trustees, of whom his wife was one, upon trust for conversion & to invest in govt. or real securities, & that his trustees should stand possessed of the trust premises to pay his wife an annuity of £100 clear of all deductions whatsoever, & directed the trustees to appropriate & set apart a fund for securing such annuity, & after the death of his wife, directed the trustees to pay & divide or transfer the money hereinbefore appropriated & directed to be set apart among his, testator's, children. Part of testator's property consisted of £2,500 4 per cent. stock, which at his death, & for some time after, produced £100 a year; this fund was set apart by the trustees for securing payment of the widow's annuity, but, owing to successive reductions of the interest of the stock by Parliament, there was, at the widow's death, a considerable arrear to make up the deficiency between the £100 a year & the reduced income of the fund which had for many years been received by the widow:—Held: on the construction of the will the widow would have been entitled to have the deficiency made good out of the corpus; but she having forborne to assert her claim for so long a period during her lifetime, & having been aware of the dealings of several of her children, in respect of their shares, with persons who were acting on the belief that they were shares in a certain definite amount of stock, without giving any intimation of her intention to claim such arrears out of the corpus, the representatives of the widow could not, as against the parties who so dealt for value, with the knowledge of the widow, assert the claim, to which she would otherwise have been entitled, to have the arrears of the annuity made good out of the corpus.—UPTON v. VANNER (1861), 1 Drew. & Sm. 594; 5 L. T. 480; 8 Jur. N. S. 405; 10 W. R. 99; 62 E. R. 505.

430. ———.]—Testator directed a sale of his estate & a sufficient sum to be laid out in the funds to produce annuities for his nieces, & he gave his residue to his wife for life:—Held: the surplus income after paying the annuities which accrued prior to the sale & investment being made, was liable to make up the fund necessary to produce the annuities, & it did not belong to the widow.—ANDERSON v. ANDERSON (1863), 33 Beav. 223; 55 E. R. 353.

431. ———.]—Testator bequeathed all the residue of his estate & effects to three persons, their heirs, exors. & administrators, upon trust to receive the rents & after paying certain specified outgoings, to pay an annuity of £130 to his son E., & another annuity of £80 to each of his sons, R., J., & S. for their respective lives. Testator directed that out of the surplus, if any, of the yearly rent, issues & profits of said residue, after such deductions & payments as aforesaid, £100 a year should be retained to provide for repairs. He directed that when certain houses were put into complete repair, & after providing for the payment of the said annuities, then the residue should go & be divided amongst the persons therein mentioned; & in two other portions of his will he spoke of "so much of his estate & effects as might be set apart for the payment of the said annuities":—Held: inasmuch as there was to be no distribution of the estate till the annuities were paid, the same were a charge upon the corpus; & as the rents were insufficient, a sale was decreed.—PROWETT v. PROWETT (1864), 10 L. T. 564; 12 W. R. 819.

432. ———.]—By his marriage settlement, a husband assigned certain securities to trustees, on trust thereout to pay £500 to his wife during her widowhood, & subject thereto for himself. He also covenanted that, in case the securities did not produce £500 a year, he would transfer a sufficient capital sum to make it up. By his will he gave his residuary estate to his wife for her life, with remainders over. The securities did not produce £500 a year:—Held: she was entitled to have the reversion sold, & the proceeds invested, & the income applied to make up the £500 a year.—HARRINGTON (COUNTESS) v. ATHELTON (1864), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 352; 5 New Rep. 1; 11 L. T. 291; 10 Jur. N. S. 1088; 13 W. R. 62; 46 E. R. 411, L. J.J.

433. ———.]—Testator directed his trustees to convert the residue of his real & personal estate, & to invest so much money as would produce £200 a year, & to pay it to his wife during her life, & he gave the residue, not wanted for that purpose, to other persons. The widow survived five years, & the deficiency of the income of the residue to pay her annuity amounted to nearly £700:—Held: the deficiency was payable out of the corpus.—PERCY v. PERCY (1866), 35 Beav. 295; 55 E. R. 909.

434. ———.]—Where an annuity is charged upon a fund or an estate & the dividends arising from the fund, or the income from the estate, prove insufficient to meet the annuity, the annuitant is entitled to have the deficiency paid out of the fund, or so much of the estate sold as would be sufficient to meet the deficiency, unless the grant of the annuity can be construed as showing a contrary intention.—BRAYNE v. REES (1866), 15 L. T. 349; 15 W. R. 195.

435. ———.]—Testatrix having made deft. her sole residuary legatee & extrix., by a codicil gave an annuity of £100 a year to two ladies upon trust that they should apply the same for the benefit of a ladies' college, & the education of women therein, as they should think best. She also directed her extrix., & out of her pure personality, to purchase such an amount of stock as would be sufficient "by means of the dividends thereof" to satisfy the annuity, & until such purchase, she directed the annuity to be paid "out of the income" of her pure personality, & on the determination of the annuity, the stock to sink into her general personal estate. The pure personality being insufficient to provide the sum of stock required:—Held: the annuity was a charge on the corpus of the fund.—MARTIN v. BOSTOCK (1870), 23 L. T. 216.

436. ———.]—Testator appointed his wife & two other persons his trustees & exors., he empowered his trustees to make grants of his real estate in fee, or otherwise to sell his real & personal estate, & to stand possessed of the money arising therefrom in trust to invest the same, & set apart a sufficient portion of such investments as will produce the annuity of £1,200 "which I bequeath to my wife for her life," payable on the usual quarter days, "the first payment to be made on the first of such days as shall happen after my decease, such annuity, in case of my wife's second marriage, to be reduced to the annual sum of £150," & subject to such investment to set apart £5,000 for his daughter Z. "As to the entire residue of my trust estate, & as to that part set apart in favour of my wife, & as to such part thereof as shall be no longer required to be set apart in consequence of her second marriage," in trust for three grandchildren:—Held: this was the bequest of an annuity & of an annuity not so restricted as to make it payable exclusively out of the income of a particular fund arising during the widow's lifetime. While the property remained unconverted, as might be the case during the whole of her life, the annuity was a charge on the whole income of the estate. The fund not being sufficient to produce the £1,200 a year, the deficiency was to be made good out of the corpus.—CARMICHAEL v. GEE (1880), 5 App. Cas. 588; 49 L. J. Ch. 829; 43 L. T. 227; 29 W. Property given over after payment of antecedent trusts.—Testator gave leaseholds to trustees upon trust to receive the rents & profits & to pay the annual sum of £60 to H. for life, & after the death of H. to raise by sale or mtge. the sum of £400 for the children of H., & after the death of H. & the raising & payment of the £400, to assign the said leaseholds, or such part thereof as should remain undisposed of, unto T. absolutely. The income proving insufficient to satisfy the annuity, it was held that it was chargeable upon the corpus.—PHILLIPS v. GUTTERIDGE (1862), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 332; 1 New Rep. 3; 32 L. J. Ch. 1; 7 L. 449. Charge on income—Income of specified leaseholds.—Testator bequeathed two leasehold houses to trustees, in trust, out of the rents, to pay £50 a year to his daughter-in-law so long as she should remain his son's widow, & to invest the surplus in stock, to be held in trust for his wife for life, remainder for his grand-daughters; & after his death, in case his daughter-in-law should be then married, or after her decease or second marriage, whenever the latter event might happen, to sell the houses & invest the proceeds in stock, to be held in trust for his wife for life, remainder for his grand-daughters. 450. ——— Gift over after annuitant's death.—Testator by a codicil to his will directed his exor. to pay 15s. per week to his widow, so long as two leasehold houses should be let, & if one or both should become vacant, he left it to the discretion of his exor., to sell the houses & invest the proceeds for the purpose of paying such weekly allowance, or in proportion according to the amount the houses might produce; & he revoked a gift in his will of the profits of the houses to his widow, having considered that the 15s. per week was quite sufficient to maintain her & make her comfortable; & his will contained a gift over of his property. Testator's property, including the houses, having been sold & realised, produced a fund insufficient to pay 15s. weekly to the widow:—Held: such allowance could not be made good out of the capital.—HAWKE v. KEMP (1843), 7 Jur. 294.

451. ——— Subject to distress or sale.—Life annuities bequeathed by will, to be issuing & payable out of leaseholds & personalty with power to recover them when in arrear "by distress or sale," in like manner as rack rents are recovered by law:—Held: to be charged on the income & not on the corpus.—*ADDECOTT v. Consolidated Annuities thereafter bequeathed in trust for his son, his wife & children": he afterwards directed two other trustees to stand possessed of £20,000, 3½ per cent. Consolidated Annuities, & to pay the annual produce of the sum of £20,000 stock in a different event, upon trust for his son for life, & after his decease, in trust, during the widowhood of E. his wife to pay pay her an annuity of £200:—Held: (1) E. took one annuity only of £200; (2) annuity not payable out of corpus.—*HINDLE v. 453. ——— New trust arising on annuitant's death.—Direction to invest £10,000 4 per cent. stock, in the name of trustees, & to pay thereout annuities to various persons, amounting in the whole to £400 a year; & that the trustees should hold the stock & the dividends thereof, subject to the annuities upon trust, as to so much of the dividends as from time to time should fall in by the determination of the annuities, until one-half of the dividends should have so fallen in, to invest the same & the resulting income thereof, in order to increase the capital of the fund by accumulation; & so soon as one-half of the dividends should have so fallen in, to apply such moiety of the dividends, & also such further parts of the same as should from time to time fall in by the determination of the annuities respectively, & the whole of the dividends, when all the annuities should have ceased, to certain charitable uses. The £10,000 4 per cent. stock was invested according to the will, & was subsequently converted into 3½ per cents., & the trustees thereupon reduced the payments to the annuitants by one-eighth, the dividends having become to that extent insufficient to answer the annuities. The death of some of the annuitants afterwards released a part of the dividends, & the sums so falling in were accumulated. In an information to establish the charity:—Held: the annuitants were not entitled to be paid their annuities in full, either out of the capital, or out of the released dividends, but the reduction of the stock would operate to produce a proportionate reduction in the several annuities, & in the fund applicable to the charity.—*A.-G. v. 454. ————Testator gave freehold & leasehold estates to trustees, upon trust, to receive the rents from time to time as they became payable, & thereout to pay to his wife an annuity during her life, & after her decease upon trust to convey to other persons absolutely. The rents were inadequate to satisfy the annuity:—Held: the annuity must abate, & it was not charged upon the corpus of the estates.—FOSTER v. SMITH (1846), 1 Ph. 629; 15 L. J. Ch. 183; 41 E. 455. ————Testator, by his will, bequeathed the residue of his real & personal estate to his widow & three other persons as trustees, on trust to sell & invest in govt. securities, & out of the dividends to pay an annuity of £500 to his daughter for life, an annuity of £100 to W. for life, & on his death an annuity of £50 to the son of W. for life, & the remainder of the dividends to testator's widow for her life: testator directed that, after the death of the widow, if the daughter should be then living & should have no child then living, the trustees should pay her a further annuity of £500, that if testator's daughter should have a child living at the death of the widow the two annuities of £500 should cease, & the trustees raise & invest £20,000 & pay the dividends to the daughter for her life with remainder to her children, that the trustees should also pay £5,000 to such person or persons as the widow should by will appoint, & that the widow should also have power to dispose of £1,000, either by gift in her lifetime or by will, among her three co-trustees in such proportions as she should think fit; & testator named certain persons as residuary legatees. There being a deficiency of assets to pay the two annuities of £500, & also the legacies of £5,000 &

459. — —.—Testator, by his will, gave all his property to his wife, absolutely. By a subsequent incomplete testamentary paper, he gave all his property to his wife & two other persons, in trust, to sell & pay the interest of the proceeds to his wife for her life, & after her decease, to dispose of the principal to the purposes after mentioned. Testator then gave several legacies & annuities, & directed that, after the death & failure of issue of one of the annuitants, the annuity should be paid to his residuary legatee, but he did not name any. In another testamentary paper testator gave legacies & annuities to the legatees & annuitants named in the former paper, & also to other persons:—Held: the legacies given by the second & third papers were single & not cumulative.—BRINE v. FERRIER (1835), 7 Sim. 549; 58 E. R. 948.

460. Annuities of different amounts—Substitutional.—Gift of residue to pay income to widow for life, subject to the payment thereof of an annuity of £10 to A. for his life. After the decease of his widow, a disposition was made of the property, & amongst other gifts there was one of the dividends of £1,000 stock to A. for life:—Held: the annuity to A. ceased upon the death of the widow, & A. then took the dividends on the £1,000 in substitution.—*ADNAM v. The sister married in testator's lifetime:—Held: that the consumable articles did not go to T., but fell into the residue; & the annuities of £250 per annum & £100 per annum were not cumulative.—ANDREW v. ANDREW (1845), 1 Coll. 686; 63 E. R. 598.

M., the uncle of a person about to marry, became a party to the marriage settlement, which recited that he proposed & agreed to secure to the intended wife, in case she should survive him, an annuity to be payable out of the manors mentioned in the settlement, "of or to which he is seised or entitled in fee simple." made or might make in favour of his own wife. The grantor covenanted "for himself, his heirs, & assigns," with the grantee, "her exors., administrators, & assigns," that in case of the annuity falling into arrear it should be lawful for "her exors., administrators & assigns" to distrain. For further security he created a term in trustees, granting them a like power of distress. After the grantor's death it was discovered that he had only possessed a life estate in the largest part of the premises. The annuity fell into arrear:—Held: the deed of settlement must be construed as containing a covenant for title; the covenant for himself made his exors. liable, as there was nothing to qualify it; & as by the failure of the grantor's estate the right to distrain did not exist, the grantee was entitled to come on the personal estate of the grantor for satisfaction of the annuity.—*MONYPENNY v. 489. Grant by mortgagor of copyholds—Cesser of rentcharge on admittance of mortgagee.]—(1) A rentcharge, with a power of distress, cannot be created except by a grant binding some legal interest in the land, & ceases to exist when the same person who is owner of the rent becomes entitled to the whole legal estate in the land out of which it issues.

(2) The interest of a mtgor. in possession is not a legal estate at all, & consequently cannot support a rentcharge with powers of distress.

(3) To trespass de bonis asportatis by the assignees of L., a bkpt., debts, pleaded, that L., before his bkpcy., being seised in fee of certain copyhold tenements, in consideration of £1,400 covenanted to surrender them to the use of debts., subject to a proviso for redemption; & for better payment of the interest of the sum of £1,400, L. granted to debts., that as often as the interest should be in arrear for a certain time, it should be lawful for debts. to enter & distrain for same. The plea then averred the surrender & admittance of debts., & justified the seizure of the goods on the premises whilst in possession of L., as a distress for the interest in arrear:—Held: after verdict, plfcs. were entitled to judgment non obstante veredicto, for, assuming the grant to operate as a rentcharge, it ceased to be so upon the admittance of the mtgees.; & afterwards it could only take effect as a covenant, binding such goods of bkpt. as might happen to be on the premises at the time of the distress.

If this grant be treated as a rentcharge, it could only be so as long as the estate remained in the mtgor., that is, until surrender by him & admittance of the mtgee. It may be that, until that time, the deed would operate as a grant of a rentcharge affecting the estate, just as a lease for years would be good, though a forfeiture of the copyhold as against the lord, if he chose to insist upon it. But, after surrender & admittance, the rentcharge ceased; for a person cannot at the same moment grant a rentcharge, & also the fee simple in freehold or copyhold land. Therefore, this grant ceased to be a legal obligation on the land, from the moment of surrender & admittance (PARKE, B.).—FREEMAN v. EDWARDS (1848), 2 Exch. 732; 17 L. J. Ex. 258; 11 L. T. O. In June, 1814, B. granted six annuities to six other persons, & appointed a receiver of the rents of his real estate for securing them. The receiver took possession. A. issued elegits on his judgments, & extended one-half of the estate under the first, & the other half under the second, but there was a return of nil upon the third. He did not take possession of the estate, but an agreement was, in 1817, entered into between him & the six annuitants, that he should allow the receiver to continue in possession, & should be paid out of the rents £385 a year, being interest as 5 per cent. on what he had paid for the annuities. In 1819, A. purchased part of the estate, & so extinguished his first two judgments. He continued to receive the £385 a year till 1846. A suit having been instituted by subsequent incumbrancers to enforce their charges:—Held: (1) apart from the agreement of 1817, as A. had never taken possession, he could not be considered to have received the £385 a year in respect of his third judgment, & therefore was not bound to apply what he received in satisfaction of that judgment; (2) under the agreement, A. did not receive the £385 a year in respect of his judgments, but in respect of his annuities, & he was at liberty to apply it in discharge of the first two annuities, though the judgments for securing them has been extinguished; (3) a judgment given for securing an annuity, carries interest under Judgments Act, 1838 (c. 110), s. 17.—*KNIGHT v. There was a further provision that from the determination of the partnership the retiring partner, his exors., or administrators or the exors. or administrators of deceased partner should be entitled to receive out of the net profits of the partnership business during so much, if any, of the term of five years from May 1, 1880, as should remain after the determination of the partnership the yearly sum of £350 & during so much, if any, of the term of five years from May 1, 1885, as either the retiring partner or a widow of the retiring or deceased partner should be living, the yearly sum of £250 any sum which might under this provision for the time being become payable to the exors. or administrators of a deceased partner to be applied in such manner as such partner should by deed or will direct for the benefit of his widow & children & in default of such direction to be paid to such widow if living, for her own benefit. It was further provided that the annuity should, so far as legally might be, be constituted a charge on the net profits of the business. One of the partners died in 1883 leaving a widow but without having given any direction as to the application of the annuity. By his will he appointed his widow his universal legatee & sole extrix. He died insolvent & an action was brought by a creditor to administer his estate:—Held: the annuity did not form part of testator's estate but by the arts. a trust of it was created in favour of the widow, & she was entitled to it free from the claims of testator's creditors.—*Re FLAVELL, MURRAY v. funds should be apportioned between the widow & the children:—Held: for the purpose of such apportionment, the amount of the arrears of the annuity to the date of the hearing of the summons must be added to the value of the annuity at the same date, ascertained according to the table of values of govt. annuities, & the fund must be divided in the proportion borne by the total so arrived at to the full amount claimed by the children.—*DELVES v. 500. — To enforce charge on realty—Voluntary deed.—L. by deed, "in consideration of natural love & affection," granted an annuity to C. charged on certain real estate, & upon the "several chattels, goods, moneys, securities for money, & other effects" of L. At the date of the deed L. was entitled to a reversionary interest in railway stock, held by trustees. The annuity was duly paid by L. until his death, when it appeared that his personal estate was insufficient to pay his debts, & that the real estate alone was not sufficient to provide for the annuity:—Held: the deed being voluntary, did not create a perfect & complete equitable charge on the reversionary interest; the right of C. to such a charge depended upon contract, which the ct. would not enforce in favour of a volunteer, & C. had no priority over creditors of L. subsequent to the date of the deed.—*Re LUCAN (EARL), HARDINGE v. Testator's estate proved insufficient for the payment of his debts in full. The question raised was whether Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 10, abrogates the Chancery rule postponing voluntary debts, & entitles the trustees to prove for the arrears of the annuity & the £5,000 pari passu with other creditors, or whether it was still in force:—Held: the trustees were entitled to be paid pari passu with other creditors.—*Re WHITTAKER, WHITTAKER v. 504. Right to arrears—As against residuary legatees—When income more than sufficient to pay annuities.—Testator gave his whole estate to trustees to sell, & after payment of debts, expenses, & certain legacies, to pay out of the residue two annuities of £400 each to F. & P. & one of £200 to B., for their respective lives; & for the better fulfilment of that purpose, he directed them to vest sufficient capital sums on securities; & if the residue should not be sufficient, to vest whatever residue might be, & pay the dividends to the annuitants in the same proportions; & if more than sufficient, to vest the surplus, & divide it & the capital sums set apart for the annuities, as the same should become tangible by the death of each annuitant, among residuary legatees. B. predeceased testator. The residue did not yield sufficient income every year to pay F. & P. £400 each. On F.'s death, P. & F.'s personal representatives claimed payment of all the arrears out of the then enlarged income of the residue:—Held: F. & P. were entitled to payment of £400 each, only in those years in which the income of the residue was sufficient; when in any year that income was more than sufficient, the excess belonged to the residuary legatees; on F.'s death half the capital of the residue became divisible among them, & then P. became entitled to the income in each year of the other half; but when in any year this income exceeded £400, the excess belonged to the residuary legatees, & neither P. nor F.'s representatives were entitled to any payment of arrears.

No benefit accrued to the residuary legatees from the lapse of the annuity to B. except when thereby the income of the residue exceeded the amount of the two subsisting annuities.—CASAMAJOR v. PEARSON (1841), 8 Cl. & Fin. 69; 8 E. R. 27, 11 L.

Sums amounting to £32 3s. 10d. had also been paid out of capital to the two surviving annuitants. It was now anticipated that there would be surplus income in the hands of the tenant for life after satisfying the annuities. On a summons by the trustees of the will to ascertain whether this income should be applied in recouping to capital the sums raised thereout, or either of them:—Held: having regard to the fact that the annuities were charged upon capital as well as income, the tenant for life could not be called upon to replace the deficiency raised out of capital.—*Re CROXON, FERRERS v. 520. ——— Apportionment not retrospective.]— Testator by his will devised certain real estate to trustees in fee in trust out of the rents to pay an annuity to A. until he attained twenty-five, when he was to be entitled to the possession of the estates, & an annuity of £400 a year to C. for life, & an annuity of £150 for the maintenance & during the minority of an infant tenant in tail; & “without prejudice to the trusts aforesaid,” & “to any jointure to be created under the power thereafter contained” to pay the surplus rent to the mother of A. until he should be entitled to the possession of the estates; & “subject to the trusts aforesaid”; the trustees were to hold the estates in trust for A. for life, with remainder to his eldest son in tail, with power to A. to appoint a jointure to any wife, with the usual powers of distress & entry, to take effect immediately after his decease. A. having appointed the jointure died, leaving his widow, who gave birth to a posthumous son, the infant tenant in tail. The income of the estates proving deficient:—Held: the annuity of £400, the jointure & the annuity for the maintenance of the infant tenant in tail must abate pari passu, but the apportionment was not to be retrospective, so as to affect the amount received by C. previously to the birth of the tenant in tail.—COORE v. TODD (1857), 7 De G. M. & G. 520; 44 E. R. 203, L. C.

521. ——— Annuity to executors.]—
 T., after appointing three persons exors. of his will, gave & bequeathed all the rest & residue of his leasehold houses & property to them, upon trust to receive the rents, & to pay certain legacies at his death, & annuities during the lives of the annuitants. T. then gave to his exors., & the survivors or survivor of them, an annuity of £65, to be retained by them or him out of the rents, & to be received by them or him in compensation for their or his care & trouble in the performance of the trusts, or to be appropriated by them or him as they or he might think fit. Some of the annuities were continued to the children of the first annuitants; & after the deaths of others of the annuitants, their annuities were given to the exors., & the survivors or survivor of them in like manner as the annuity of £65. The payment of the annuities to some of the annuitants was to commence at the end of six months after T.'s decease, & to others at the end of three years. The property was subject to heavy mtges. The will contained a power of sale. Testator directed, that if there were any surplus after paying the annuitants & the interest, it should be accumulated for the discharge of the incumbrances. The property was insufficient to pay the annuities in full. The exors., out of the rents, paid off several of the incumbrances, & made payments to the annuitants on account, in abatement, but claimed to be paid their own annuity in full in priority:—Held: the income of the property applied in discharge of the mtges. must be recouped out of the corpus, & paid to the annuitants; & the annuity to the exors. must abate proportionably with the other annuitants, they not being entitled to any priority, or to be paid in full.—DEBNEY v. ECKETT (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 805.

524. ———.]—
 Testator, by his will, made in 1844, devised his freehold property, called the R. estate, in Ireland, unto G. in tail male, subject nevertheless, & charged & chargeable, with the payment of certain annuities therein mentioned. Testator then directed that the residue of his estates thereafter devised should be considered & made the primary fund for the payment of his debts, & the several legacies given by his will, & that his R. estate thereinbefore devised, subject as aforesaid, to G., & the heirs male of his body, should not be subject or liable to the payment of the debts & legacies, unless the residue of his estates should prove of insufficient value, which turned out to be the case. Testator further devised the residue of his real estates, all situate in Ireland, to trustees, in trust for sale, & out of the proceeds thereof he directed the payment of the legacies given by his will, & every legacy to be given by any codicil thereto, unless a contrary direction should be expressed in such codicil. By a codicil made in 1845, testator gave an annuity to E. for her life, to be raised out of his estates in Ireland. The residue of testator's estate was insufficient to pay the debts & legacies :—Held : (1) the annuities given by the will were a charge upon the R. estate in priority of the debts & legacies ; (2) the annuity given by the codicil was also a charge upon same estate, subject to the annuities.—*PORTARLINGTON (EARL) v. Testator gave an annuity of £150 to his widow, an annuity of £100 to a stranger in blood, & he directed that the second annuity should be paid free of legacy duty, which should be paid out of his estate. After payment of his debts, the estate was insufficient to pay the annuities in full :—Held : after payment of costs, the fund must be apportioned as above between the two annuitants ; the legacy duty payable on the sum apportioned to the second annuitant must be deducted from the whole fund, & the balance then divided in the same proportion between the two annuitants.—*Re WILKINS, WILKINS v. Testator's estate was not sufficient to pay the legacies in full :—Held : upon the death of one of the tenants for life, an apportionment of the legacy of £800, set apart to answer her life-interest, fell into the residue, & was not given over to the residuary legatees in their individual character ; & the surviving tenants for life were entitled to have the deficiencies in their annuities satisfied out of the released fund.—*ARNOLD v. 538. —.]—Testator, by his will, charged a freehold estate with the payment of the yearly sum of £10, to be paid half-yearly to his daughter A. for her life; & on her death, he directed such half-yearly payments to be continued for the maintenance of her children until they should attain twenty-one, & then directed his trustees to pay the sum of £120, equally amongst them. The estate was sold under a decree of the ct., & there remained out of the proceeds, after payment of testator's debts, only the sum of £74 19s. 4d.:—Held: the two charges of the yearly sum of £10, & the sum of £120, were equally entitled to the benefit of the corpus, which was directed to be invested, & the income paid to testator's daughter, but without prejudice to any question that might eventually arise as to the right to it.—TAYLOR v. TAYLOR (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 226; 8 Jur. 15.

539. —.]—Testator gave his residuary estate to trustees, upon trust, in the first place, to pay two debts due from him on his covenants, & his funeral & testamentary expenses; & then to set apart & invest a sufficient sum to meet some annuities given by his will; & then, after such investment, to pay certain legacies. Testator's estate being insufficient to pay all the annuities & legacies in full:—Held: the annuitants were not entitled to priority, but the annuities & legacies must all abate rateably.—THWAITES v. 547. — Annuity charged on specific real estates.—By a settlement, A. grants to C. a rentcharge issuing out of certain estates, with a term & powers of distress & entry to recover it. Afterwards, A., by his will, grants to C. out of the same estates a further rentcharge, with the same powers of distress, etc., as are contained in the indenture with respect to the original annuity. Testator, in a subsequent part of his will, devises the estates to trustees for a term, to raise £15,000 for E.:—Held: the second annuity takes priority over the £15,000.—FREEMAN v. BLENCOWE (1835), 4 L. J. Ch. 247.

548. — ———.]—Testator gave his wife his freehold estate of B. & certain specific chattels; & also an annuity for her life, charged upon all his real estates, except B., with power of distress for same, the first payment thereof to be made on May 1 or Nov. 1, which should first happen after his decease. He then charged his debts upon his real estates, except B., in aid of his personal estate; & gave an annuity to his sister, in similar terms to those used respecting that given to his wife. He next gave several pecuniary legacies to nieces & others, to be paid by his trustees, as soon as convenient after his decease, out of the residue of his personal estate, & in deficiency thereof, to be raised & paid by them, as they should think proper, out of his real estates, except B., & he charged same therewith. He lastly gave two annuities to his servants, in similar terms to those used respecting the preceding annuities. The personal estate was insufficient to pay the debts & legacies; the real estate was insufficient to pay the annuities & legacies:—Held: (1) upon the true construction of the provisions of the will, as to the real estate, the annuities were entitled to priority over the legacies.

(2) All simple gifts of annuities were held to be pecuniary legacies. . . . This rule, however, has no application to the gift of a rentcharge or annuity issuing out of land; for that is an interest in the land itself & necessarily specific (LORD COTTENHAM).—*CREED v. annuity & all arrears thereof, as landlords had for obtaining payment of rent, & declared that the benefits thus conferred on his wife should be taken in full satisfaction of all dower & thirds to which she might be entitled in or out of his real & personal estate or either of them. Testator then gave two sums of £8,000 each to trustees upon certain trusts for his daughters, & directed that these sums should be paid out of his personal estate, but, in case his personal estate should be insufficient, he charged his real estate with payment of the deficiency; & testator devised his real estate at H., charged with the payment of the annuity of £200 to his wife, & all other his real estate to his son in fee. The personal estate proved insufficient, & the proceeds of sale of the real estate were insufficient for the payment of the annuity & the two legacies of £8,000 in full:—Held: the annuity was in the nature of a demonstrative legacy, & was entitled to priority over the two legacies of £8,000 in respect of the proceeds of sale of the freehold estate at H. on which it was charged.—*Re BRIGGS, BRIGGS v. for same upon trusts similar to those declared respecting the house sold: testator then gave all other his real & personal estate upon trust to pay annuities of £250 to each of his sons, & out of the balance of the income thereof to pay the specific incumbrances upon the estate, & after payment off of the incumbrances, upon trust to assign his residuary estate to his two sons equally. Testator sold one of the specifically devised houses for £9,800. The estate proved insufficient for payment in full to all the beneficiaries:—Held: (1) that the four pecuniary legacies were charged upon the entire residue, & had priority over all other payments directed to be made to beneficiaries; (2) the annuities were only given to the sons in their capacity of residuary legatees, & were therefore not payable until the sum representing proceeds of sale of realty sold by testator, & the mtge. debts on the specifically devised realty, had been provided for; (3) the £9,800, representing proceeds of sale, was to be treated as an ordinary legacy made payable out of residue; & (4) the rule in *Lutkins v. The moiety of the estate proved insufficient to satisfy the legacy & annuity:—Held: the trustees must ascertain what sum invested in 2½ per cent. Consols at one year from testator's death would have been sufficient to produce an income of £78 per annum, & apportion the moiety of the estate in the proportion of that sum to £2,500.—*Re McMAHON, WELLS v. 570. Charges for renewal of licenses.]—Testator by will, after various specific & pecuniary bequests, gave his real & residuary personal estate to trustees upon trust out of the income thereof to pay to his wife, or permit her to retain during her widowhood, a specified annual sum, & upon her second marriage or death upon trust as to all her estate for his three daughters absolutely.

The estate included three beerhouses with on-licenses, on the renewals of which charges were imposed under Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23), s. 3, towards a compensation fund for persons, the renewal of whose licenses might be refused under the provisions of that Act; & the tenants of the three beerhouses, by whom the charges were in the first instance paid, made the specified deductions from their rents in respect of the charges, so that the annual income of the estate became insufficient to pay the annuity in full.

On a summons by the widow for the determination of the question whether the whole loss must be borne, by her, or whether she was entitled to have a sum equal to the amount of the deductions or to some, & if so, what part thereof, raised out of capital & paid to her:—Held: she was not entitled to have the amount of the deductions or any part thereof raised out of capital & paid to her, as the Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23), provided the way in which the charge was to be borne, & there was nothing either in that Act, or in testator's will, or in the general law, to relieve her from bearing it.—*Re SMITH, SMITH v. 577. — — —.]—Testator directed trustees to stand possessed of residuary real & personal estate upon trust to pay thereout to his wife, during her life, such an annual sum as, together with the income of a settled fund of £10,000, should produce to her “a clear annual income of £1,500.” He gave several legacies & annuities, & towards the end of his will declared that “no deduction shall be made from any of the legacies given by this my will, or to be given by any codicil thereto, for legacy tax or any other matter, cause, or thing whatever.” An administration suit having been brought, an order was made in 1861 that the trustees of the will should repay to the widow certain sums which had been deducted from her annuity by mistake for succession duty, & that they should pay her until further order an annuity of £1,500 free of all deductions except income tax; but no express declaration of her rights was made. This order was acted upon until 1882, when a petition was presented by the widow asking that the income tax which had been deducted might be paid to her, & that in future her annuity might be paid free of income tax:—Held: the order of 1861 amounted to a declaration of the right of the widow to receive the annuity free of all deductions except income tax, notwithstanding the words “until further order,” & the matter was res judicata & could not now be reconsidered.—*PEARRETH v. 586. — Appointment “clear of all deductions for taxes or otherwise”—Construction of Private Act.]—The Shrewsbury Estate Act, 1843 (c. 28), s. 7, empowered any owner in possession of the settled estates by deed to appoint a jointure to his wife for life not exceeding the yearly sum of £3,000, “clear of all deductions whatsoever for taxes or otherwise,” but by sects. 9, 10 the estates were not at any time to be subject to the payment of more than £6,000 in respect of three or more jointures, & there were complicated provisions as to the way the excess should be borne between a second & subsequent jointures, the subsequent jointures up to £1,000 being in this respect placed before the second jointure. By a jointure deed of July 20, 1910, the late Earl of Shrewsbury exercised this power by appointing two jointures of £1,500 to Lady Shrewsbury, “clear of all deductions whatsoever for taxes or otherwise.” On May 5, 1904, another jointure of £1,000 had been appointed to the wife of the Earl's son & heir-apparent under Shrewsbury Estate Act, 1862 (c. 5), s. 33, which did not contain the words “clear of all deductions,” etc. This became payable on the son's death on Jan. 8, 1915, but it was not suggested that it was free from income tax. The Earl died on May 17, 1921. The question then arose whether Lady Shrewsbury's jointures were payable free of income tax:—Held: on the authorities, having regard to the provisions of the Income Tax Acts, & on the construction of Shrewsbury Estate Act, 1843 (c. 43), applt. was entitled to have her jointures paid in full free from deduction of income tax.—*Re SHREWSBURY ESTATE ACTS, SHREWSBURY v. 594. What will be apportioned—Annuity granted by Crown.]—William IV., by indenture, in pursuance of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 11, granted to trustees for his consort Queen Adelaide an annuity of £100,000, to commence on the decease of His Majesty, & “continue” “during the natural life of Her Majesty,” payable out of the Consolidated Fund “at the four most usual days of payment in the year, that is to say Mar. 31, June 30, Sept. 30, & Dec. 31, by even & equal portions, the first payment thereof to be made at such of the days as shall first & next happen after the decease of His Majesty, in case Her Majesty should survive him.” His Majesty died on June 20, 1837. On June 30, the trustees received a full quarter's payment of £25,000. This payment was made after consulting the law officers of the Crown, who advised that the entire sum was due; & Her Majesty was informed of their advice. The quarterly payments were made, up to & on Sept. 30, 1849. Her Majesty died on Dec. 2, 1849. Her trustees applied for a proportionate part of the quarterly payment which would have become due on Dec. 31, 1849, if she had so long lived. On rule nisi for a mandamus to the Lords of the Treasury to issue a warrant, under stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 5, s. 13, for this payment:—Held: (1) if the annuity had been apportionable & the sum due, mandamus was the proper remedy; & the ct. would not in the exercise of its discretion make the refunding of what on that supposition would have been the overpayment on June 30, 1837 a condition to the issuing of the writ; there being no equity to require Her Majesty's representatives to restore a sum received under the bona fide belief that it was her own; (2) the annuity was not apportionable.—*R. v. The co. paid off the Territorial Debt & opened another, for which were issued the promissory notes of the 5 per cent. transfer loan, designated the book debt of the — day of —, 1834. The interest was payable half-yearly. The trustees transferred their old fund into the new, & paid the income to the tenant for life until his death, which happened thirteen days before one half-yearly period of payment:—Held: the new debt was in the nature of annuities, redeemable at the option of the co., but not at the option of the lender or holder, & the half-yearly income was not apportionable between the representative of the tenant for life & the remainderman, but belonged wholly to the latter.—*WARDEN v. The husband & the wife continued to live separate from each other until the death of the husband. After the husband's death his ex-trix brought an action against his widow to recover the balance of the last instalment paid by the husband under the deed after deducting an apportioned part in respect of the period between the payment & his death:—Held: the annuity was not apportionable, & the ex-trix. was not entitled to recover.

With regard to above Act, I think that when one of the days mentioned in the deed came round the husband was bound to make the stipulated pay-

611. ———.]—The rentcharge here was laid upon the whole plot of land, but although deft. is the owner & occupier of part only, the vicar is entitled to payment in respect of the whole plot. It is obvious upon the hypothesis that deft. is terre-tenant of part only of the plot, & that if the landlord had gone upon the land & claimed the rent in respect of the whole of the plot, this tenant would have been a disseisor, & the landlord would have been entitled to his writ of assize, under which the tenant would have been put out of possession of the land; for a rentcharge cannot be apportioned, & in order to pay the rentcharge the whole of the land would be taken under the writ. If a distress had been put in, & the tenant's goods upon the land had been seized, then the distress would have been for the whole of the rentcharge. Again, if the distress was not sufficient, the whole of the land would have been seized, & held until the whole of the rentcharge had been paid. If that be so, & now that under Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27), an action of debt is maintainable it seems to me to follow that the action lies against deft. for the whole of the rentcharge. It was said that that would work an injustice, because he would be left to pay the debts of others; but that is not so, for I have no doubt that if he is compelled to pay the whole of the rentcharge he would have an action against the co-owners of the land for contribution (BRETT, M.R.).—CHRISTIE v. Under a decree afterwards made against W. for raising the portion, several parcels of the then unsold lands, including the mtgd. premises, were sold in the master's office, subject to the annuity, but the deeds of conveyance to the purchasers did not state whether exclusively subject thereto or rateable with other parcels that still remained unsold. The mtgee.'s representative filed a bill against these purchasers & W. for an indemnity for the mtge. out of the unsold lands, free from the annuity, charging that, by agreement between defts., the parcels sold in the master's office were to be exclusively subject thereto, & on that account produced less by the value of the annuity than if they were sold subject thereto rateably with the parcels, that still remained unsold. There was no proof in the cause of the alleged agreement:—Held: a decree directing inquiries as to the value of the parcels sold by the master, was erroneous, as such inquiries were immaterial to the issue between the parties; & the bill ought to have been dismissed, with costs, without prejudice to any bill that might be afterwards filed for apportioning the annuity on all the lands originally charged therewith.—SIREE v. 628. — To payment to rentchargers—Consideration for consent to transfer of rentcharge.]

(1) The tenant for life of settled estates, in order to obtain a reduction of the rate of interest payable on money borrowed for improvements & secured by rentcharges under Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (c. 114), caused the rentcharges to be transferred to an insurance society in payment to the original holders of a lump sum in consideration of their consenting to the transfer:—Held: the repayment of this sum to the tenant for life would not be an expenditure "in redeeming" the rentcharges, "or otherwise providing for the payment thereof," within Settled Land Act, 1887 (c. 30), s. 1, & therefore ought not to be made out of capital money in the hands of the trustees of the settlement.

(2) The fact that the comrs. under the Act of 1864 sanctioned an improvement, in respect of which a rentcharge was created, as coming within a provision in that Act substantially identical with a provision in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), was treated by the ct. as evidence that such improvement was within the last-mentioned provision.—Re VERNEY'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1898] 1 Ch. 508; 67 L. 629. Charge upon corpus—Tenant for life to keep down interest.]—A., by several deeds of the same date, granted, for valuable considerations, several annuities or rentcharges for lives, to be issuing & payable out of certain real estates, of which he was the owner, reserving to himself & his heirs, in each case, a power to repurchase the annuity, on payment, at three months' notice, of the original price, together with a half-yearly payment of it in advance. Each annuity was secured by the personal covenant of the grantor, by clauses of distress & entry in case it should be a certain number of days in arrear, & by a warrant of attorney to confess judgment against the grantor for double the original price, & by another deed of even date which recited the annuities as being respectively subject to "a proviso for redemption or repurchase," the real estates on which they were charged, were conveyed to trustees for a term of years, with a power of sale to secure the regular payment of them, & subject thereto on trust for the grantor. The grantor by his will charged his real estates in aid of his personal estate with the payment of his debts, other than mtge. debts, & subject thereto, devised them in strict settlement:—Held: the annuities were to be treated as securities for the repayment of loans, & consequently that the value of them, there being no personal assets for their payment, was, by virtue of the will, a charge upon the corpus of the real estates, & the tenant for life of the real estates, as between him & the remainderman, was only liable to keep down the interest on such value.—*BULWER v. of £300 to testator's three daughters, & the survivors & survivor, with a gift over to the last survivor, of the sum set apart to answer the annuity. After the death of one of the daughters the fund set apart was lost by the misconduct of the trustee, & the annuity remained unpaid for the rest of the lives of the other two; but after their deaths a sum of money forming part of the residue, but of less amount than the original fund, becoming available:—Held: as the last survivor had had no opportunity of receiving the capital during her life, the annuity was to be considered as continuing for her benefit, after her sister's death until her own, &, therefore, she was entitled to an apportionment, in respect of the arrears of such annuity during that interval, as well as in respect of the principal fund.—*INNES v. 633. Payment out of income—Deficiency supplied from capital.—Testatrix, by her will, bequeathed pecuniary legacies & annuities; & subject to the bequests thereinbefore contained, she gave the residue to A. for life, with remainders over. The estate was not sufficient to satisfy the annuities & pay the pecuniary legacies; but if govt. annuities were purchased for the annuitants out of the corpus there would be enough left to pay the pecuniary legacies & leave a small surplus:—Held: as between the tenant for life & the remaindermen, the tenant for life was not entitled to have govt. annuities purchased to satisfy the annuitants; but the income must be applied, so far as it would extend, in paying the annuities, recourse being had from time to time to the capital to make up the deficiency.—*Re GRANT, WALKER v. 634. Sum set aside out of capital & income—Sufficient to pay annuities.—It was clear that the obligation to pay the annuities was imposed on the exors., & consequently they were bound to retain in their hands an amount of personal estate sufficient to make it practically certain that the annuities would be fully paid, & not necessarily out of income alone. The exors. must retain such a sum as would, partly by means of income & partly by means of capital, be sufficient to provide for payment of the annuities (STIRLING, J.).—*Re LEEDS (DUCHESS), MOWBRAY v. By his will settlor appointed the property comprised in the later settlement, subject to the incumbrances thereon & subject as therein mentioned, to trustees in trust for his brother for life, with remainders as therein mentioned:—Held: there being no covenant on the part of settlor rendering him or his estate liable for payment of the rentcharge, the rentcharge was not apportionable between the capital & income of the settlor's estate, & must be borne by the tenant for life of the property charged therewith.—*Re POPHAM, BUTLER v. 640. General rule.]—Testator, after giving an annuity to his wife, devised his real estates to trustees in trust to pay the annuity thereout, & gave his wife powers of distress & entry on his estates. He then devised his estates in strict settlement subject, expressly, to the annuity & to the powers of distress & entry:—Held: nevertheless, taking the whole of the will together, testator's personal estate was primarily liable to pay the annuity.

The rule of law is that prima facie debts & legacies are payable out of the personal estate; & if an annuity or a legacy is given out of a mixed fund consisting of realty & personalty the personalty is primarily liable to the payment of it unless it is exempted from that liability either by express words or by the manifest intention of testator to be collected from the context of his will (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—*ROBERTS v. 649. — No charge on realty—Realty & personalty given separately.]—Testatrix, who died in 1782, gave an annuity to A. B. & devised her real estates to M. & his sons, in strict settlement, & bequeathed her personal estate to M. absolutely. Down to 1821, the annuity was paid by the persons in possession of the real estates, & no fund for payment thereof was ever set apart out of testatrix's personal estate, although that estate was administered in a suit instituted by her legatees, to which A. was a party, & in which the annuity was erroneously considered as not primarily charged upon testatrix's personal estate. M. bequeathed his personal estate to L. & died. L. afterwards died, & one of defts. was her extrix. :—Held : A. had no claim, upon L.'s estate, in respect of his annuity.—BROWN v. CLAXTON (1829), 3 Sim. 225 ; 57 E. R. 983.

650. — Annuity given in lieu of dower.]—A. mortgaged an estate in 1774 ; he left by his will, in 1775, an annuity to his widow in lieu of dower. W., the original mtgee., subsequently mortgaged his interest in this estate to Messrs. R. & Co. In 1786, Messrs. R. & Co. filed a bill against W. & the real & personal representatives of A. for the purpose of obtaining a foreclosure. By a decree in this suit in 1791, a declaration was made that the widow, having relinquished her title to dower became a bond fide purchaser of the annuity, & was entitled to be paid it out of the mtgd. estate. This suit not having been prosecuted, & the widow having died in 1794, her representatives, in 1822, filed a bill against the heir of W. & other persons claiming under him, & the heirs & devisees of A., for the payment of the arrears of the annuity during her lifetime, or that the estate should be sold, & the arrears be paid out of the proceeds :—Held : (1) the annuity, having not been expressly charged on the real estate of A., was a mere pecuniary legacy, & the decree of 1791 was erroneous, in declaring that the widow was entitled to be paid it out of the mtgd. estate ; (2) the remedies for the recovery of the arrears of such an annuity were held to have been lost by length of time.

If the decree of 1791 had been in a suit instituted by the annuitant, & had ascertained what was due for the annuity we might have had to consider whether, as nothing had been done on that decree from 1791 to 1822, we ought not to presume that the debt so ascertained was satisfied (LORD WYNFORD).—*WHITE v. 658. Liability of personality not specifically bequeathed—Annuities charged on realty & personality.]—Testator, being possessed of leasehold property, & Long Annuities, by his will charged certain annuities upon all his real & personal estate, & then gave all his real & personal estate to trustees, upon certain trusts for the benefit of a tenant for life & certain persons in remainder, & empowered his trustees, notwithstanding the previous gift & bequest to sell the freehold & leasehold estates:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the income from the leasehold & the Long Annuities, without their being converted.

The question is, whether the charges of this description, "debts & expenses" are not to fall rateably upon the proportions of property. Charges of that description, for raising of which the consols were sold, ought to fall rateably upon the different descriptions of property. The leaseholds are specifically bequeathed in the very strict sense of the term; perhaps the Long Annuities are not specifically bequeathed in the strict sense of the term. There is a distinction. As to the permanent property, there ought to be an apportionment. Debts & charges of this description ought to be apportioned between the several portions of testator's personal estate not specifically bequeathed & that for this purpose the leasehold estate ought to be considered as specifically bequeathed, & the Long Annuities as not specifically bequeathed (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.).—BURTON v. MOUNT (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 383; 11 L. T. O. S. 492; 12 Jur. 934; 64 E. R. 171.

659. — In priority to personality specifically bequeathed.]—Testator gave various annuities for lives with bequests over of them & charged them upon his freehold & leasehold estates. He gave all his real & personal property to trustees in trust to pay the rents of his freehold, copyhold & leasehold estates, & the interest of all his stock in the public funds, with the interest of all mtges., annuities & other securities of which he might die possessed, to his son for life, with a disposition in favour of the son's children, & after his death without any, which happened, testator gave his freehold, leasehold & copyhold estates to one daughter & her issue, & all his funded property & other personal estate to another daughter & her issue:—Held: the gift of the leasehold estates to the one daughter was specific, but that the gift of the funded property to the other was not, & the latter was consequently chargeable with the annuities in priority to the former.—FIELDING v. PRESTON (1857), 1 De G. & J. 438; 29 L. T. O. S. 337; 5 W. R. 851; 44 E. R. 793, L. C.; varying S. C. sub nom. FIELDING v. PRESTON, SMITH v. SMITH (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 257.

661. —]—It appears that the real estate falls very short of answering all the charges upon it; & therefore plff.'s counsel insist, she is entitled to have these deficiencies turned upon the personal & copyhold estates belonging to the late Mr. Lanoy, her father; because there is a covenant in the marriage settlement, that in case his wife should survive her husband, then his heirs; exors., etc., should pay the £500 per annum to his wife, clear of everything except the land tax. But though there is this covenant, it is truly said by deft.'s counsel, that the personal assets are not the original fund charged, & in that respect differs from a mtge., or any other incumbrance, for there being a borrowing & a lending in the case of a mtge., the real estate is considered only as a pledge; & the personal estate, which is the natural fund, is liable in the first place; but this rule has never been carried so far as to extend it to a provision upon a settlement (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*LANOY v. 662. Demonstrative bequest of annuities.]—Gift by will of annuities followed by a declaration that they should be paid by the trustees out of the rents of real estate thereby devised. Gift of all real & residuary personal estate on trust, out of the rents of the realty, to pay the annuities, & subject thereto, to apply the real & residuary personal estate on certain trusts:—Held: the bequest of the annuities was demonstrative; & the rents having proved insufficient, the annuities were payable out of the residuary personal estate.

The authorities may be ranged under three heads, the distinctions being perfectly clear, though there is often much difficulty in applying them to a particular will.

The first class is where you have a simple gift of a legacy or annuity, with a mere charge upon real estate; & there the personal estate is not only not exonerated, but remains primarily liable; just as in the case of a charge of debts.

Another class is where the legacy or annuity is a specific gift out of real estate, which is assumed to be sufficient to cover the amount. There the personal estate is in no way liable, & if the specific fund fails, the gift must fail with it.

The third class is intermediate to these, where a legacy or annuity is, as it is termed, demonstrative, there being a clear general gift, but a particular fund pointed out as that which is to be primarily liable, on failure of which the general personal estate remains liable (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—*PAGET v. 666. ——— Realty & personality given to same persons.]—Testator gave to his wife an annuity of £60, issuing & payable out of his real estate thereafter devised to his three sons. He then gave to his daughter A. a legacy of £500, & to each of his sons H. & S., & to each of his daughters M. & E., a legacy of £1,000 to be paid, with interest, two years after his death; & he thereby charged & made chargeable his real estate, thereafter devised to his three sons, J., T., & F., with the payment of the legacies & the interest thereon. He gave his personal estate, charged with the payment of debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & expenses of proving his will, unto his sons J., T., & F., & gave all his residuary real estate, subject to mtgs., & subject to & charged with the payment of the annuity of £60, & the legacies to his sons H. & S. & his daughters M. & E., & also the legacy of £500 to his daughter A., & subject also, in aid of his personal estate, to the payment of his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses & the expenses of proving his will, equally between his sons J., T., & F.:—Held: the legacies were charged on the real estate exclusively in exoneration of the personal estate.—*Re NEEDHAM, ROBINSON v. 668. ———.]—Personal estate held exonerated from the payment of the legacies & annuities bequeathed by a will.

Testator bequeathed legacies, & devised & bequeathed annuities or rentcharges, & he charged them on a real estate, & subject thereto, he devised that real estate to A. He dealt similarly with another real estate; & he bequeathed his personal estate in trust to pay his debts & certain specified expenses, & to pay the rest to a charity:—Held: the annuities & legacies were charged on the real estate, & the personal estate was exonerated.

The general principle undoubtedly is, that, as testator is presumed to know that his personal estate is the primary fund for the payment of legacies & annuities, the ct. requires clear & distinct words to exonerate the primary fund (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*ION v. Testator also gave certain annuities, which he charged on his N. estate, giving to one annuitant £10 a year, or £5 & his tenement at the lodge on the N. estate. Testator did not pay off any part of the £6,000 mtge. :—Held: his personal estate was not exonerated from payment of the mtge. debt, but it was exonerated from payment of the annuities.—*LOMAX v. Testator, after bequeathing a legacy, & expressly charging part of his real estate with an annuity to the legatee, devised & bequeathed all the rest, residue, & remainder of all & singular his real & personal estate, subject to his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses to trustees, whom he also appointed exors., upon certain trusts :—Held: the legacy was well charged upon the real estate.—

He then directed his business to be carried on till his son attained the age of thirty, but did not dispose of the profits, nor did his will contain any further disposition of his real or personal estate, except a gift of a particular house. Testator carried on his business in a freehold mill which was his own property :—Held: the legacies were not charged on the real estate, for the direction to the exors. to realise such parts of his estate as they thought right to pay the legacies was satisfied by holding it to apply to property which they took as exors.—Re CAMERON, *NIXON v. 678. ———. Covenant to charge sufficient part of realty of which covenantor dies seised—Subsequent bequest not treated as satisfaction.]—A father on the marriage of his second son, by deed of settlement covenanted to pay him an annuity of £1,000 a year for life, & to charge the annuity on a sufficient part of the real estate he might die seised of, provided that nothing in the settlement should prevent his dealing with his real estate during his life, or, so only that sufficient real estate were left charged with the annuity, by will. The father subsequently made his will by which he devised his real estate, subject to the charges & incumbrances thereon, in strict settlement on his first & other sons in tail male; he bequeathed the greater part of his personal estate among his children, giving his second son legacies, the income of which when invested would be considerably more than £1,000 a year. He died, leaving three sons :—Held: (1) the settlement operated not only as a covenant by the father, but also as a charge upon all the real estate of which he should die seised; (2) the words "subject to the charges & incumbrances thereon" were too general to rebut the presumption against double portions, & the second son was not entitled both to the annuity & to the bequests under the will.—*MONTAGU v. 682. — Realty & personalty devised to grantor—Liability of personalty.—Testator after giving certain specific & pecuniary legacies, devised all the residue of his real & personal estate & effects to trustees. J., testator's eldest son by his second wife, who survived his father, & died leaving a son, by his will charged all & every his lands, etc., whatsoever & wheresoever situate, with an annuity of £100 to his widow in lieu of dower:—Held: this annuity was not chargeable upon the share of J. in the freehold & leasehold lands so devised by the will & codicil of his father, but the same was chargeable upon his share in the residuary personal property, rents, profits, & accumulations.—RADLEY v. LIES (1841), 3 Man. & G. 327; 3 Scott, N. R. 665; 133 E. R. 1169.

683. — Realty primarily liable.—Testator after directing his debts, funeral, & testamentary expenses to be paid as soon as conveniently might be after his death, bequeathed several annuities & pecuniary legacies to various persons, directing the legacies, except one which was given to a person under twenty-one, to be paid within twelve calendar months after his death. He then declared that the several annuities thereinbefore bequeathed should be charged upon his real estates. By a subsequent clause he charged all his real estate with the payment of all his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & legacies, or of such part thereof as his personal estate not specifically bequeathed should be insufficient to pay & satisfy:—Held: the annuities were primarily, if not solely, charged upon testator's real estate; & under the term legacies, he did not mean to comprise annuities.—SHIPPERDSON v. KNAPMAN (1853), Kay, 123; 2 Eq. Rep. 710; 23 L. J. Ch. 174; 24 L. T. O. S. 21; 2 W. R. 664; 69 E. R. 52.

685. — Demise of term—Proviso for cesser on investment of amount sufficient to secure annuity—Direction by will for payment out of personalty.—Testator had, before his marriage, limited lands to trustees for a term, to secure a debt, & subject thereto, to other trustees for another term, to secure an annuity of £100 per annum to his intended wife for life, with a proviso for determining the latter term, on his investing a sufficient amount to secure an equal annuity. He died without having made such an investment, having by his will directed payment out of his personal estate of his debts, including what might be charged upon the settled lands; & he bequeathed his residuary estate to his widow. Before his death he had paid off the debt secured by the first of the above-mentioned terms, which had consequently determined, & the annuity was the only charge upon the estates:—Held: the tenant of the estates was not entitled to have them exonerated as against the widow out of the residue.—REEVE v. REEVE (1850), 3 De G. & Sm. 714; 14 L. T. O. S. 544; 14 Jur. 204; 64 E. R. 674.

686. — Executors having power to appropriate moneys out of mixed fund—Deficiency to be supplied from specific devises—Specifically devised estates primarily liable.—Testator gave an annuity, & declared that it should be yearly issuing out of his lands & hereditaments, & empowered his exors., at their discretion, out of his personal estate or his real estate, to appropriate sufficient moneys to answer the annuity, declaring that thereupon the hereditaments should be discharged; & he proceeded to devise certain parts of his freehold & leasehold property specifically, & to devise the residue of both, but as to the whole real estate charged in aid of his personal estate with his pecuniary legacies; & he declared that, if the funeral & testamentary expenses, debts & pecuniary legacies, & any money appropriated to answer the annuity should absorb the whole residuary real & personal estate, the deficiency should be made good out of the specific devises; & that the whole of the annuity, or so much thereof as should not be provided for by any such appropriation, should be charged upon the specific devises rateably. The exors. did not appropriate any fund to answer the annuity:—Held: it was primarily payable out of the specifically devised estates.—WOODHEAD v. TURNER (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 429; 64 E. R. 899.

687. — Right to marshal—Satisfaction out of personalty.—Testator directed his debts to be paid out of a fund after provided; he directed his real estate to be sold, & out of the produce his debts & funeral expenses to be paid, the residue to be held by the trustees upon certain trusts, he afterwards gave certain legacies & annuities; & he then bequeathed his personal estate, "after & subject to the payment of his debts, funeral expenses, legacies & annuities" to the party chiefly interested under those trusts, absolutely:—Held: (1) the personal estate was the primary fund for the payment of the debts; (2) the doctrine of marshalling was applicable in favour of legatees & annuitants, who were, therefore, decreed to stand in the place of the specialty & simple contract creditors as against the real estate devised in trust for sale, & payment of debts.

There is nothing in this will to take the case out of the ordinary rule, by which in the absence of intention, either express or implied on the part of testator, to exonerate his personalty, that personalty is the primary fund for the payment of the debts (CRANWORTH, L.J.).—*PATERSON v. The property was insufficient for creation of the rentcharges & payment of the mtge. debts. There was no contrary or other intention signified by testator within Real Estate Charges Act, 1854 (c. 113):—Held: on the principle of marshalling, the rentcharges were entitled to have the property sold, reserving the rentcharges, any deficiency of the proceeds for satisfaction of the mtge. debts to be made good out of the general personal estate.—*Re FRY, FRY v. Testator made a codicil to his will, & thereby directed that the trustees or trustee acting under his will should pay a further legacy of £40 to A. & an annuity of £100 to B.:—Held: the legacy & annuity given by the codicil were charged on testator's real estate.—*GALLIMORE v. 696. Effect of creation of mixed fund.]—Testator by his will devises all his real estate to his exors. for the purposes thereafter stated; & after empowering them either to continue his business or to dispose of it, he gives the profits of it in the one case, & the interest of the moneys arising from the sale in the other, & also the interest of the securities on which the rest of his capital should be invested, to his daughter for life, her receipt to be a discharge. He then gives her the rents & profits of all his real estates during her life; & at her decease he devises & bequeaths to her heirs all his estates real & personal as tenants in common; if his daughter has but one child, such child is to possess the whole; but if she should die without issue, then at her decease he gives certain legacies. He next directs all his goods & effects to be sold, his said legacies to be paid, & a sum invested sufficient to purchase £150 a year, which is to be paid to the husband of the daughter. He then orders his real estates to be sold at the decease of his daughter or at the decease of his brothers & sisters, according as a particular event may turn out; & he gives over to certain persons all the residue of his personal estate, including the proceeds of the sale of the real estates when sold, & the rents of them until they are sold. The daughter dies without having had issue:—Held: the annuities & legacies given at her decease were charged both on the real & personal estate, & were to be borne proportionally by the two funds.—*DUNK v. 697. — Intention to create deduced from terms of will.]—In order that legacies charged upon real estate may be payable out of the real & personal estate pro rata, it is not necessary that testator should have directed an absolute conversion of the real estate. It is sufficient that he has shown an intention of creating a mixed fund of realty & personalty out of which the legacies are to be paid. Therefore, where testator had empowered his trustees to sell his real & personal estate in case & as often as they should think fit, & had directed them to pay certain legacies out of the residue of his real & personal estate, & the moneys arising from the sale thereof:—Held: upon the construction of the whole will, the legacies were payable pro rata out of the real & personal estate.—*ALLAN v. He directed that the profit of his mines should not be deemed income, but only so much as should remain after laying by £10 per cent. for repairs, etc. Subject to the above legacy & annuities, testator gave all his real & personal estate to his son, & appointed his son & the two trustees exors.; & empowered the trustees to let the son into possession of all the property, upon his securing the legacy & annuities. Testator died, leaving personal estate insufficient to pay his debts, unless the colliery was resorted to. The trustees disclaimed & renounced. The son proved the will, entered into possession of the whole property, & worked out the colliery, which yielded, in the whole, profits amounting to £27,000. He paid testator's debts out of his own moneys, & claimed to be allowed interest upon them:—Held: (1) the £1,000 legacy was payable out of the real & personal estate pro rata; (2) pltf. was not entitled to interest on the arrears, if any, of her annuity.—*LORD v. The entail was barred, & R.'s son became owner in fee simple of the real estate. The question was how the annuities were to be borne, whether, on the son of R. attaining twenty-one, the real estate was exonerated, or the annuities were to be paid rateably out of the rents & proceeds of the whole real & personal estate treated as one fund:—Held: although there was no absolute conversion of real estate, the annuities were to be paid rateably out of the whole income as one fund.—*HOWARD v. I also give & bequeath to T. £2,000, in which sum or thereabouts, he now stands indebted to me, subject to, & I charge the same with the payment of the following life annuities & sums of money; that is to say. She then gave to her sister £40, to her sister's husband, W., if he survived his wife, £20, & to her sister, M., £20, which annuities were to be paid when they became due by T.; the first payments to the two sisters at the end of six months after the death of testatrix; & to W. at the end of six months after the death of his wife. Testatrix then gave four legacies of £50 each to nephews & nieces; £40 to the only child of a nephew, & £50 between the two children of a deceased nephew, & directed these legacies to be paid within twelve months after the death of her sister, M., & to be paid by T. Then followed a proviso, that she did not intend the legacy of £2,000 to T. to exonerate him from the debt due to herself, but whatever should be due at her decease was to be taken in part or in satisfaction, as the case might be, of the legacy; & then came a general direction that the several & respective legacies hereinbefore bequeathed should be paid to the respective legatees within twelve calendar months after her decease, or so soon afterwards as her real & personal estates could be collected & converted into money. There was also a direction that the legacies payable to the children of the nephews should be vested interests in them at twenty-one, & in the meantime the money should be invested by the trustees for the benefit of the children. The debts exhausted the personal estate, but the realty & leaseholds were sufficient to pay the annuity. A bill having been filed, before the annuity was in arrear, to have a fund set apart to secure it:—Held: the trustees were not bound to sell, & the ct. only made a declaration that the annuity constituted a charge on the whole estate, & made plffs. pay the costs up to the hearing.—*BURRELL v. A sum of about £11,000 had been applied in discharge of incumbrances, subsequent to the date of her annuity deeds, & she filed her bill against the representatives of J., to compel them to discharge her claims, upon the ground that they were answerable to the extent of the above sum, which she stated to have been misapplied. The representatives (applts.), answered, that the grant of the annuities was voluntary, & ought to be postponed to all just debts, or pro turpi causa, & therefore void. The only evidence as to the consideration was that of a servant in J.'s family, who said, he believed that resp. & J. cohabited as man & wife—his wife being alive at the time. The Master of the Rolls directed an inquiry as to the consideration, but the Chancellor on appeal altered this decree, thinking probably that there was no sufficient evidence upon which to found an order for inquiry. 715. Annuitant proves pari passim with other legatees.—Although will directs prior payment.]—Testator by his will, bequeathed an annuity to his wife for her life, & made it a primary charge in preference to all other legacies, on a leasehold estate, which was, together with certain policies of insurance on the life of testator, subject to two mtges.; & he directed that, if the rents & profits of such leasehold estate should be insufficient to pay the wife's annuity, then the same should be paid out of his [other] personal estate. The mtges. were paid off by the exors. out of the produce of the policies, & the general personal estate:—Held: (1) the wife's annuity, so far as it fell upon the personal estate, other than the leasehold estate specifically charged, was not entitled to priority over the other legacies; (2) the mtge. debts, to which the leasehold estate specifically charged with the annuity was subject, should be apportioned rateably upon the leasehold estate & the policies of insurance, according to their respective value & amount; & the legatees, other than the wife, were entitled to have the assets marshalled, & to stand in the place of the mtgees. of the leasehold estate, to the extent of that part of the mtge.

The cause did not come on for further consideration till July, 1858. P. then claimed interest on the £1,002 from the date of the certificate as against subsequent incumbrancers :—Held : (1) as the payment of the arrears had been delayed merely through hindrances in the prosecution of the suit, & not in consequence of misconduct or improper attempts to evade payment, interest ought not to be allowed, & Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 28, did not alter the case.

771. Principal or surety—Depends on terms of instrument.]—(1) By deed of annuity in consideration of £9,000 therein stated to be paid to L., E., M., & M., L. granted to D. & H. an annuity or clear yearly rent of £1,800 for three lives, charged upon his estate: & L., E., M., & M. covenanted to pay the annuity or yearly rent, with a proviso for repurchase by them, or any or either of them. They executed their joint & several bond & warrant of attorney to confess judgment on the bond, the judgment to be as a further security for the annuity, & to be entered forthwith against L. & E. but not against M. & M. until default of payment, & execution not to be entered on the judgment against L. & E. until the annuity should be forty days in arrear; & E. for further securing the annuity, agreed, in the event of not becoming the purchaser of L.'s estate in twelve months, to assign, at L.'s expense, a mtge. which E. held on it, & also to procure the guarantee of a competent person for payment of the annuity:—Held: E. was a principal grantor of the annuity, & not a surety.

(2) The question, whether a person is principal or surety in the grant of annuity, is to be determined on the terms of the instruments; no extraneous evidence is admissible for that purpose.

(3) Any equities between grantors of an annuity are not to affect the grantees, unless they have notice of them at the time of the grant.—MOLLIER v. EYRE (1840), 9 Cl. & Fin. 1; 8 E. R. 313, H. for the prince, did not pay it at the respective quarter days:—Held: the surety was bound at all events at law by the terms of the obligation to pay it, if the prince, etc., did not at the stipulated times of payment; whether or not the grantee or assignee of the annuity had the right or means of compelling payment against the principal or his funds, by reason of any default of such grantee or assignee in not presenting a particular of his demand to the prince's treasurer as required in all cases within 35 Geo. 3, c. 125, s. 7, on pain of being foreclosed of such demand; whatever equitable claim might be founded by the surety on such neglect.—*O'KELLY v. SUB-SECT. 1.—FORFEITURE.

779. Proviso for cesser on annuitant interfering with management of estate—Frivolous action against trustees.]—Testator devised real estate to trustees upon trust out of the rents to pay certain annuities to his wife & son respectively for life, & after the death of the survivor upon trust for the son's sons in fee, with limitations over; with a proviso that, if his son should in any way intermeddle with or interfere, or attempt to intermeddle with or interfere, in the management of testator's real or personal estate, the annuities to him should immediately cease. He gave, devised, & bequeathed unto his daughter absolutely all his residuary real & personal estate, & appointed the trustees his exors. The son brought an action against the trustees alleging that his annuities had not been paid, & making charges of waste & other improper conduct in the management of the estate, none of which allegations or charges were established:—Held: the action, being in fact frivolous & vexatious, was in breach of the proviso, & the annuities had, in consequence, ceased.—ADAMS v. A. released to B. & his heirs the rent. E. sued a certiorari to the clerk of the statutes, etc.; & the recognisance was certified; & E. sued out an extent, by which the rent was extended & liberate delivered to E. E. for arrears of the rent during six years & a half, brought debt against B. who all that time was tenant of the land, & averred the life of A. :—Held: as against E. the rent was not extinct by the release of A.—LILLINGSTON'S CASE (1607), 7 *Co. The husband was entitled to a rentcharge issuing out of the hereditaments, but it was not mentioned in the settlement. The settlement contained no covenants for title :—Held: the settlement operated by way of release & not by way of grant of the rentcharge, & as the husband & wife, the owners of the unsettled moiety of the hereditaments, had concurred, that moiety, by virtue of Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1859 (c. 35), s. 10, remained subject to the entire charge.—*PRICE v. 785. Rentcharge payable while tenant in tail in possession—Effect of disentail.]—By his will dated June 16, 1910, testator settled the B. estates to the same uses as were limited by a settlement of July 21, 1893, of other estates under which they stood limited at testator’s death to the use of his daughter V. in tail male with remainder to his sister F. in tail male with divers remainders over. He also devised other property to the use that his trustees should receive a rentcharge “during such period or periods continuous or discontinuous” as either of them, V. & F., “shall be tenant for life in possession or tenant in tail male or in tail in possession under this my will” of the B. estates & pay the same to such one of them, V. & F., “as shall for the time being be tenant for life in possession or tenant in tail male or in tail in possession under this my will” of the B. estates. By a disentailing assurance dated July 22, 1918, V. disentailed the B. estates & resettled them to such uses as she should appoint or in default of & until & subject to any such appointment to the uses which immediately before the execution of the disentailing assurance were subsisting or capable of taking effect :—Held: V. did not as a result of the disentailing assurance cease to be tenant in tail male in possession of the B. estates under testator’s will, & therefore, the rentcharge given to her by the same will had not been determined by the execution of the disentailing assurance.—*Re MEEKING, MEEKING v. In 1812, C. agreed to sell all his lands, including those at T., to W. for £90,528, & to convey free from incumbrances, except certain mtges., & in pursuance of the agreement W. was let into possession, & paid large sums. The annuities to G. being in arrear, in 1818 C. granted to him all his lands on trust to sell them, & out of the proceeds, to retain costs & pay incumbrances; & in 1824, C. assigned to G. the unpaid balance of the said purchase-money, subject to prior charges, to apply the same in payment of what was stated in account to be due to G. Nothing was done on these deeds. W. filed a bill in 1825 for specific performance of the agreement with C. & for re-purchase of G.'s annuities, alleging that C., at W.'s request, gave G. such notice as was required to enable C., or W. in his place, to re-purchase the annuities, & that on the day in the notice mentioned, the agents of C. & W. went to G.'s residence, to pay the principal & arrears with costs, & to tender deeds of transfer for his execution, & G. being from home, they left a notice that the money & deeds would remain for ten days at the office of one of them. The bill prayed for a declaration that the annuities had ceased from that day. G. by his answer, admitted the service of a notice, signed C., by E. & P., his attorneys, but insisted that they had no authority from C., & that the notice was irregular & of no avail, as not being in pursuance of the powers of re-purchase:—Held: the annuities had not ceased, the notice of repurchase was not in strict pursuance of the power in the deeds, & was also defective in not naming a place for payment of the money.—*JOY v. 811. Sale of land charged—Jurisdiction of court to order redemption—Where cost of redemption exceeds purchase price.—The ct. will not, under the power given to it by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 5, compel a vendor of land to pay money into ct. for the purpose of discharging an incumbrance upon the land, when the result of so doing would be to inflict a great hardship on him, as for instance, if the incumbrance is a perpetual rentcharge & the sum necessary to procure its discharge would far exceed the amount of the purchase-money payable to the vendor. A railway co. contracted to sell some superfluous land free from incumbrances for £868. The contract provided that, if the purchaser should decline to waive any valid objection to the title the co. might at any time rescind the contract without paying the purchaser any costs or compensation. The abstract of title showed that the land was subject to a perpetual rentcharge of £63 issuing out of it, this being the consideration for which the co. had purchased it under their statutory powers for the making of a railway which by a subsequent Act they were authorised to abandon. The purchaser required the co. to procure the release of the land from the rentcharge. This they declined to do, but offered to indemnify him against it. He declined to waive his requisition:—Held: the co. were entitled to rescind the contract under the condition & they were not bound to apply to the ct. under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 5, to declare the land freed from the rentcharge or to take any other steps to procure the release of the rentcharge.—*Re GREAT NORTHERN RY. (2) Testator by his will gave an annuity of £300 a year to his granddaughter A., & after her death he directed that the sum should be raised & paid among her children as she should appoint, & in default of appointment in equal shares during their respective lives; & he gave to his granddaughter E. a like annuity to be paid to her & her children in the same manner as the annuity thereinbefore given to his granddaughter A. By a codicil he revoked the devises of the several annuities, & instead thereof gave to each of his granddaughters A. & E. an annuity of £150 to be payable in the same manner as the annuities of £300:—Held: the substitution of the smaller annuities extended to the interests of the children of the granddaughters.—Re FREME'S CONTRACT, [1895] 2 Ch. 778; sub nom. *Re FREME'S ESTATE, Re FREME'S CONTRACT, FREME v. When Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), came into operation the property was vested in the vendor in fee but subject to two family charges which were interests vested in possession, namely, a sum of £8,750 secured by a term of two hundred years, limited by a settlement of 1880, & a jointure rentcharge of £4,000 imposed upon the property by a deed of 1925. Before the disentailing deed of 1924 the property had been subject to a compound settlement constituted by the documents, including a disentailing deed of 1914, or some of them, mentioned in an order of the Ch. Div. dated Mar. 1, 1920, under which the trustees of the 1880 settlement were appointed trustees, for the purposes of Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, of the compound settlement. By a vesting deed of 1926 it was declared that the property was vested in the vendor in fee simple & that the trustees of the 1880 settlement were trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18). In these circumstances the question arose whether, if the purchase price of the property was paid to the existing trustees, the purchaser got a good title discharged from all claims in respect of the £8,750 & the £4,000 jointure rentcharge:—Held: immediately before Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), came into operation the property was not settled land, but as it had been subject to a compound settlement under which the £8,750 was still a subsisting charge by Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 3, the settlement was deemed to be subsisting for the purposes of that Act; & under sects. 31 & 33 the trustees of the settlement were trustees of it for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), & a receipt by them of the purchase money would free the land sold from the £8,750; as under sect. 31 the trustees of the compound settlement were the trustees of any settlement constituted by the compound settlement & any instrument subsequent in date or operation, therefore the property was subject to a compound settlement constituted by the settlement of 1880, the disentailing deeds of 1914 & 1924, & the deed of 1925 which imposed the jointure of £4,000 & on the receipt by the trustees of the purchase-money the property in the hands of the purchaser would be free also from the £4,000 rentcharge.—Re ALINGTON (LORD) & LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL'S CONTRACT, [1927] 2 Ch. 253; 96 L. Local comrs. of sewers were entitled to perpetual rentcharges for which the landowners' liabilities to repair sea walls had been commuted under a local Act, which transferred those liabilities & imposed various duties to & on the comrs.:—Held: the comrs., notwithstanding their statutory liabilities & duties in respect of the rentcharges, were absolutely entitled thereto in fee simple in possession within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 45.—Re CALDICOT & WENTLOOE ACT, 1884, *ETON COLLEGE v. SUB-SECT. 1.—FORFEITURE.

816. "Any act with a view to charge annuity"
—Sale of new annuity—Authority to retain from settled annuity.]—By a marriage settlement an annuity for the life of the wife's mother was assigned to trustees, for the wife for life, remainder for the husband for life, remainder for the issue of the marriage. Provided that if the husband should, during the life of the wife or of her mother, become bankrupt, compound with, or assign his effects for the benefit of his creditors, or should do any act with a view to charge the annuity, his interests should be for the benefit of the issue. The husband, after his wife's death, sold an annuity to one of the trustees of the settlement, & signed an unstamped agreement to deposit the settlement with him, & authorising him to retain the annuity so sold out of the settled annuity:—Held: the husband had forfeited his interest in the settled annuity.—STEPHENS v. JAMES (1831), 4 Sim. 499; 58 E. R. 186.

817. "Become liable to be vested in another person"—Revocable authority to trustees—To pay annuity to creditors.]—Under a settlement, O. was entitled to a life interest in an annuity, with a clause of forfeiture if he should enter into a composition with his creditors, or charge, assign, or in any manner by way of anticipation dispose of the annuity, or until anything should happen whereby it should vest or become liable to be vested in another person. O., being indebted to his bankers to a large amount, in pursuance of an agreement with them, gave the trustees a written authority to pay the annuity, as it should become due, to his bankers, who were to apply it partly in payment of interest & in reduction of the debt. It was alleged that there was an agreement with the bankers that the authority should be revocable:—Held: this occasioned a forfeiture of the life interest.—OLDHAM v. OLDHAM (1867), L. Some years after the date of the settlement the husband & wife separated by mutual consent, & they had not since cohabited:—Held: the restriction of the wife's enjoyment of the rents to the period of cohabitation was not void as against the policy of the law, & the trust in her favour determined upon her ceasing to live with her husband.—*Re HOPE-JOHNSTONE, HOPE-JOHNSTONE v. A. Redemption.

(a) When No Provision in Contract.

822. General rule—Not redeemable.—By a public Act, the Waterloo Bridge co. were authorised to raise money for the purpose of completing their undertaking, either among themselves, or by the admission of new members, or by granting annuities for term of years, or for life. The Act did not contain any provision that the annuities should or should not be redeemable. The co., however, in the original grant, reserved to themselves a power of redemption:—Held: under these circumstances, that an auctioneer putting up to sale one of these annuities, was bound, in his particulars of sale, to describe it as a redeemable annuity.

It is true that an annuity may be redeemable but it is not necessarily so; & it is not redeemable, unless there be a special provision to that effect in the deed granting it (ABBOT, C.J.).—COVERLEY v. BURRELL (1821), 5 B. & Ald. 257; 106 E. R. 1186.

827. Default in payment after decree—Annuity becomes irredeemable—Loss of right to set aside.—A decree in a suit to redeem an annuity having been made, that, in default of payment by pltf., the annuity should be irredeemable, pltf. was restrained from proceeding at law to set aside the annuity deed.—*FLIGHT v. 828. Ascertainment of value—Amount of 2½ per cent. government stock.—Where an annuitant, entitled to a perpetual annuity properly secured, is willing to receive a present payment of cash in lieu of his annuity, the amount of such cash payment ought to be such a sum as, at the price of the day, will purchase 2½ per cent. govt. stock sufficient to produce the annuity, excluding any charge for brokerage.—*HICKS v. (c) By Agreement.

829. Agreement by third party to redeem—Absence of consideration.—The son granted an annuity secured upon a living, of which he was incumbent & his father patron. The annuitant having proceeded to a sequestration of the living, for payment of his arrears, the father assured him, that he would sell the advowson & redeem the annuity out of the proceeds of the sale; & the annuitant, relying on that assurance, withdrew the sequestration; subsequently the advowson was sold, & the son vacated the living, so as to defeat the annuitant's security:—Held: the annuitant could not compel the father to perform his agreement to redeem, inasmuch as that agreement was an agreement without consideration.—SIMPSON v. HILL (1823), 2 L. J. O. S. Ch. 32.

830. Payment to third party—With whom annuitant living—By authority of annuitant.]—By a separation deed dated Apr. 22, 1797, A. the husband, covenanted with C., to pay B. the wife, during her life, into her proper hands, for her separate use, or to such persons as she should by any note in writing signed with her proper hand appoint, notwithstanding coverture, the yearly sum of £163 16s., by weekly payments of £3 3s. The deed contained a proviso for redemption of the annuity, on payment by A. to his wife, "to & for her separate use," of £1,000, & all arrears of the annuity then due. In Nov. 1797, A. gave D., with whom B. lived, a bond & warrant of attorney for £1,400, & interest, payable in 1799; & in his answer to a bill filed by A. in 1800, to restrain proceedings at law upon those securities, C. admitted, that as to £1,000, the consideration was the sum agreed to be paid by A. for the redemption of the annuity; & upon A.'s death the bond & warrant of attorney were found amongst his papers. In covenant by E., the administrator of C., against F. the exor. of A., to recover thirty-nine years' arrears of the annuity, F. pleaded that A. had, under the proviso, paid to B. for her separate use, £1,000 & all arrears. At the trial, the judge told the jury that the absence of any payment or claim for thirty-nine years, though not conclusive was evidence for their consideration, whether the annuity had been extinguished by payment of the £1,000 & arrears, under the proviso; & that, if the bond & warrant of attorney were given to D. by the authority of A. & for her use, for the £1,000, & the money thereby secured was actually paid to D. or to his personal representative, such payment was a payment to B., within the issue:—Held: the direction was correct.—BOSTOCK v. HUME (1844), 7 Man. & G. 893; 8 Scott, N. R. 590; 13 L. J. C. P. 225; 135 E. R. 362, Ex. Ch.

831. Offer to redeem made in pleadings—Whether court will enforce.]—The persons entitled to three annuities offered by their bill to redeem the six prior annuitants:—Held: it was in the discretion of the ct. whether it would enforce against pltf. an offer made by his bill, & under the circumstances of the present case, the offer ought not to be so enforced.—KNIGHT v. BOWYER (1858), 2 De G. & J. 421; 27 L. J. Ch. 520; 31 L. T. O. S. 287; 4 Jur. N. S. 569; 6 W. R. 565; 44 E. R. 1053, L. J.J.; subsequent proceedings (1859), 4 De G. & J. 619, L. J.J.

832. Notice of intention to redeem—Payment to agent of annuitant—Waiver of notice.]—By the deed securing an annuity which A. had granted to B., who resided abroad, power was given to A. to redeem the annuity upon paying a certain sum of money, & giving B. six months' notice in writing.

C., who was B.'s general agent in this country, received the redemption money from A., & delivered up to him the annuity deed without the notice required by the deed, & B., in fact, had no notice whatever that the money was about to be paid. C. had a general authority to invest & also to receive principal moneys as well as interest for B.:—Held: C. had, therefore, authority to waive the stipulation as to notice, & to receive the redemption money as he did for B.—WEBBER v. GRANVILLE (1860), 30 L. J. C. P. 92; 7 Jur. N. S. 420.

833. Construction of agreement—Grant of second annuity—Variation of right to redeem first annuity—Revival of right on cesser of second annuity.]—In 1838 pltf., then a widow, in consideration of £4,990, agreed to grant to C. an annuity of £538 during her life, & by the deed of grant, C. covenanted that if pltf. should at any time be desirous of repurchasing the annuity, C. would, on receiving all arrears on the annuity of £538, accept £4,990 in full for such repurchase. Pltf. afterwards married K., & in 1845 K., in consideration of £1,000, granted to C. another annuity of £133 5s. during the joint lives of pltf. & himself; & at the same time it was agreed between K. & C. that C. would accept the reduced sum of £480 instead of £538 on the first annuity, provided K. would not redeem one of the annuities without redeeming both. The reduced sum of £480 was paid & received up to K.'s death in 1861. Pltf. then gave notice to C. of her desire to redeem the first annuity:—Held: upon the construction of the agreement, upon the death of K. the right of C. to the full amount of £538 revived; upon each transaction, when the reduced sum was paid & received, all question of arrears was concluded; & hence pltf. was entitled to repurchase the annuity on payment of £4,990 & arrears since the death of K. at the rate of £538; but without paying arrears in respect of the difference between £538 & £480 during the joint lives of herself & K.—*KING v. 839. What amounts to release.—Deed not necessary.—A. having, in 1835, granted to B. an annuity of £150, for twenty-one years, with certain allowances to B. on the sale by him of spirits made by A., by a deed containing a proviso that when the allowances should exceed £400 a year, the annuity should not be payable so long as those allowances exceeded £400 a year, by a memorandum in writing, in 1836, without deed, it was agreed that in consideration of B.'s relinquishing the annuity, A. should pay to B. £300 a year, from a certain day, for seven years, in lieu thereof. In a letter addressed by A. to B., in 1838, & assented to by B., A. declared that B. was entitled under the deed to certain specified allowances, not to be less than £400 a year, or to be made up to that amount, & that B. was to receive £300 a year over & above all other allowances under the agreement of 1836, so as to yield him together not less than £700 a year:—Held: (1) that B. was entitled under the agreement of 1836, taken by itself, to the £300 a year, irrespectively of the amount of allowances receivable by him; (2) no release of the annuity by deed was necessary; & abstaining from demanding or receiving the annuity was a sufficient relinquishment.—HOME v. BOOTH (1842), 3 Man. & G. 709; 4 Scott, N. R. 526; 11 L. J. C. P. 74; 133 E. R. 1325.

841. Release executed by mistake.—Transaction set aside.—A. executed a bond to B. & C., conditioned for payment of an annuity of £100 to D. for life, & assigned an annuity of £120 for the life of M. & a policy of insurance for £700 on M.'s life, to B. & C., upon certain trusts for further securing the annuity of £100. M. died, & A. died shortly afterwards, having, as was then believed, received the £700 & applied it to his own use. Shortly afterwards D., in consideration of £500, released A.'s personal representative & B. & C. from the annuity of £100 & the securities for it. Some years afterwards it was discovered that A. had placed the £700 in a bank, in the names of B. & C., where it still remained:—Held: the release having been executed under a mistake was inoperative, & the £700 remained impressed with the trusts for securing the annuity of £100.—*HOME v. 842. Release obtained by fraud.—Agent of grantor withholding purchase-money.—Release left in possession of agent.—The grantor of an annuity entrusted T. with a sum of money for the purpose of redeeming it. T., without paying the money, obtained from the grantee a deed of release of the annuity. The grantee, however, did not sign any receipt for the money. T., who acted in the whole transaction as the agent of both parties, retained the money, & for the purpose of concealing his fraud, continued the payment of the annuity. He afterwards died insolvent:—Held: under the particular circumstances of the case the grantor was not discharged.—VANDELEUR v. BLAGRAVE (1847), 17 L. J. Ch. 45; 10 L. T. O. 843. — Annuity deed delivered to grantor.—In 1842, pltf. granted an annuity, & one solr., C., acted on behalf of both parties. In July, 1845, an arrangement was made between pltf.'s solr. & C., who was supposed by him to be still acting as the solr. of the annuitant, that £9,850 was to be paid to C., as the agent of the parties entitled to the annuity, & thereupon a release was to be executed of the annuity. On Sept. 24 following, pltf.'s solr. paid to C. part of the £9,850, but C. not having possessed himself of the securities which were on that occasion to be delivered up, a new arrangement was made for a temporary delay; & on Oct. 4 following, the two solrs. met to complete the transaction, when the residue of the £9,850 was paid by pltf.'s solr. to C., & the annuity deed, which had been previously given by the annuitant to C., and the memorandum of the judgment which had been entered up were delivered up by C., but no release of the annuity was executed by the annuitant. In May, 1846, the annuitant employed another solr., who made application for payment of the annuity, as if nothing had transpired touching the redemption or re-purchase of it. On bill filed by pltf. to restrain proceedings at law to obtain the payment of arrears of the annuity, notwithstanding the denial by the annuitant in his answer of C. having any authority to enter into any arrangement for the purchase of the annuity, the proceedings at law were restrained upon pltf. paying into ct. the amount of the annuity due & to become due from time to time, & undertaking forthwith to bring an action at law against the annuitant to try the question of C.'s authority to make the arrangement for the purchase of the annuity, the annuitant admitting the tender by pltf. of a release of the annuity.—*TEESDALE v. by the grantor upon & accepted by his father, & which was within a week of maturity:—Held: this was not such a transaction as would warrant the ct. in setting aside the securities eleven years after the date of the grant.—BARBER v. THOMAS (1849), 7 C. B. 612; 137 E. R. 243.

(b) Recovery of Purchase Price.

853. When recoverable—Contract executed.—Where A. purchased an annuity for his life, which was regularly paid up to the time of his death, but no memorial of the grant of annuity was enrolled:—Held: A's extrix. could not, on that ground, insist that the contract was void, & recover back the consideration money paid for the annuity.

Where the grantor of an annuity avoids it on the ground of non-compliance with the statute, the grantee also has a right to treat it as void & to recover back his money, & there is a great difference also where the grantee still has power to avoid the annuity. But here the contract has been fully executed as in Andree v. Fletcher (1789), 3 Term Rep. 266, & there are many strong cases respecting illegal wagers, where it has been held that money actually paid over cannot be recovered back (HOLROYD, J.).—DAVIS v. The jury ought not to find for debt., unless they are satisfied that there is fair ground for supposing, that, at some particular period during the seventeen years, pltf. actually executed a release of the annuity; &, to rebut the presumption of such a release, the jury may look at the situation of the parties, & take into their consideration the circumstances of pltf. being a near relative of the grantor of the annuity, having large expectations from him, & of the grantor being a very old man, peremptory with his relatives, & very attentive to his pecuniary concerns.—BIGG v. A fine levied to the grantee of a rentcharge, with a power limited by way of use, to enter on non-payment of the rent, “& retain until he be fully satisfied,” conveys to him on entry an estate in possession, of which his lessee may maintain ejectment; for it is quasi a conditional inheritance until the rent be paid.

Qu.: If a man grant a rentcharge in fee, & covenant to levy a fine to the uses, intents, & purposes, that if the rent be behind, the grantee then & from thenceforth may enter, etc., & afterward the fine is levied, whether he can enter for rent arrear, due & demanded before the fine was levied.—*HAVERGILL v. In 1844, the rentcharge being in arrear, & the property so dilapidated as to be unproductive, pltfs. entered into possession & expended money in repairs, etc.:—Held: they had no lien on the land for the moneys so expended, whether debts, the owners of a subsequent rentcharge, had notice of such repairs & had acquiesced in the making thereof or not, & the remedy of pltfs., if any, was at law, & depended on the construction of the deed of 1778.—HOOPER v. COOKE (1856), 25 L. J. Ch. 467; 27 L. T. O. S. 178; 2 Jur. N. S. 527, L. C.

898. Land subject to two rentcharges—Entry by one grantee—Right of other to account—Moiety of profits.]—A man devised a rentcharge of £10 per annum to A. issuable out of B.; with a clause, that if it should be behind, it should be lawful for him to enter, & hold till he was satisfied; & by the same will devised a like rentcharge of £10 per annum to B. issuable out of the same land, with like clause of entry, etc., the land was not of sufficient value to answer both the rents; & they were both in arrear, & both devisees had brought several ejectments, & had recovered; & deft. being in possession, the other grantee brought his bill to have an account of the profits, & that one moiety might be applied to satisfy the arrears of his £10 per annum & it was decreed accordingly.—EURE v. EURE (1697), 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 115, pl. 15; 21 E. R. 922.

899. On what terms possession restored—Trustees in possession—Term limited by instrument.]—Where a trustee of a term of years, upon the usual trusts for securing annuities, has taken possession of the estates under the trusts, the ct., although all arrears of the annuities may afterwards be paid will not order possession to be given up to the grantor, except upon such terms as will enable the trustee to resume it, & to receive the rents the moment the annuities are again in arrear.—JENKINS v. Pltf. pleaded that in May, 1806, G., for securing another annuity, & in consideration of £3,000, granted, bargained, sold, & demised the premises in which, etc., to F. for ninety-nine years:—Held: no bar, without alleging entry by F., or that F. elected that the deed should enure by way of bargain & sale.—MILLER v. 901. — By trustees of term—Possession recovered by landlord—Removal of mining plant.]—In 1824, A. leased to B. for twenty-one years, a colliery, with the right of putting up steam engines, etc., etc., for working it, subject to a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent or insolvency. B. erected on the colliery several steam engines affixed in the ordinary way to the soil, & afterwards, in 1827, assigned the colliery, with the engines, implements, etc., in use upon it, to trustees, in trust to permit B. to enjoy them until default in payment of an annuity granted by him; & on such default to take possession, & sell them & pay the arrears. In June, 1829, A. recovered possession of the premises in ejectment brought in pursuance of the proviso for re-entry. In Nov. 1829, the engines & other articles on the colliery were seized under a fi. fa. at the suit of an execution creditor of B.:—Held: the omission of the trustees to take possession on B.'s default in payment of the annuity, did not avoid the assignment.—MINSHALL v. LLOYD (1837), 2 M. & W. 450; Murp. & H. 125; 6 L. J. Ex. 115; 1 Jur. 336; 150 E. R. 834.

902. — Rentcharge by life tenant—Not entitled to apportioned rents—For current quarter.]—A mtgee. who is not in possession is not an assign of the mtgor. within Apportionment Act, 1834 (c. 22), s. 2. M., the tenant for life of real estate, granted to W., in consideration of an antecedent debt of £3,000, a yearly rentcharge of £960, to be issuing out of the estate for a term of one hundred years, if M. should so long live, with powers of entry & distress in the event of the rentcharge falling into arrear; & M. also demised the estate for a term of two hundred years, if he should so long live, to a trustee upon trust for the better securing the rentcharge. M. died when the rentcharge was in arrear, but before W. or the trustee had entered on the estate:—Held: W. was not entitled to be paid the arrears of the rentcharge out of the apportioned part of the rents for the period which elapsed between the quarter-day last preceding M.'s death & the day on which he died.—Re ANGLESEY'S (MARQUIS) ESTATE, PAGET v. 905. Terms to secure annuity—Right of entry not lost—Unless premises mortgaged by grantee of term.]—In an annuity deed, the grantor charged the annuity upon certain lands, & gave to the grantee power to enter & distrain after default of fourteen days after any quarterly payment & if it should be in arrear for twenty-one days, power to enter & hold possession till all arrears were paid. The grantor, for further securing the annuity, with the consent & approbation of the grantee, created a term for ninety-nine years in favour of C. upon trust, to permit the grantor to receive the profits until default in payment of the annuity for thirty days, & upon such default after demand, out of the rents, or by demise sale, lease, or mtge., to raise & pay off the arrears; the surplus rents to be received by the grantors; & on satisfaction or ceasing of the annuity, the term to be void:—Held: notwithstanding this term, the right of entry remained in the grantee of the annuity, & he could bring ejectment. Qu.: whether this would have been so had the right to lease or mtge. been exercised?—*DOE d. (2) A covenant to pay a rentcharge does not bind an assignee of the estate of the covenantor.

This is a covenant by the grantor of the rent, who was seised in fee of the manor. 915. Enforcement—Security of land insufficient.]—A. for £2,100 grants an annuity for his own life of £300 a year to B. & charges it upon an estate represented to be of the clear yearly value of £1,000 & B. agrees, that A. shall be at liberty to redeem the annuity at six months' notice, on payment of the purchase-money, & all arrears. A. suffers the annuity to run greatly in arrear; & the estate turns out to be subject to prior incumbrances, exceeding its annual income. On a bill filed against A. for a specific performance of his covenant to pay this annuity, the ct. decreed accordingly; & held, that B. was not obliged to resort to his remedy at law, or to the insufficient security of the estate.—CARBERY (LORD) v. direct, not being an act of molestation; for the covenant not being personal in that respect, & it not being shown that the act required to be done by deft., was such a necessary act, as that the annuity could not be enjoyed without its being done on his part, & he was consequently under an obligation to give such direction, it was not broken by such refusal.—WARN v. To this declaration deft., being under terms of pleading issuably, pleaded that the indenture was made with the view of charging, & was a charge upon, the rectory, the same being a benefice with a cure of souls, contrary to 13 Eliz. c. 20, & that the indenture & security were made to evade 13 Eliz. c. 20:—Held: the plea was not an issuable one, as it stated no new fact upon which pltf. could go to the jury; & 13 Eliz. c. 20, avoided the charge upon the benefice only, but not the covenant in the deed containing it.—SLOANE v. SUB-SECT. 5.—SALE OR MORTGAGE OF LAND CHARGED.

A. By Order of Court.

(a) Discretion of Court.

920. General rule—Exercise of jurisdiction discretionary.]—When an annuity charged upon the corpus of settled real estate is in arrear the ct. has power to order the arrears to be raised by sale or mtge. of the estate, though the making of such an order is a matter, not of course, but of discretion.—Re TUCKER, TUCKER v. TUCKER, [1893] 2 Ch. 323; 62 L. J. Ch. 442; 69 L. T. 85; 41 W. R. 505; 37 Sol. Jo. 325; 3 R. 436.

The exercise of such jurisdiction is discretionary.—HAMBRO v. HAMBRO, [1894] 2 Ch. 564; 63 L. J. Ch. 627; 70 L. T. 684; 43 W. R. 92; 8 R. 413.

922. Grounds for refusing order—Sale not necessary for other purpose.]—Unless the ct. finds it necessary to make a decree for the sale of the estate for some other purpose, there is no ground whatever for making a direction that the amount of those arrears, which, it is true, are now ascertained, but which will be liable, very probably, in the course of a succession of years, to fluctuate, shall be raised in the manner proposed (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—GRAVES v. HICKS (1841), 11 Sim. 536; 10 L. J. Ch. 185; 5 Jur. 674.

Subject to the discretion of the ct. the owner of a rentcharge is entitled to an order for sale of the inheritance, but the ct. will refuse to make the order in certain cases, for instance, where a sale is not necessary for any other purpose & it is advisable to wait for a time (BUCKLEY, J.).

Here I find a rentcharge issuing out of land which is secured by a term. There is express power to raise the arrears of a rentcharge by mtge. of the term. Having regard to the term & to what is said in Hall v. Hurt, No. 937, post, I do not see how I can make the order which is asked for (BUCKLEY, J.).—BLACKBURN v. Testator had been dead four years, & the weekly payment had been regularly made during all that period. The widow now asked that its future payment should be secured by the sale of the property & the investment of the proceeds. The estate consisted substantially of a leasehold public-house, & the business carried on there, & the total amount of it, if realised, would not have been equal to the amount of the capitalised value of the annuity:—Held: the property was given to the son absolutely, subject only to the payment of the annuity, & so long as he paid that he was entitled the quiet possession of his property, & the widow was not entitled to have it sold.—Re POTTER, POTTER v. The annuitants are entitled to be paid their arrears out of the rents, accruing due from time to time, & they have that right at law, notwithstanding the tenant for life may have received the rents applicable to the payment of the annuities & may not have kept them down. . . . It is next contended, that the persons who have that legal right, are, in addition entitled to come & ask a ct. of equity for a sale & mtge. to satisfy these

938. —]—When testator bequeaths legacies & annuities, & then gives the residue of his property, after payment of his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, legacies & annuities, the annuitants are not entitled as a matter of right to have the estate converted, & a sum sufficient to answer the annuity invested in such securities as the ct. would approve for the investment of funds under its control; but they are entitled to have the annuities sufficiently secured, for instance, by a mtge. of real estate of testator.

Testator, after bequeathing £100 to each of his two exors., directed his exors. to pay to his father & his sisters life annuities amounting together to £700, & he declared that the residue of his property, after payment of his debts & funeral & testamentary expenses, & the legacies & annuities thereinbefore directed to be paid, should be divided amongst his next of kin & heiresses, as though he had died intestate with respect thereto. Testator's estate consisted mainly of two freehold theatres & two leasehold theatres. The freehold theatres were respectively let on lease, at rents respectively of £700 & £1,317, & produced respectively, after deducting outgoings, net incomes of £629 & £888. Testator was the original lessee of the leasehold theatres at the respective rents of £750 & £25, for the respective terms of eighty years & seventy-one years. Of the eighty years nine years had expired, & of the seventy-one years twenty-six years had expired. Both these theatres were underlet at largely improved rents, & they respectively produced net profit incomes of £2,109

& £186. Each of the leasehold theatres, & one of the freehold theatres, was subject to a mtge., the mtge. debts together amounting to £12,500. Testator's debts, other than the mtge. debts on the theatres, & his funeral & testamentary expenses & pecuniary legacies had been all paid out of his personal estate, & there remained a balance of £2,000 in the hands of the surviving exor. The annuities had been punctually paid since testator's death. The annuitants claimed to be entitled to have the leasehold theatres sold, & the mtge. debts paid out of the proceeds of sale, & that a sufficient sum should then be invested in the mode in which cash under the control of the ct. would be invested, to provide for the payment of the annuities. The residuary legatees proposed that the exors. should raise by mtge. of one of the leasehold theatres such a sum, as with the £2,000 in the exors.' hands, would be sufficient to discharge testator's mtge. debts, & that the annuities should be secured by a first mtge. on the two freehold theatres, the charge of the annuities on the residue of testator's estate, subject to the new mtge. to be created, remaining undisturbed, with liberty to the annuitants to apply to the ct. for additional or other security, in case the annuities or any of them, should fall into arrear; & that, after payment of the interest on the new mtge. & the annuities, the residue of the income of the estate should be divided between the residuary legatees:—Held: the annuitants were not entitled to have the leasehold theatres sold, but, the estate having been cleared by the payment of testator's debts, & funeral & testamentary expenses, the annuitants were only entitled to have the annuities sufficiently secured, & the proposed security would be sufficient.—*Re PARRY, SCOTT v. Testator also gave a second estate to J. upon trust to pay testator's wife £28 a year for life, & after her decease he gave this estate absolutely to J.; & he declared, that if J. should neglect or refuse to pay the annuities from either of the said estates when they became due, that his wife should have power of selling the estates, & to appropriate the money to her own use. The rents being insufficient to pay the annuities:—Held: the widow had a right to sell unless J. paid the full amount of the annuities, but he was not personally bound

946. Application of proceeds of sale—Costs of trustees.]—The grantor of an annuity which was the third incumbrance on his real estates, executed a trust deed, to which the annuitant was not a party, whereby the estates were conveyed to trustees on trusts for sale to discharge the incumbrances according to their priorities; & the first trust of that deed was to pay the costs of the trustees in the conduct of the sale. After the execution of the trust deed the trustees applied to the annuitant for his consent to the sale. In answer to that application the solrs. of the annuitant offered to facilitate the sale, but asked for a copy of the trust deed; adding, "When we have seen the deed we shall be better able to inform you whether our clients will have any difficulty in joining in the conveyances" & in answer to a subsequent application, they assented to the appropriation of a part of the rents towards rendering the property more eligible for sale. Part of the property was sold, the annuitant concurring in the sale, whereby a sufficient sum was realised to pay the prior incumbrances; but it being apprehended that the residue of the property would not realise enough to pay both the costs of the trustees & to redeem the annuity the trustees applied to the annuitant for leave to retain in the first place out of the future proceeds of sale, a sum sufficient to pay their costs. This being refused & a bill being filed to compel the annuitant to join in the conveyances:—Held: in the circumstances, he was not bound to do so, except upon the terms of having the annuity redeemed.—*CROSSE v. 959. Mortgagees of undivided shares—By demise of term.—Testator devised lands in fee, after the determination of certain life estates, to A., B. & C. as tenants in common, subject to & charged with the payment of £200, which he thereby bequeathed to & to be equally divided among the children of his niece. A. & B., during the life of one of the tenants for life, granted their reversion in two undivided third parts of the lands, to mtgees. for 500 years :—Held : an action of debt could not be maintained against the tennors for a share of the £200 so bequeathed.—BRAITHWAITE v. SKINNER (1839), 5 M. & W. 313 ; 8 L. J. Ex. 240 ; 3 Jur. 1054.

Assignee of land—Portion of land charged.—Where a portion of lands that are charged with the payment of a rentcharge is assigned to a purchaser, an action at law for the recovery of the arrears of the rentcharge is maintainable against the assignee of such portion, whether the charge was created by deed or by will.—*BOOTH v. 963. Liquidator.—An order having been made for the winding up of an unregistered co. under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), directed under sect. 203 of the Act that certain land which was vested in trustees for the co., subject to a rentcharge should vest in the official liquidators, appointed for the purposes of the winding up by their official name. Pftfs., the owners of the rentcharge upon such land, sued the liquidators in their personal capacity to recover arrears of the rentcharge from them as terre-tenants :—Held : such action ought to be stayed as being manifestly groundless.

The property is vested in him [the liquidator] by the order of the ct. & he does not seem to have any election in the matter ; & therefore he cannot be personally liable on the ground that he has made an election (ESHER, M.R.).—*GRAHAM v. 964. After repudiation.—An unregistered co. were mtgees. in possession of land subject to a rentcharge created by deed. The co. was wound up under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 203, & the liquidators for some time paid the rentcharge. Then, finding that the annual value of the property was not equal to the rentcharge, they obtained leave from the ct. to get rid of the land, & gave notice to the tenant in occupation of the land & to the owner of the rentcharge that they repudiated the land. The owner of the rentcharge claimed to prove in the winding-up for arrears which had accrued since the repudiation :—Held : the co.

were only liable so long as they were owners of the land; the liquidators had sufficiently repudiated the ownership of the land, & no subsequent claim could be made for the rentcharge.

Another point put to the ct. was that the covenant to pay the rentcharge run with the land. The decision in Thomas v. Sylvester, No. 948, ante, is against that contention: for there the judges evidently did not think that the covenant ran with the land, for they decided the case upon the question whether the owner of the rentcharge could sue the assignee as terre-tenant in an action for debt (COTTON, L.J.).—*Re BLACKBURN & DISTRICT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. 966. Tenant for years.—A tenant for years is not liable in an action of debt for non-payment of a rentcharge issuing out of the land of which he is in occupation nor in the case of a rentcharge created for charitable purposes is he liable in an action in the Ch. 967. Highway authority.—For more than one hundred years a fee farm rent had been paid to certain charity trustees in respect of a piece of land acquired for the widening of a turnpike road & since forming part of the road, but no conveyance to the turnpike trustees was forthcoming. The rentcharge was paid, first, by the turnpike trustees, who had statutory power to buy land for widening the roads under their control, & on the expiration of the turnpike trust in 1871 by virtue of 33 & 34 Vict. c. 73, by deft. corp., in whom as the highway authority the road had become vested under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63). The corp. having refused to make any further payments, the charity trustees brought an action against them in the county ct. for arrears of the rentcharge:—Held: the ct. ought to presume that the land had been granted to the turnpike trustees as land subject to a perpetual rentcharge, & deft. corp. were liable as terre-tenants for the payment of the rentcharge.—FOLEY'S CHARITY TRUSTEES v. DUDLEY CORPN., [1910] 1 K. B. 317; 79 L. J. K. B. 410; 102 L. T. 1; 74 J. P. 41; 8 L. G. R. 320, C. A.

968. Freeholder with immediate right to possession.—A mtgee. in fee of land which is subject to a rentcharge is personally liable to pay the rentcharge although he has never been in possession.

The daughter died before the mother; & the owner of the house subject to the annuity, paid the annuity to the mother for several years after the daughter's death, & then sold the house without notice of the charge to the purchaser. Thereupon the mother filed a plaint in the county ct. against the owner, seeking to obtain a provision for the annuity out of the purchase-money:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the will pltf. was entitled to the annuity; (2) she had a right to confirm the sale of the house, & was entitled to be indemnified out of the purchase-money.—*WILLIAMS v. 978. Lien on title deeds—Deposited as security.]—RICHARDS v. BORRETT, No. 17, ante.

979. Corpus & arrears—No distinction between remedies.]—(1) Arrears of an annuity chargeable by deed, a marriage settlement, on land, or a rentcharge, held to be recoverable by bill in equity filed by the personal representative of the grantee against the son of the grantor, the devisee of the estate, although powers of entry & distress, & a right to pernaney of the rents, issues, & profits, in satisfaction of the annuity when in arrear, were expressly given & reserved to the grantee by the deed; & although the right to those remedies may have devolved on the representative, or he might have other legal remedies, by statute or otherwise, on the principle that the proceeding in equity may be the better & safer course; or may be more effectual & comprehensive than the remedies at law; or that there may be difficulties surrounding the legal remedy which the equitable course might obviate, in aid & furtherance of the proceedings at law; or that the ct. of equity might give further & more satisfactory relief, which it would be beyond the jurisdiction of a ct. of law to provide for. All these considerations afford ground sufficient to justify applications to cts. of equity by bill for relief, where & notwithstanding pltf. may possibly have concurrent, but not commensurate remedies at law. It is competent to pltf. in such a bill to pray that the ct. will decree the amount of the arrears claimed & found due, to be raised by sale or mtge. of the estate; as cts. of equity have jurisdiction to decree estates with such incumbrances to be sold or mortgaged to satisfy them, where necessary.

(2) A charge on land created by deed cannot be discharged but by deed, or at least, semble, by some formal act of release. Parol refusal to accept payment on the part of the grantee, is not such a sufficient indication of evidence even of an intention to disclaim the subject-matter, or acquit the party even in equity, as to support a defence on that ground against a demand set up by a personal representative.

(3) A gross sum, the arrears of an annuity chargeable on land, is a debt, of the same nature as the annuity itself, & capable of the same remedies for the recovery of it; although the sum claimed for such arrears be due to the representative of the grantee, & claimed as such by the suit in equity.—*CUPIT v. 980. Execution—Amount recoverable—When sums advanced by receiver.]—Where an agent who had negotiated an annuity between the grantor & grantee, & was appointed receiver of the rents of the estate on which it was charged advanced money to the grantee in anticipation of the receipt of arrears, receiving from the grantor, on the money thus advanced, the usual & ordinary commission of 2½ per cent. on annuity payments; but no assignment of the arrears was taken, nor was any stipulation made for the payment of interest:—

Held: such advances must be considered as payments made in liquidation of the arrears of the annuity; & notwithstanding the estates proved insufficient to pay the annuity, or reimburse the agent the money he had advanced, the grantee could not issue execution for more than was due, after deducting the money received from the agent.—*CARROLL v. Afterwards T. demised to deft. for sixty years. Before the sixty years expired, the £55, rent being in arrear, C. brought ejectment, & T. defended as landlord. C. recovered; & deft., to prevent a writ of possession being executed, attorned to C., & thenceforward paid rent to him. Afterwards, & during the sixty years' term, deft. was served with notice of an award, reciting a submission to reference by one H. & by T. & C. & that H. was entitled to an annuity, charged on the lands with the usual powers of distress, as trustee, under a grant by T. prior to T.'s demise to C.; & the award adjudged that H.'s rentcharge was in arrear, that H. was entitled to priority over C., & that H. should receive the rents. Deft. then signed a memorandum that he attorned to & became tenant of H.: & afterwards he paid rent to him:—Held: deft., by attorning to C. became tenant to him from year to year, C. having a right to enter & suspend his term of sixty years till C.'s rentcharge was satisfied; & afterwards deft., by attorning to H. upon notice of the award, became tenant to H. from year to year; & H. could maintain ejectment against deft. after giving him six months' notice.—*DOE d. The grantor redeemed the annuity by paying the amount of the purchase-money to R., who, without express authority from the grantee, delivered the deed to grantor to be cancelled. R. having absconded without paying the grantee, & the grantee having sued grantor for arrears:—Held: he was entitled to call for an inspection of the deed.—DEVENOG (OR DEVERNER v. There followed covenants by A., B. for himself & his wife, & C., severally, for quiet enjoyment, & for executing an assignment to F. when required. The deed was signed & sealed by D., E. & C., & by F., but not by A. or B. In an action brought by A. & B. after the death of C. for breach of the covenant to pay the annuity:—Held: (1) the omission of A. & B. to execute the deed did not disable them from suing upon it; such omission did not amount to a total failure of consideration for the covenant sued upon, supposing such total failure to be an answer to the action, & the covenant to pay the annuity, & those for quiet enjoyment & for assigning, were not mutual & dependent; (2) at least after C.'s death, A. & B. might sue D.'s exors., D. & E. being also dead, for non-payment of the annuity, though the covenant for such payment was entered into both by & to C.—ROSE v. the sum of £15 being one moiety of the annuity, unto L. his exors., etc., & the sum of £15 the remaining moiety, unto B. his exors., etc., to be respectively paid quarterly. The powers for better securing the payment of the annuity contained in the deed were all given to L. & B. jointly, & the deed also contained a joint power of attorney to them to enter up a joint judgment; & a joint power was granted to them to dispose of the reversion of a close of land, with a joint power of attorney to sell certain stock; & the annuity was redeemable, on seven days' notice in writing being given, by the payment to L. & B. of the sum of £307 10s. & all arrears of the annuity. In an action brought by L. against T. to recover arrears of the annuity:—Held: the covenant was a joint covenant, & the interest in the annuity was joint, & L. could not sue alone.—*LANE v. 996. Enforcement against agent.]—Where consignments have been made from abroad to answer an annuity which the owner of the property consigned is liable to pay & a consignee in England gives notice of the arrangement to the annuitant & makes payments in pursuance of it, the consignee is not afterwards at liberty to discontinue such payments so long as he has any proceeds of the consignments in his hands. The circumstances of such a transaction constitute an implied trust which the ct. will enforce against the consignee for the benefit of the annuitant.—FITZGERALD v.

997. —.]—Pltf. being entitled to an annuity of £300 charged upon plantations in the West Indies, belonging to K., entered, as agent for K., into an agreement with D., by which D. in consideration of having the produce consigned to him until his advances were satisfied, was to ship supplies to the plantations, & honour bills drawn upon him D. by K. for the expenses of management, & also to pay pltf.'s annuity. The consignments were made, & D. paid pltf.'s annuity for one year, & then discontinued the payment, although he received subsequent consignments. The bill prayed that D. might be ordered to pay the annuity so long as he continued to receive the consignments:—Held: on demurrer, without deciding whether pltf. could sustain a suit to enforce the agreement as against D., D. could not, after the payment of the annuity which he had made under the contract, withhold from pltf. the benefit of the contract for the further payment of the annuity.—*KIRWAN v. 998. Specific performance.]—Specific performance of an agreement to grant a personal annuity, & to provide a house of a certain value for a party to live in, will be decreed in equity.

A. for certain considerations mentioned in a deed & also for other considerations not inconsistent with the former, agreed to grant to B. an annuity for his life, & to provide him a house of the value of £10 a year to live in. Upon a bill being filed by B. for specific performance:—Held: the ct. could grant the relief prayed, although no security on land was agreed to be given for the performance of the agreement.—*CLIFFORD v. m. Sale of land to realise charge.]—When A. conveys land to B., in consideration of B.'s agreement to pay an annuity to C., the ct. will, upon default in payment, declare the annuity to be a charge upon the land, although

SUB-SECT. 2.—PRACTICE.

1001. Presumption of death of annuitant.]—A sum of money was set apart in 1815 to answer an annuity to a woman then supposed to be resident in India but who was never afterwards heard of. In 1837 the master having certified upon presumption that she was dead but without finding when she died the ct. ordered payment of the principal money to the party entitled to it subject to the annuity. In 1842 the master having certified upon presumption that she died in 1822 & that no personal representative had been heard of the ct. ordered immediate payment to the same party of the accumulations since that time, & in 1847 it ordered payment of the rest of the fund to the same party though resident abroad upon his giving personal security to refund in case the annuitant or her personal representative should ever establish a claim.—CUTHBERT v. PURRIER (1847), 2 Ph. 199; 41 E. R. 918, L. C.

1002. Proof of continuance of life of annuitant—Jurisdiction of court to order—On originating summons.]—The ct. has no jurisdiction on an originating summons, under R. S. C., Ord. 54A, to declare what evidence ought to be furnished to a person, who has covenanted by deed to pay an annuity, is entitled to have produced as to the continuance of the life of the annuitant.—HUNT v. MAW (1907), 52 Sol. Jo. 58, C. A.

1003. — Form of master's certificate.]—It is not for a master, on an inquiry before him whether an annuitant is living or dead, either to presume the death or to state that there is no evidence before him to show whether the annuitant is living or dead. His certificate should take the form of finding that the only evidence on the point before him is the evidence mentioned in the certificate & submitting to the ct. the question whether the annuitant ought to be presumed to be living or dead, & if dead, on what date the death ought to be presumed to have taken place.—Re LONG, MEDLICOTT v. LONG (1915), 60 Sol. Jo. 59.

See, generally, EQUITY, Vol. XX., pp. 524–541.

1004. What amounts to—Acceptance of smaller sum.]—MILLS v. DREWITT, No. 426, ante.

1005. — — —.]—By a separation deed the husband covenanted to pay £1,000 to a trustee upon trust to pay the income thereof to the wife for her separate use without power of anticipation, & to pay him a further annual sum upon the same trusts. Afterwards the husband sued for a divorce. The proceedings were compromised by a deed whereby the wife & the trustee purported to release the husband from his covenant to pay the further annual sum, & the wife & a surety jointly & severally covenanted with the husband that she or any person on her behalf would not commence proceedings for compelling the husband to allow her any support, maintenance, alimony, or additional income other than the income of the £1,000. The wife lived ten years after the execution of the deed, & on each successive quarter day she received from the trustee a cheque for £10 representing the income of the £1,000 & made no claim for any additional sum. The £1,000 was not in fact invested, & the quarterly payments of £10 were found by the husband. The wife made a will directing payment of her debts & giving all her property to an adopted daughter. The legal personal representative of the wife brought this action against the husband & the trustee for the arrears of the annuity. The husband counter-claimed for damages for breach of the wife's covenant in the deed of release:—Held: the release of the husband's covenant being admittedly void, the conduct of the wife accepting the trustee's cheque for a smaller sum than was due did not amount either to accord & satisfaction or to such acquiescence as would prevent the wife from bringing a claim for the arrears. Her legal representative was therefore entitled to succeed in the action.—SPRANGE v. LEE, [1908] 1 Ch. 424; 77 L. J. Ch. 274; 98 L. T. 400, C. A.

1006. — Failure to enforce payment.]—An annuitant is not guilty of such laches as would disentitle her to recover arrears of her annuity merely on the ground that she has not actively enforced the performance of the duty of the trustees to pay her such annuity regularly.—Re RIX, RIX v. RIX (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 573.

t. — Mortgagees of land—Subsequent to will creating charge.]—In an action for arrears of an annuity & to declare the same a charge on land, mtgees. of the land whose mtge. was subsequent to the will creating the charge & subject to the terms of it, were made defts. by the writ of summons.

with costs.—NELSON v. COCHRANE (1889), 13 P. R. 76.—CAN.

a. — Sequestrators in possession of benefice.]—Sequestrators in possession of a benefice, who have been appointed merely to pay curates, etc., are not necessary parties to an annuitant's bill whose annuity is charged on the benefice.—STANNUS v. ROBINSON (1837), 2 Jo. Ex. Ir. 498.—IR.

b. Sufficiency of issues.]—In debt by exor. on an annuity bond made by deft. to testator, & payable during the lifetime of testator:—Held: the issues tendered by the replications were sufficient, & the allegations in the pleadings, set out in the case, were sufficient to warrant the assessment of damages.—SMITH v. MUIRHEAD (1852), 13 U. C. R. 9.—CAN.

c. Restraint of vicar—Until answer filed—To bill for arrears against him.]—A vicar having granted an annuity charged on his benefice, & being entitled to compensation for tithe arrears under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 100, may be restrained from receiving them until answer has been filed to a bill filed against him to raise the arrears of the annuity.—STANNUS v. ROBINSON (1834), Hayes & Jo. 622.—IR.

& profit, the estate being inadequate to the payment of the charges upon it.—FAIRFIELD v. WESTON (1824), 2 Sim. & St. 96; 57 E. R. 282.

1011. ———.]—A plot of land was conveyed to uses to secure a rentcharge, with powers of distress & entry into receipt of the rents & profits if the rentcharge should fall into arrear, & subject thereto, to the use of defts'. predecessors in title. Defts. advertised for sale certain steamboilers & machinery on the property. The owners of the rentcharge applied for an injunction to restrain the sale. The rentcharge was not in arrear:—Held: the owner of a rentcharge is not in the position of a mtgee., & cannot obtain an injunction to restrain waste by the owner of the land out of which the rentcharge issues.—SANDEMAN v. RUSHTON (1891), 61 L. J. Ch. 136; 66 L. T. 180.

1012. Covenant by grantor—What amounts to breach.]—An indenture recited that F. & G. were entitled to a fourth part of a colliery for a term of years; that G. was also entitled, by agreement with A., to a lease of land essential for working the colliery, & held the agreement in trust for himself & F. jointly; that P. had a power of sale upon a moiety of the colliery, for the same term, to secure an annuity, which power he was about to exercise; that F. & G. agreed to purchase the moiety, which was to be discharged from the annuity, & to grant a fresh annuity to P., payable out of the profits accruing from the working the coal, by virtue of the term in the three parts of the colliery, & the agreement. By the same indenture, after such recital, the moiety was assigned & the annuity granted; & F. & G. covenanted severally for themselves, their exors., administrators, & assigns, to pay the annuity, as above, from the profits accruing, after payment of all rates, taxes, etc., & of the rents reserved on the term, or by the agreement; a right of entry on the premises charged, & of mtge. & sale, was given to P. on the annuity being in arrear; & F. & G. covenanted severally for themselves, their heirs, exors., & administrators, not naming assigns, to do nothing whereby the annuity might cease, determine, be impeached, or become void & of no effect, or whereby the lease by which the colliery was originally demised, or the agreement, should be forfeited, or the terms thereby created cease. P. sued in covenant on the indenture, assigning for breaches, (a) that F. & G. took a lease of the land to which G. was entitled under the agreement, in their own names, & not in trust for P., but for other persons, & forfeited & surrendered the agreement, whereby the annuity was impeached, & pltf.'s right over the land, & in the profits which would have accrued, ceased; (b) that under the land subject to the agreement there were veins of coal, the property of A., & that F. & G. took the land at a higher rent, & otherwise on worse terms, than G. was entitled to by the agreement, in order to obtain the last-mentioned coal on better terms than they otherwise could have done, whereby, etc.; (c) that F. and G. afterwards assigned the land, amongst other things, to H., whereby, etc. On general demurrer to the declaration:—Held: the third breach showed that the annuity was impeached; since the land in H.'s hands would not be subject to the powers of entry, mtge., & sale; H.'s interest not being that which the covenantors had under the agreement, & he appearing to come in as a purchaser, nor privy to the covenant, & not estopped by it.—PITT v. WILLIAMS (1830), 5 Ad. & El. 885; 111 E. R. 1402, Ex. Ch.

As to limitations of prerogative as regards taxation, see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 502–504, Nos. 48, 61, 62.

1. The Crown as party to legal proceedings in revenue cases.]—“The Crown” is merely a phrase importing the legal concentration of all the subjects of the realm, whose private rights are injured by delinquents in revenue matters, & they are, in fact, the party who contend with the particular individual (GRAHAM, B.). —A.-G. v. LAMBIRTH (1818), 5 Price, 386; 146 E. R. 641.

SECT. 2.—PARLIAMENT.

2. General rule.]—It is a principle of the British Constitution, inherited in the Constitution of New Zealand, that no money can be taken out of the consolidated fund into which the revenues of the state have been paid, except under a distinct authorisation by Parliament itself; a payment made without that authority is illegal & ultra vires, & the money, if it can be traced, can be recovered by the Govt.

An agreement made in 1913 provided, (inter alia), that the Minister of Railways of New Zealand, representing the Crown, should pay to applts.

PART I. SECT. 2.

21. General rule.]—It is a of the British Constitution, in the Constitution of New Zealand, that no money can be taken out of the consolidated fund into which the revenues of the State have been paid, except under a distinct authorisation by Parliament itself; a payment made without that authority is illegal & ultra vires, & the money, if it can be

£7,500 when appts. granted a lease to B. & co. The making of the agreement had been authorised by an Act of 1912, which empowered the minister, without further appropriation, to pay to appts. out of the Public Works Fund such sum as might be payable in accordance with the agreement. Owing to an alteration in the scheme to which the agreement related, the minister did not require appts. to grant the lease, & it was not granted. Nevertheless the £7,500 was paid by the Minister of Railways to appts. in 1914 out of a vote included in the Public Works Schedule to the Appropriation Act for the year, & the Controller & Auditor-General passed the sum as being so payable:—Held: as the lease had not been granted the payment of the £7,500 was not authorised by the Act of 1912, & it was recoverable by the Govt. & could be deducted from a larger sum admittedly due to appts.—*AUCKLAND HARBOUR BOARD v. 3. Resolution of Committee of Ways & Means — Income tax — Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1890 (c. 8), s. 30—Deduction of tax from dividend before Act passed.]—A resolution of the Committee of the House of Commons for Ways & Means, assenting to income tax at a certain rate for the ensuing financial year, commencing Apr. 6, does not either per se, or after adoption by the House of Commons, authorise the Crown to levy on the subject the tax so assented to, before the tax has been actually imposed by Act of Parliament; nor can the Bank of England, before the tax is so imposed by statute, lawfully deduct any income tax from the dividends payable by the Bank to a stockholder without the assent of the holder.

The effect of above sect. & other statutory provisions, enacted to meet the inconvenience caused by income tax being a temporary tax, when it was intended but not yet enacted that the tax should be imposed for the ensuing financial year, stated & explained.—*BOWLES v. PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A. a. Comptroller-General.]—The Comptroller-General of Customs is an "officer" within Customs Act, 1901–1910, ss. 221, 225.—ZACHARIASSEN v. THE COMMONWEALTH (1917), 24 C. L. R. 166.—AUS.

b. Deputy treasurers.]—Deputy treasurers, appointed under the revenue laws in New Brunswick, are substantive revenue officers of the Crown, although appointed by the Province Treasurer, & the appointment does not terminate with the life of the Province Treasurer of Inland Revenue for the district has a right to conduct the case, though the prosecution is not in his name; & a general authority given to him by the comrs. is sufficient compliance with Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890 (c. 21), s. 27.—R. v. TURNER (1894), 58 J. P. 320, D. C.

B. Privileges.

See Juries Act, 1870 (c. 71), s. 9.

9. Exemption from service on jury—Employee of foreign bank.]—A member of a firm of foreign bankers, which carries on business in London & is employed by the Inland Revenue Comrs. in the collection of income tax, on foreign dividends & is paid by poundage, is not employed by the Inland Revenue Comrs. within Juries Act, 1870 (c. 71), s. 9, & the schedule to that Act, & is not on that ground exempt from jury service.—*Ex p. C. Tenure of Office.

16. Appointment during pleasure of Commissioners—Reduction in rank.]—A supervisor of Inland Revenue was appointed in 1881 to hold office "during the pleasure of the Comrs. of Inland Revenue." By Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890 (c. 21), s. 4 (3), the Comrs. have power to reduce or discharge any such officer as they see cause.

The Comrs. directed the supervisor to collect statistics for the Board of Agriculture. The supervisor refused to comply with the order as being one which did not concern his duties as an official of Inland Revenue. The Comrs. thereupon reduced him in rank. In an action against the Comrs. to recover damages:—Held: no cause of action was shown, & in the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the ct. the action should be stayed.—WORTHINGTON v. ROBINSON (1896), 75 L. T. 446, C. A.

D. Powers and Duties.

(a) In General.

17. Action for nonfeasance.]—A collector of customs, appointed by the Comrs. under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 51, s. 6, to collect duties on articles coming into the kingdom, & on payment, sign bills of entry which, by sect. 18, are a warrant for delivery of such articles to the party paying, is not a mere servant of the Comrs., but a substantive & immediate officer of the Crown; & his functions, as collector, are ministerial. Therefore, he is liable in an action for nonfeasance in the exercise of his office; as for refusing to sign such bill of entry without payment of an excessive duty.—*BARRY v. The brine so pumped up was put by defts. to commercial use. It was impossible to ascertain whence the brine had come or where its saturation had taken place, but as there were no surface subsidences within defts.' land the inference was that the brine did not come from & had not been saturated within the boundaries of defts.' land :—Held : the brine was a "mineral" within Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 20, & the mineral rights duty was therefore payable by defts. on the rental value of the rights so to work the brine.—*A.-G. v. By the custom of the manor the lords & their lessees were entitled to work the minerals without the consent of the copyholder so long as they did not let down or injure the surface. In 1897 resp. "demised" to the colliery co. full power & liberty to work the coal under his land, without leaving any support for the surface, at a rent measured by the quantity of coal raised :—Held : the so called demise was merely a release by resp. of his right to support in consideration of a money payment, & was not a lease of a "right to work minerals" within Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 20 (2).—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. Where the right to work the minerals is the subject of a mining lease, the rental value is the amount of rent paid by the working lessee in the last working year in respect of that right.

(1) The Marquess of Anglesey was the grantor of a mining lease at a yearly rent of £150. In the year ending Sept. 30, 1911, which was the last working year for the purposes of the case, he received from the lessees a sum of £141 5s., being £150 for rent up to Apr. 5, 1911, less £8 15s. deducted by the lessees in respect of income tax :—Held: the amount of rent paid by the working lessees was the sum of £141 5s., & not the sum of £150, & consequently the former & not the latter sum constituted the rental value upon which mineral rights duty was chargeable.

(2) The Duke of Beaufort was the grantor of a mining lease at a yearly rent of £500. In the year ending Sept. 30, 1909, which was the last working year for the purposes of the case, he received from the lessees £356 5s. in respect of three quarters' rent in arrear for the year 1907. Some of the coal worked by the lessees in the foreign mines was brought to bank partly on applt.'s land & partly elsewhere:—Held: under Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 20, in the case of a mineral way leave, mineral rights duty is payable on the amount of rent paid by the working lessee in respect of the way leave whether that relates to minerals which are the property of the person assessed or not, & therefore, mineral rights duty was payable by applt. on the rent received by her from her lessees in respect of the right to convey coal from the foreign mines over her land.*—*SHAWO STOREY v. SUB-SECT. 1.—TO REFEREE.

See, generally, Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), ss. 33, 34.

57. Who may appeal — Remainderman — Settled land—Tenant for life & trustee exercising discretion as to acceptance of provisional valuation.—Under a will certain property, consisting of freehold land divided into numerous plots on which houses had been built & now let on leases for long terms, stood limited to trustees upon trust for E. for life, with remainder to S. in base fee. A number of provisional valuations had been made by the district surveyor under Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), for the purpose of assessing the increment value duty under Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8). S. applied to the trustees to take measures to check the provisional valuations & for that purpose to have valuations made. E. opposed this on the ground of expense. S. then applied to the comrs. as a person interested under Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 27 (5), that he might be supplied with copies of the provisional valuations, & this was promised. He then took out this summons for an order directing the trustees to have valuations made for the purpose of checking the valuations of the district surveyor. The only evidence in support of the application was an affidavit by a surveyor of standing & experience that the valuations under the Act were usually too low. The judge held that on the true construction of Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), the duty of protecting the estate in the matter of these valuations was thrown on the owner, i.e. in the case of settled land, the tenant for life, & not on the trustees. Under Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 39, the trustees if they did interfere could charge their costs on the estate, but the ct. would not direct the trustees to take proceedings except in a case where serious injury was threatened to the estate, & in this case there was no sufficient evidence of any such threatened injury:—Held: in the course of their ordinary duty trustees had to exercise their discretion in such cases; the trustees in the present case had honestly exercised that discretion; & there was no reason why the ct. should interfere with it.—Re KNOLLYS' TRUSTS, SAUNDERS v. HASLAM, [1912] 2 Ch. 357; 81 L. J. Ch. 572; 56 Sol. Jo. 632; sub nom. Re KNOLLYS' SETTLEMENT, SANDERS v. HASLAM, 107 L. T. 335, C. A.

The comrs. made an assessment upon applt. for undeveloped land duty in respect of these plots of land. At the date of the assessment the purchasers were in possession of their respective plots, but not having completed their payments had not received their conveyances. Applt. appealed to a referee against the assessment on the ground that he was not the owner of the plots of land & was, therefore, not liable to pay the duty. The referee by his award declared that applt. was the owner & was liable. 66. What amounts to "landing"—Discharge of goods from one ship to another—Goods not actually on shore.]—A merchant brought eighty weights of bay salt by sea, to a haven in England, & out of the ship sold twenty weights, & discharged them to another ship in which they were transported; but the said twenty weights were never actually put on shore; & for the residue, viz. 60, he agreed for the custom, & put them upon land; & now the doubt was, upon the words of 1 Eliz. c. 11, concerning exportation, viz. sent from the wharf, quay, or other place on the land, & concerning importation, take up, discharge, & lay on land; if in this case the said twenty weights which always were water borne, & never touched the land, ought to pay custom as well inwards as outwards:—Held: in both the cases custom ought to be paid; for the discharging out of the ship upon the sale aforesaid amounts in law to a putting them upon the land, for in the law this is infra corpus comitatus; & if the law shall not be so taken, the King may be defrauded of all his custom; & in this case, forasmuch as no custom was paid, it was resolved that the goods were forfeited, etc.—CUSTOM CASE (1582), 12 Co. Rep. 18; 77 E. R. 1299.

aa. —Proof of value.]—When goods are procured by purchase in the ordinary course of business, & not under any exceptional circumstances, an invoice correctly disclosing the transaction affords the best evidence of the value of such goods for duty. In such a case the cost to him who buys the goods abroad, is, as a general rule, assumed to indicate the market value thereof. It is presumed that he buys at the ordinary market value. It is not the value at the manufactory, or place of production, but the value at the principal markets of the country, i.e. the price there paid by consumers or middlemen to dealers, that should govern. Such value for duty must be ascertained by reference to the fair market value of such or like goods, when sold in like quantity & condition for home consumption in the principal markets of the country, whence they are exported.—VACUUM OIL CO. v. Another count charged him with harbouring & concealing goods which had been illegally unshipped, the duties due thereon not having been first paid or secured. Other counts charged deft. with being concerned in the unshipping of goods prohibited to be imported, & which had been imported into the United Kingdom; & with harbouring goods prohibited to be imported, which had been imported, etc.

It was proved on the trial, that deft., in England, concerted with M. a plan for smuggling tobacco into Ireland; that, in performance of such concerted plan, he took on board his vessel, on the high seas, from a cutter dispatched from Flushing for the purpose, a cargo of tobacco in illegal packages, sailed with it to Neath, in Glamorgan-shire, there took on board a quantity of culm, in order to conceal the tobacco, & sailed thence to Youghal, in Ireland, where he landed the tobacco:—Held: deft. was properly triable in England, as having, in England, assisted & been concerned in an illegal unshipping of prohibited goods within the statute, viz. the transhipment of them from the foreign vessel to his own.—*A.-G. v. 80. Duty of warehouse keeper—To receive goods.]—Where private property is, by the consent of the owner, invested with a public interest or privilege for the benefit of the public, the owner can no longer deal with it as private property only, but must hold it subject to the rights of the public in the exercise of that public interest or privilege conferred for their benefit.

Where the London Dock co., having built warehouses in which wines were deposited, upon payment of such a rent as they & the owners agreed upon afterwards accepted a certificate from the Board of Treasury under 43 Geo. 3, c. 132, whereby it became lawful for the importers to lodge & secure the wines there, without paying the duties for them in the first instance; & it did not appear that there was any other place in the port of London where the importers had a right to bond their wines, though if the exclusive privilege had been extended to a few others, it does not appear that it would have varied the case:—Held: such a monopoly & public interest attaching upon their property; they were bound by law to receive the goods into their warehouses for a reasonable hire & reward. Qu.: whether, having accepted such certificate, they could afterwards repudiate it at pleasure.—*ALLNUTT v. SUB-SECT. 2.—CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS.

See Finance Act, 1925 (c. 36), s. 3.

88. Liability for duty—Meaning of "Cinematograph films"—Whether uncut emulsionised celluloid sheets included.]—The effect of Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 17, is that duty is payable under Finance Act, 1925 (c. 36), s. 3 (1), on films of the width of 9½ millimetres for use in a toy cinematograph.

But emulsionised celluloid sheets in the form of rolls 3 feet 9 inches wide, although when cut & otherwise treated they could be used in a cinematograph, are not necessarily "cinematograph films" within Finance Act, 1925 (c. 36), s. 3 (1), & therefore on importation may not be chargeable with Customs Duty under that enactment.—*PATHE OF FRANCE, LTD. v. She afterwards removed paper in an illegal manner & pledged it, stating that she wished to make up a sum to pay duty with. The husband having been proceeded against for such removal:—Held: her former acts were evidence to be left to the jury to decide whether or not the illegal act was done by his authority.—*A.-G. v. See, now, Finance Act, 1919 (c. 32), s. 6; Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 8.

94. Beer brewed in house below annual value—Brewer residing in house above annual value.—By Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (c. 20), s. 33 (3), if the annual value of the house occupied by a brewer other than a brewer for sale does not exceed £10, the beer brewed by him shall not be charged with duty. Resp. brewed beer, not for sale, in a house occupied by him of an annual value not exceeding £10, & he occupied, as a residence, another house which was of greater annual value than £10:—Held: the exemption from duty did not apply to the beer so brewed.—*TIPPETT v. SUB-SECT. 4.—MANUFACTURERS OF TOBACCO.

See Excise Licences Act, 1825 (c. 81); Excise Act, 1840 (c. 17); Tobacco Act, 1840 (c. 18); Tobacco Act, 1842 (c. 93); Finance Act, 1908 (c. 16).

Prohibited ingredients.—See Tobacco Act, 1842 (c. 93), ss. 1, 2; Manufactured Tobacco Act, 1863 (c. 7), s. 3; Revenue Act, 1867 (c. 90), s. 19; Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1878 (c. 15), s. 25; & Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1879 (c. 21), s. 27.

Liability for excess of moisture or oil.—See Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1887 (c. 15), s. 4;

Finance Act, 1904 (c. 7), s. 3; & Oil in Tobacco Act, 1900 (c. 35), s. 1.

Exemption from dealer's licence.—See Manufactured Tobacco Act, 1863 (c. 7), s. 1; Finance Act, 1896 (c. 28), s. 6, & Finance Act, 1897 (c. 24), s. 8.

95. Liability for excess of moisture—“Any tobacco”—Any quantity not too small to be recognised—Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1887 (c. 15), s. 4.—Two officers of customs & excise visited resps. (who were manufacturers of tobacco) premises & took a sample of tobacco of about 2 ounces from a “cob,” i.e. a small truss weighing about 5 pounds. The “cob” with several others was in a large tub which contained 60 or 70 pounds of tobacco. Each of two portions of this sample when dried at a temperature of 212° Fahrenheit was found to contain 33·7 per cent. of moisture, i.e. 1·7 per cent. in excess of the limit allowed by above Act. The two portions weighed about half an ounce each. The remainder of the sample was not tested. The sample did not in fact fairly represent the bulk of which it was intended to be a sample, & the tobacco in the tub as a whole did not contain more moisture than was allowed by law. The tobacco is ordinarily sold by the retailer by the ounce or half-ounce:—Held: resps. had committed an offence under above sect. in respect of the ounce of tobacco which was found to contain more moisture than was allowed by law, inasmuch as the words “any tobacco” covered any quantity which was not too small to be recognised, or which was large enough to be dealt in by the public.—HALE v. MORRIS & SONS, LTD., [1914] 1 K. B. 313; 83 L. J. K. B. 162; 109 L. T. 875; 78 J. P. 17; 30 T. L. R. 9; 23 Cox, C. C. 666, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 5.—MAKERS OF SACCHARINE.

See Finance Act, 1901 (c. 7), ss. 8, 9; Revenue Act, 1903 (c. 46), s. 2; Finance (No. 2) Act, 1915 (c. 89), s. 7; Finance Act, 1916 (c. 24), Sched. I.

96. What constitutes “manufacture”—Increase of sweetness of saccharine.—Appls. subjected certain “330 saccharine,” i.e. saccharine 330 times as sweet as sugar, to a chemical process, the result of which was that in some cases “550 saccharine,” i.e. saccharine 550 times as sweet as sugar, was produced, in others a mixture sweeter than 330, but not so sweet as 550 saccharine, & in a few cases a mixture less sweet than 330 saccharine:—Held: applts. were not manufacturing saccharine within Finance Act, 1901 (c. 7), so as to be compelled to take out the excise licence required by sect. 9 of that Act & sect. 2 of Revenue Act, 1903 (c. 46), & to obtain from an officer of Inland Revenue a book such as is prescribed by Regulation No. 633 of the Statutory Rules, 1904, inasmuch as the substance applts. dealt with was always saccharine both before & after their treatment of it.—MCCNICOL v. PINCH, [1906] 2 K. B. 352; 75 L. J. K. B. 741; 95 L. T. 530; 70 J. P. 438; 22 T. L. R. 654; 50 Sol. Jo. 576; 21 Cox, C. C. 299, D. C.

97. Necessity for licence—Production of vinegar—For manufacture of blacking.]—A maker of vinegar for sale, whether as vinegar or as blacking, or as any other article not being vinegar properly so called, or pure & applicable to the common uses of vinegar, is liable to the duty of excise & the other provisions of the several statutes relating to the makers & preparers of vinegar for sale. It is not necessary to state in the information that the liquid was preparing for sale; that may be proved.—A.-G. v. GREEN (1817), 4 Price, 224; 146 E. R. 447.

99. Unlicensed appraiser—Recovery of fees.]—Assumpsit for work & labour. Plea: that the work consisted entirely of an appraisement of personal property, which pltf. appraised in expectation of reward, without being licensed as is required by 46 Geo. 3, c. 43, s. 5:—Held: on special demurrer, it was not necessary to allege, with reference to sect. 5, that pltf. exercised the calling or occupation of an appraiser, or that he acted as such, within the intent & meaning of the Act, as the plea used the very words of sect. 4, that “every person who shall value or appraise,” “for or in expectation of any hire,” etc. “or reward” shall be deemed to be an appraiser; nor to negative exceptions either in a subsequent sect. of the same act & the plea was good.—PALK v. FORCE (1848), 12 Q. B. 666; 17 L. J. Q. B. 299; 12 L. T. O. S. 104; 12 Jur. 797; 116 E. R. 1020.

106. Necessity for licence—Isolated sale of plate.]—One, not a general trader in silver plate, who sells a piece of plate in a particular instance for a price above the value of old silver, is not therefore a vendor of plate within 31 Geo. 2, c. 32, s. 6.—*R. v. 108. —Meaning of “bonâ fide traveller”.—Sale of plate on hire-purchase system.]—Applt., a licensed pedlar, was in the sole employ of a London firm of watchmakers & jewellers, for offering their goods on the hire-purchase system within 10 miles of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Applt. was bound not to part with the goods except on hire-purchase agreement to be signed by the hirer. Applt. entered into such an agreement with a customer with respect to a silver watch & chain. The London firm were duly licenced to deal in plate. Applt. was not so licenced, & was convicted of dealing in plate without having a proper licence in that behalf, the justices finding, as a fact, that she was not a bonâ fide traveller:—Held: the decision of the justices was right.—HEPPLE v. BRUMBY (1896), 60 J. P. 792; 13 T. L. R. 38, D. C.

109. —Whether secretary of “watch club” included.]—A watchmaker in London, holding an excise licence to deal in plate at his place of business in London, was the proprietor of a “watch club” in a provincial town. The secretary of the club, a clerk in the town, obtained members from among his fellow employees, receiving from each member a weekly subscription, which he forwarded to the watchmaker. A ballot was held at intervals among the members; the member who was successful at the ballot chose a watch from a catalogue of the watchmaker's goods; the secretary communicated his choice to the watchmaker & received from him a watch, which he handed over to the member. The secretary, who had no excise licence to deal in plate, was paid by the watchmaker a commission upon the amount collected by him:—Held: the secretary of the club was a person soliciting, taking, or receiving orders for an excisable article without having in force a proper excise licence within Inland Revenue Act, 1867 (c. 90), s. 17, & he did not come within the proviso in favour of bonâ fide travellers therein contained.—*KILLICK v. 112. — Profits from sale of non-intoxicants not included—Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 44 (2).—By above Act, for the purposes of sub-sect. 2 the annual license value of licensed premises shall be taken to be the amount by which the annual value of the premises as licensed premises exceeds the annual value which the premises would bear if they were not licensed premises, & “in estimating for that purpose the value as licensed premises of hotels or other premises used for purposes other than the sale of intoxicating liquor, no increased value arising from profits not derived from the sale of intoxicating liquor shall be taken into consideration”:—Held: (1) the ejusdem generis rule of construction did not apply to the words “hotels or other premises used for purposes other than the sale of intoxicating liquor,” & consequently, a public-house which derived part of its profits from the sale of non-intoxicants fell within this provision; (2) the words “increased value” meant only the extra value arising from the profits of the trade in non-intoxicants due to the fact that the trade was carried on on licensed premises, & not the total value arising from the profits of that trade.—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. 123. ——— Use of college arms on note paper by member—Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons.]—Resp., who was a member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons & practised as a veterinary surgeon, used note paper for his business, not private; purposes at the head of which there was a device consisting of the arms of the college stamped in black on a shield stamped in relief, the whole being enclosed in a circular device bearing the words "William Kirk, Veterinary Surgeon." Apart from such device there was nothing on the note paper to indicate that resp. was a member of the college. Resp. did not, but the college did, take out a licence under Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 18, to wear or use armorial bearings. Upon an information against resp. for using armorial bearings without a licence, the magistrate came to the conclusion that resp. only used the device to indicate that he was a veterinary surgeon & a member of the college, & he held that for a member of the college to use the recognised armorial bearings of the college to indicate his membership thereof was not "using" armorial bearings within the meaning of Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), & he dismissed the information:—Held: resp. "used" the armorial bearings within Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 18, & ought to have taken out a licence for that purpose.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. KIRK, [1912] 1 K. B. 345; 81 L. J. K. 126. Motor bicycle.]—A motor bicycle is, within Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4, a "carriage" for which a licence is required, as being a carriage drawn or propelled upon a road by mechanical power.—O'DONOGHUE v. MOON (1904), 90 L. T. 843; 68 J. P. 349; 20 T. L. R. 495; 48 Sol. Jo. 477, D. C.

127. Car on light railway—Light Railways Act, 1896 (c. 48).]—A light railway constructed under an order made under above Act is a "railway" within Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4, which exempts from the licence duty on "carriages" thereby imposed any carriage drawn or propelled upon a railway by steam or electricity or other mechanical power.—A.-G. v. YORKSHIRE WOOLLEN DISTRICT ELECTRIC TRAMWAYS, LTD., [1907] 2 K. B. 991; 77 L. J. K. B. 33; 97 L. T. 343; 71 J. P. 506; 23 T. L. R. 712; 5 L. G. R. 1098.

128. Bath chair propelled by electricity.]—A vehicle used as a bath chair or an ambulance, propelled by electricity with one-quarter horse power, weighing 2½ hundredweight, & travelling at an average speed of about 2 miles an hour, is a motor car within Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36). Consequently the vehicle must be registered under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), & the driver of the vehicle must be licenced.—ELIESON v. PARKER (1917), 117 L. T. 276; 81 J. P. 265; 33 T. L. 139. Calculation of horse power of motor car.]—By Finance Act, 1909–1910 (c. 8), s. 86 (1), the excise duty for carriages payable in respect of a motor car shall be at the rates specified in Part II. of schedule V. to the Act, & by sub-sect. 2, the unit of horse power for the purpose of any rate of duty in schedule V. shall be calculated in accordance with regulations made by the Treasury for the purpose, & Part II. of schedule V. specifies the rates of duty on motor cars according to the horse power. The Treasury having made regulations under sub-sect. 2 of sect. 86 for calculating the horse power:—Held: those regulations are the only standard by which, for the purpose of the rate of duty, the horse power of a motor car is to be calculated, & consequently, if the horse power as so calculated is greater than the actual horse power of the motor car, the duty is payable on the greater horse power as ascertained according to the regulations, although erroneous.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. TURNER (1911), 105 L. T. 380; 75 J. P. 551; 9 L. G. R. 1155; 22 Cox, C. C. 592, D. C.

140. Carriage having four wheels—Tricycle with autowheel attached.]—A tricycle to which an autowheel is attached & by which it is propelled is a carriage having four wheels propelled by mechanical power within the definition contained in Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4 (3), & is therefore liable to excise duty.—HOLLANDS v. WILLIAMSON, [1920] 1 K. B. 716; 89 L. J. K. B. 298; 122 L. T. 291; 83 J. P. 289; 17 L. G. R. 737, D. C.

E. Liability for Penalty.

141. Failure to take out licence within time allowed by Act—Offence charged within period allowed.]—If a person fails to take out a licence within the periods allowed by Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 22, for payment of the duty he can thereafter be summoned & made liable to the penalty imposed by Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 27, for having kept a carriage without a licence on a date within those periods.—SLY v. RANDALL, [1916] 1 K. B. 710; 85 L. J. K. B. 1057; 114 L. T. 560; 80 J. P. 199; 14 L. G. R. 550; 25 Cox, C. C. 321, D. C.

142. Use of vehicle for purpose other than that for which licenced—Roads Act, 1920 (c. 72), s. 8—Occasional user of goods lorry for passengers.]—Applt. took out a licence under Finance Act, 1920 (c. 18), sched. II., para. 6, in respect of a motor lorry. The lorry was usually used for the conveyance of goods, but on the occasion charged was used by applt. as a hackney carriage, the duty payable on its use as a hackney carriage being higher than the rate chargeable in respect of the licence held by him:—Held: the licence held by applt. under Finance Act, 1920 (c. 18), sched. II., para. 6, had not been taken out as for a vehicle to be used solely for a certain purpose within Roads Act, 1920 (c. 72), s. 8 (3), & consequently the penalty therein imposed was not payable by him.—*R. v. The justices dismissed the information against the owner, & being of opinion that having dismissed it as against him, they had no power to convict resp. of aiding & abetting; they also dismissed the information as against resp.:—Held: the language of Roads Act, 1920 (c. 72), s. 8 (3), showed that it was limited to persons holding a licence for a vehicle, & inasmuch as resp. was not the holder of the licence, he was not liable to be convicted.—*MORRIS v. See Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4 (3).

167. What is "waggon, cart or other such vehicle"—Whether "other vehicle" words of eiusdem generis.—In order that a vehicle may be exempt from carriage duty by virtue of Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4 (3), it must be constructed or adapted solely for the conveyance of goods, as well as used solely for the conveyance of goods, though it need not be eiusdem generis with a waggon.

Upon the hearing of an information charging resp. with keeping a carriage without a licence, it was proved that he drove a pony attached to a governess cart. Resp. gave evidence that the vehicle was used solely for the purposes of his business of a wardrobe dealer, & that he never used it for pleasure, but only drove in it to private houses to call for & bring away goods after receiving orders:—Held: the vehicle did not come within the exception to the definition of "carriage," in Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4 (3), of "a waggon, cart, or other such vehicle, which is constructed or adapted for use, & is used, solely for the conveyance of any goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry."—*MOORE v. 194. ———— Waggonette—Specially adapted for purpose of husbandry.]—Resp., a farmer, was summoned under Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 27, for keeping a carriage without a licence. The carriage was an old four-wheeled waggonette; it was adapted to carry six persons & to be drawn by one horse. It had wooden seats along each side with back rests, a driving seat in front, two iron steps at the back & iron steps on each side of the front; it was not upholstered or cushioned, & had a name painted on it. Resp. stated in his evidence that he had never used the carriage as a private carriage or for carrying any passengers except his own workpeople to or from work on his farm; that he had the wheels & springs strengthened & used it for general use on his farm, such as taking farm produce to the railway station, but not for any other purpose. The justices having found that a licence was not required;—Held: the vehicle had been so altered with the object of using it solely for agricultural purposes, there was evidence on which the justices could find, as they must be taken to have found, that the vehicle had been adapted for use solely for the conveyance of goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry, & was therefore within the exemption.—MINTY v. 203. ———— Vehicle capable of use for other purposes.]—(1) In order to bring a vehicle within the exception to the definition of "carriage" in Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4 (3), it must be shown that it was constructed or adapted for use for the conveyance of goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry, not merely that it was capable of being so used. If the real use of a vehicle under ordinary circumstances is for trade or husbandry, the vehicle would not be said to be kept without a licence simply because on a particular day it was being used for the conveyance of persons.

(2) Having regard to the elaborate description of this dogcart, & the way in which it was fitted up, the way in which it was adapted, showing that many of its fittings would in no way be required for the carrying of "goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry" . . . that being the prima facie condition of the trap, the justices ought to have considered it. If resp. was going to rely upon the sole use for taking goods in it, the onus to a certain extent would undoubtedly rest upon him (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—HANWORTH

221. ———.]—Where a cart is used only for the purpose of taking goods to market to be sold, the fact that the persons who are intended to sell the goods at the market are conveyed there in the cart along with the goods will not take away the cart's title to exemption.

If a cart has been constructed with a view to its being used only for the exempted purposes, the mere fact that it is capable of being used for other purposes will not deprive it of the exemption.

I am not altogether clear what the draftsmen of Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), meant by the word “burden,” & I am not going to attempt to define it. But I think that at all events it includes persons who are taken to a market along with goods for the purpose of assisting in setting them there, & who have to bring them back if they are not sold (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.). —COOK v. 296. Grant of certificate—Jurisdiction of justices.]—Resp., the owner of a dog, having applied to the Comrs. of Inland Revenue for a certificate of exemption & been refused, declined to take out a licence, & was summoned before justices. The justices held that the comrs. ought to have granted a certificate of exemption, & if resp. had committed an offence it was in their opinion of so trifling a nature that they would exercise the powers given to them by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 16, & dismiss the information:—Held: the justices had no jurisdiction to review the decision of the comrs. as to granting or withholding a certificate of exemption, & the offence of refusing to take out a dog licence was not an offence of a trifling nature to which Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 16, would apply.—PHILLIPS v. 297. ———.]—A farmer claimed exemption from duty in respect of two dogs which were kept by him solely for use in tending sheep & cattle, one being specially trained to tend sheep & the other to tend cattle. The justices in petty sessions found that only one dog was necessary for appct. & refused their consent to the grant of a certificate of exemption for more than one dog:—Held: the justices had only jurisdiction under Dogs Act, 1906 (c. 32), s. 5 (1), to inquire whether the conditions specified in Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1878 (c. 15), s. 22, applied, namely, whether appct. was a farmer or shepherd, & whether the dogs in respect of which exemption was claimed were kept by him solely for use in tending sheep or cattle, or in the exercise of the calling or occupation of a shepherd, & as those conditions were fulfilled the justices had no power to refuse their consent to exemption for two dogs because they were of opinion that, in the circumstances, only one dog was necessary.—JOHNSON v. WILSON, [1909] 2 K. B. 497; 78 L. J. K. B. 912; 101 L. T. 315; 73 J. P. 396; 25 T. L. R. 663, D. C.

298. Whether conclusive of right to exemption.]—N., a farmer, got an exemption certificate for a sheep dog, & was summoned for not having a licence. At the hearing, the revenue officer proved seeing a trial of the dog as a sheep & cattle dog, & the dog did not obey its master's orders like a cattle dog:—Held: as the exemption certificate was some evidence of a right to exemption, the justices were right in dismissing the information, for the prosecutor had failed to prove that the dog was not a cattle dog.—*JAMES v. On a certain day while resp. was cutting corn with a reaping machine which he was driving in a harvest field on his farm, the dog was seen by a constable to be in the field & to be chasing & catching rabbits that ran from the standing corn as it was being cut, & labourers in the presence & with the knowledge of resp. shouted & urged the dog on to catch the rabbits. Upon an information against resp. for keeping the dog without a licence:—Held: as resp. was not using the dog for catching rabbits, the mere exceptional use of the dog as above described was not a breach of the conditions of the exemption & did not prevent the exemption from applying, & the information was properly dismissed.—*EGAN v. A. Who are "Male Servants."

See Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), ss. 18, 19 (3); Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1876 (c. 16), s. 5.

305. General principle.]—For the purpose of determining whether a male servant is a taxable male servant within Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 19 (3), there is no general trade exemption, & a servant, though employed for trade purposes, may come within Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 19 (3), as a taxable male servant, & would come within it if he were employed for the purposes of trade to render domestic or menial services; but if in the course of trade he is not employed to render such services he is not taxable. The proper test to be applied is not as to the purposes, whether trade purposes or purposes of pleasure, for which the servant is employed, but it is as to the nature of the duties he has to perform, & if his duties are those of a domestic or menial kind & also fall within any of those enumerated in the list in Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 19 (3), then the servant, unless he comes within some of the specified statutory exemptions, is taxable; otherwise he is not.

is brought within the definition of "male servant" in Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 19 (3), does not necessarily render the driver of every motor car a taxable male servant, & the question whether such a driver is taxable or not is to be determined by the same test as in other cases.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. PERRY, [1915] 2 K. B. 193; 84 L. J. K. B. 1518; 113 L. T. 85; 79 J. P. 312; 31 T. L. R. 281; 13 L. G. R. 746; 25 Cox, C. C. 4, D. C.

306. Daily general servant.]—A person employed as a day labourer by an employer in whose service he had been several years, & who was paid monthly for convenience, who worked in the garden & did anything that was required, except on Sundays, is a servant within 52 Geo. 3, c. 93, & to be charged for.—ASS. TAX CASE (No. 1,452) (1841). 5 J. P. 801.

307. Porter—Servant living in lodge.]—Applt. employed a man who resided at a lodge on the estate at a considerable distance from the mansion. He was employed as a common labourer, & his work consisted in supplying the house with wood & water, lighting the stoves, taking up & beating carpets, & carrying articles for the other servants. Applt. also employed another man, who lived in the mansion house, & was solely employed in cleaning, trimming, lighting & repairing the lamps in the mansion:—Held: the former was a "porter" & the latter a "domestic servant" within 52 Geo. 3, c. 93, sched. C., No. 1 —Ass. TAX CASE (No. 1,993) (1846), 11 J. P. 353.

309. Porter at block of flats.]—(1) A male servant was employed as porter at a block of residential flats, which were let to different tenants. His duties were to attend, work, & clean the lifts, to keep the brasswork, staircase, front steps, & back yards clean, to take coals to the various flats, to bring down the dustbins by means of trade lifts from each flat, to attend in the hall & open the doors when necessary, & to call cabs or fetch carriages & carry luggage for the tenants:—Held: the servant was a house porter & therefore a "male servant" within the definition of that term in Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 19 (3), & therefore his employer was liable to pay the duty imposed in respect of him by Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 18.

(2) There is no general exemption from duty contained in Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), in respect of a male servant employed for the purposes of a trade or business.—MARCHANT v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1910] 2 K. B. 379; 79 L. J. K. B. 718; 108 T. M. 937; 54 T. P. 82.

323. Cooks employed in civil service club.—The chief officials of the Board of Education, Home Office, & Local Govt. Board considered it desirable to make some provision for supplying the officials employed in these departments with luncheon, & for that purpose a portion of the building was set apart for the use of members as refreshment rooms. A club was formed & registered as a club, & rules were submitted to & approved by the heads of the offices.

Officials employed in the departments were eligible for membership, no entrance fee or subscription being charged, & a member could introduce a guest. The premises & the heating, etc., were provided by the Govt., & an annual grant of £100 made towards the expenses, but otherwise the expenses & wages were paid out of profits. The management was vested in a committee who engaged & paid the servants, but the servants were not entitled to sick pay or pension from the Govt. & their wages were not paid by the Govt. A number of cooks had been so employed, in respect of whom no licences had been taken out. Upon an information under Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), for keeping these cooks without having licences for them as "male servants":—Held: these cooks were neither servants of the Crown nor servants employed for the purposes of the Crown, & that they were therefore "male servants" in respect of whom licences were necessary.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. 340. — Jobbing gardener.—Resp. employed a man as a gardener or jobbing gardener for four days a week at a certain sum per day. The man worked for another employer in the same capacity on other days of the week when he was not employed by resp., & by his contract with resp., if he could not come himself on any date he could send a qualified substitute, & he could also exchange days to suit the convenience of his other employer. He did not reside in resp.'s house. Upon an information against resp. under Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), for keeping a "male servant" without a licence:—Held: the man so employed as a gardener was not a servant of resp., & was therefore not a "male servant" within Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 19 (3), & no licence was necessary.—*BRADDELL v. When resp.'s trap was washed, H. did it, & he also cleaned the harness & occasionally drove resp. to the railway station. Resp. employed no other groom, but he sometimes harnessed & unharnessed & groomed the pony himself. If H. was present on those occasions he helped. Resp. had taken out no licence for H.:—Held: H. was being employed substantially in the capacity of general servant & partially only in that of groom, resp. being exempted by Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1876 (c. 16), s. 5, from the tax upon male servants imposed by Revenue Act, 1868 (c. 14), ss. 16, 19 (3).—*YELLAND v. The servant lived indoors, & his duty was to clean the carriages & harness & to yoke & unyoke the horses of his employer, who was a farmer & horse breeder. In addition, the servant was engaged in looking after brood mares, cleaning boots, pumping water, bringing in coal, & feeding poultry.

The justices held that the major portion of the employment was attending to horses kept by resp. in connection with his business as a farmer & horse breeder, & dismissed the summons:—Held: the decision of the justices was correct.—*WOLFENDEN v. 358. — How lost—Reservation on sale of goods shipped.—No drawback is due for pepper, unless exported within the year, or prevented by accident. 359. — Performance of condition of bond—Relanding of goods.—Breaches of the common exportation bond were assigned in the replication to a plea of performance on sci. fa., in that deft. had not exported, etc., & that he had unshipped & relanded, etc. It was proved that the goods, spirits, had been, in fact, shipped & carried out to the place of the vessel's destination, that they were not landed there, but were in part used at that place & on the homeward voyage by the master & crew of the vessel, & that the remainder was brought home into the London Docks where it was emptied out of a beer cask, into which it had been drawn off out of the export cask, into the water. There was no evidence of fraud. Qu.: whether not a fair exportation of the spirits, & so far a literal performance of the condition of the bond:—Held: to be an unshipping & relanding in Great Britain, & therefore, so far, a literal breach of the condition, & sufficient to support a verdict obtained by the Crown.—It. v. DIXON (1822), 11 Price, 204; 147 E. R. 448.

360. — Assignment as security for debt—Priority of assignees over debenture-holders.—A brewery co. created debenture stock secured by a trust deed. By that trust deed the co. specifically mortgaged to the trustees certain freehold & leasehold properties & created a general charge on the assets of the co. In the course of business they shipped through shipping agents beer for foreign ports, & became entitled to certain drawbacks provided for by Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (c. 20). Those drawbacks became a debt due from the Crown to the firm of brewers & they were assigned by them to the trustees for their bankers. No notice of this assignment was given to the Crown authorities by the assignees. A receiver for the debenture-holders took possession & gave notice to the Crown authorities having at that time knowledge of the previous assignment to the trustees for the bank:—Held: as the co. had power by their contract with the debenture-holders to deal with the drawbacks, the debenture-holders could not with notice of the assignment obtain priority to the assignees by giving notice to the Crown authorities.—Re IND, COOPE & Co., LTD., FISHER v. THE CO., KNOX v. THE CO., ARNOLD v. THE CO., [1911] 2 Ch. 223; 80 L. J. Ch. 661; 105 L. T. 356; 55 Sol. Jo. 600.

365. Words of exceptions construed liberally.]—A guarantee in writing, for the payment of goods thereafter to be purchased by a third person to a certain amount, is within the exception of 23 Geo. 3, c. 58, "a contract for or relating to the sale of goods" & need not be stamped.

I think that where the subject is to be charged with a duty, the cases in which it is to attach ought to be fairly marked out & we should give a liberal construction to words of exception confining the operation of the duty (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—*WARRINGTON v. 367. —.]—Where a father, seised in fee of an estate, conveyed it to his son by a deed, which recited that he, the father, was minded, & had resolved to give & assure it to his son, as well in consideration of natural love & affection, as also in consideration of the provision which the son had that day made, by his bond, of £1,500 in augmentation of the portions or fortunes of his sisters:—Held: this was not a sale to the son within Probate & Legacy Duties Act, 1808 (c. 149), Sched. title Conveyance, & the conveyance was not subject to the ad valorem stamp duty.

It is a well settled rule of law that every charge upon the subject must be imposed by clear & unambiguous language (BAXLEY, J.).—DENN d. MANIFOLD v. DIAMOND (1825), 4 B. & C. 243; 6 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 328; 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 211; 107 E. R. 1049.

370. Inconvenience caused by decision not considered.]—By an instrument under seal, A. agreed to take & hire of B. certain premises at a certain yearly rent, but no time was fixed for the commencement or determination of the interest. It was also agreed that A. should take at a valuation to be made on a future day, the fixtures, furniture, & stock in trade on the premises. The instrument had a stamp of £1 10s. impressed upon it:—Held: it was only an agreement for a lease, & the stamp was not sufficient. Semble: it should have been a stamp of £1 15s., the instrument being "a deed not otherwise charged" in Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched.

It is said that inconvenience will be produced by such a decision. Without inquiring whether that be so or not it suffices to say that the consequences cannot alter the law (LITTLEDALE, J.).—CLAYTON v. BURTENSHAW (1826), 5 B. & C. 41; 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 800; 108 E. R. 16.

371. Benefit of doubt—To subject not Crown.]—In all revenue cases let the officers of Govt. take care that the legislature is made to speak plain & intelligible language. If the legislature is not made to speak plain & intelligible language, let not individuals suffer, but let the public. I am bound to say, if there is any doubt about these words, the benefit of that doubt should be given to the subject (LORD WYNFORD).—R. v. WINSTANLEY (1831), 1 Cr. & J. 434; 148 E. 372. —.]—(1) By an agreement under seal between the owner & the manager of an hotel,

PART IX. SECT. 2.
a. Canons of construction—Whether operation of statute limited in area.]
—Where the constitution of a State merely empowers the Legislature to make laws for the peace, welfare & good government of the State in all cases, one of the canons of construction to be applied in regard to the Stamp Duties Acts of the State is that unless either by express words or necessary implication such Acts are shown to the manager was until determination of the agreement to carry on the business of hotel proprietor, & to have entire control of the business without interference by the owner; he was to receive the whole of the receipts & profits, & pay all necessary outgoings, & to pay to the owner a fixed sum per week. No period was fixed for the duration of the agreement, which contained powers for its determination by either party in certain events; it was ipso facto to determine on the death of the manager. The agreement was not to operate as a demise to the manager, nor to constitute a partnership between the parties:—Held: the agreement was a security for an indefinite period for a sum of money at weekly periods, & not for an annuity or yearly sum payable by weekly instalments, & was therefore liable to ad valorem duty upon the sum agreed to be paid weekly, & not upon the total amount of such weekly payments for a year.

If the statute is so indefinite & uncertain that it can be treated in two ways & the true construction of it is open to two views, the one most favourable to the Crown & the other to the subject, then the latter construction should be adopted (POLLOCK, B.).—CLIFFORD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1896] 2 Q. B. 187; 65 L. J. Q. B. 582; 74 L. T. 699; 45 W. R. 14; 12 T. L. R. 439, D. C. Annotations:—As to (1) Distd. Lewis v. I. R. Comrs., [1898] 2 Q. 373. Construction dependent on language of legislature.—The law upon the subject of stamps is altogether a matter positivi juris. It involves nothing of principle or of reason, but depends altogether on the language of the legislature (TAUNTON, J.).—MORLEY v. HALL (1834), 2 Dowl. 494.

Annotation:—Refd. Clarke v. Jones (1831), 3 Dowl. 277.

374. No presumption in favour of duty.—(1) A paper, signed by defts., stated, that plfts. agreed to sell to defts. all the two upper veins or beds of coal, describing them by their name & locality, containing by admeasurement 16 acres, at the price or sum of £77 per acre, to be paid as follows: the sum of £100 on the day of the date thereof, & the remainder by equal quarterly payments of £25 each; & it was stipulated, that, if defts. should work more coal than in any year should exceed £100, at the rate of £77 per acre, they should pay for such excess:—Held: the instrument did not require an ad valorem stamp, as upon a conveyance, under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), & a stamp of 35s. was sufficient.

(2) The party, who seeks to bring an instrument within the Stamp Act, must show clearly that it falls within it. . . . We can make no intentions in favour of the liability (per CUR.).—PHILLIPS v. MORRISON (1844), 12 M. & W. 740; 13 L. J. Ex. 212; 3 L. T. O. S. 39; 8 Jur. 343; 152 E. R. 1397.

375. Statute construed in popular sense.—(1) 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, Sched. title Mortgage, imposes on the transfer of a mtge. exceeding £1,400 a fixed duty of £1 15s. Revenue No. 2 Act, 1861 (c. 91), s. 30, enacts that where there are several deeds on the transfer of a mtge. from old to new trustees, if one of the deeds stamped with the duty of £1 15s. it shall be sufficient that the others are stamped with the duty by law chargeable on a duplicate or counterpart, viz. 5s. Revenue No. 2 Act, 1865 (c. 96), s. 17, after reciting that certain duties were imposed on transfers of mtges. by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, enacts that in lieu thereof there shall be charged & paid on every such transfer for every £100 of the amount or value of the principal money or stock already secured by such mtge. thereby transferred or fractional part of £100 the duty of 6d.:—Held: the provisions of Revenue No. 2 Act, 1861 (c. 91), s. 30, were not repealed by the general enactment contained in Revenue No. 2 Act, 1865 (c. 96), s. 17, & therefore trustees were still entitled to the privileges afforded under that sect.

(2) We think that Acts of Parliament imposing stamp duties ought to be construed according to the plain & ordinary meaning of the words used, as it appears from the words themselves & that such an incongruity as this does not authorise a ct. of law to adopt a strained & forced construction in order to avoid it (KELLY, C.B.).—FOLEY (LORD) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 263; 37 L. J. Ex. 109; 18 L. T. 725; 16 W. R. 1055.

376. —[1] A co., duly incorporated under the laws of the United States of America, & having its chief seat of business in New York, invited tenders for bonds of the value of $2,000,000, which were tendered for & purchased by a firm in New York, where the purchase-money was paid, & the bonds handed over, the name of the payee being left blank. The bonds were then sent to England, & advertised for sale there by the agents of the purchasers, who issued prospectuses, letters of allotment, & scrip certificates, & delivered the bonds to purchasers:—Held: the issue of the bonds was completed at New York, when the co. parted with the possession of & control over them, & they were not therefore foreign securities issued in England within Stamp Act, 1871 (c. 4), s. 2, so as to be liable to stamp duty.

(2) As to the construction of the Stamp Act, I think it was very properly urged that the statute is not to be construed according to the strict or technical meaning of the language contained in it, but that it is to be construed in its popular sense: meaning, of course, by the words "popular sense" that sense which people conversant with the subject matter with which the statute is dealing would attribute to it (POLLOCK, B.).—GRENFELL v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1876), 1 Ex. D. 242; 45 L. J. Q. B. 465; 34 L. T. 426; 24 W. R. 582.

377. Right to avoid liability.—A. agreed with B. to apprentice his nephew to him, with a premium of £250 for his board, lodging, & education. But previously to the execution of the deed of apprenticeship, in order to evade the stamp duty, it was agreed that £90 19s. should be the sum appropriated for the education only, & the deed was drawn with the proper stamp for that amount of premium, & notes were given for the remaining £150 for the board & lodging. The deed stated the consideration to be for instruction only:—Held: a sufficient stamp, & not an evasion of the Stamp Act.

The Stamp Act is not intended to fetter the proceedings of parties; & if a party so acts as not to be hit by it, he has a right to do so (ROLFE, B.).—HANKINS v. CLUTTERBUCK (1848), 2 Car. & Kir.

378. —[—(1) Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), Sched. imposes an ad valorem duty upon a "conveyance or transfer on sale of any property." By sect. 70, "the term 'conveyance on sale' includes every instrument, & every decree or order of any ct. or of any comrs., whereby any property upon the sale thereof is legally or equitably transferred to or vested in the purchaser, or any other person on his behalf or by his direction":—Held: an agreement for the sale of lands, buildings, & the goodwill of a business, was not a "conveyance on sale" within the above definition & did not therefore require an ad valorem stamp.

(2) The question is, whether, upon that agreement the stamp duty ought to be an ad valorem stamp upon the purchase-money, or whether the instrument would be sufficiently stamped if the ordinary deed or agreement stamp is placed upon it. Clearly, it must be a deed stamp, because the instrument is a deed under seal & that stamp must be affixed (HAWKINS, J.).

(3) The Crown must make out its right to the duty, & if there be a means of evading the stamp duty, so much the better for those who can evade it. It is no fraud upon the Crown, it is a thing which they are perfectly entitled to do (LORD FISHER, M.R.).—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. ANGUS, SAME v. LEWIS (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 579; 61 L. 379. —[—There is the possibility of the revenue being wronged by an instrument such as this being post-dated, but that did not occur to the framers of the recent statute & they do not provide for it. It requires some positive enactment to meet that evasion: for it is not illegal at common law to evade a stamp duty (BLACKBURN, J.).—EMANUEL v. ROBERTS (1868), as reported in 9 B. & S. 121.

380. — By private Act of Parliament.—The G. ry. co. was incorporated by an Act of Parliament in 1899 with a capital of £2,400,000, & duly paid the duty thereon under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39). The B. ry. co. was incorporated by an Act of 1897 with a capital of £600,000, & duly paid the duty thereon under the Act of 1891. By an Act of 1902 all the powers, rights, privileges, liabilities, & immunities of the G. ry. co. were transferred to the B. ry. co., & the G. ry. co. was dissolved:—Held: by the transfer there was "an increase of the amount of nominal share capital of the B. co. authorised by" the Act of 1902 to the extent of £2,400,000, & the duty thereon must be paid by the B. ry. co., under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39).

SUB-SECT. 1.—PRESUMPTION AS TO STAMPING.

See EVIDENCE, Vol. XXII., pp. 272, 273, Nos. 2571–2580.

381. General rule.—On parol evidence of existence of an indenture, sessions may presume that the indentures were stamped & the duty paid.—R. v. BADBY (1772), 1 Bott, 520.

382. Instrument sufficiently stamped at trial—Admissibility of evidence—Proving absence of stamp when executed.—Although a policy of insurance produced at the trial of an action has a sufficient stamp, evidence will be received that it had no such stamp when it was effected, in which case it is a mere nullity, though stamped afterwards by order of the comrs. of stamps; for this is forbidden by 35 Geo. 3, c. 63, & not authorised by 37 Geo. 3, c. 136, which extends only to such instruments as could before be legally stamped after they were executed.—RODERICK v. HOVIL (1811), 3 Camp. 103; 170 E. R. 1320.

Annotation:—Mentd. Mead v. Davison (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 303.

383. Document thirty years old—Bearing mark of stamp.—Where a deed thirty years old, requiring an ad valorem stamp, bore the mark of having had some stamp upon it, but there was nothing to indicate whether the stamp had been a proper stamp or not, & no evidence was given on the point:—Held: it was to be presumed that the deed had been properly stamped.—DOE d. FRYER v. COOMBE (1842), 3 Q. B. 687; 3 Gal. & Dav. 193; 12 L. J. Q. B. 36; 6 J. P. 687; 6 Jur. 930; 114 E. R. 670.

384. Lost or destroyed instrument.—Where an instrument has been lost, the rule is to presume that it was duly stamped, & the onus of proving the contrary lies upon the party who objects that the lost document was unstamped; but where circumstances are proved which raise a strong presumption that the document was never stamped, the burden of proving it to have been stamped lies on the party adducing secondary evidence of the lost instrument.—SMITH v. HENLEY (1844), 1 Ph. 391; 13 L. J. Ch. 221; 3 L. T. O. S. 49; 8 J. P. 228; 8 Jur. 434; 41 E. R. 680, L. C. Annotation:—Refd. Blair v. Ormond (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 428.

385. Rebuttal of presumption—Onus of proof—Instrument executed by several parties.—Where an agreement between several parties is offered in evidence, & it is objected to on the ground that it is not sufficiently stamped, by reason of the omission of the stamp, proof of that lies on deft., who makes the objection, it being a fact.—WADDINGTON v. In an action on a foreign bill of exchange, the required stamp was upon the bill at the time of the trial, but no evidence was given to show that it was on the bill at the time it was indorsed to pltf.:—Held: it must be presumed to have been so, the
